ON SHORT NOTICE.

Ladies' and Children's Hair Dressing a specialty.

I was reading the other day a description of female beauty in a book published in the seventeenth century. Here it is: "To the absolute forme of a woman's face there goes a faire white forehead, market with no wrinkles or lines, longer than that of man's is, and drawing to a roundness about the temples, that it seems to represent a Turkish bowe inverted, wherein there appears not any tumor or gibbosity, or any cloud, no severity or sadness, but a pleasant, and modest cheerfulness, a face round, pleasant, and elegant to behold. A little mouth, somewhat or scarce opening a small white teeth, somewhat short, even, and in number just twenty-eight, not thin, nor too hard-closed togather; somewhat full lips, corall, imitating vermillion, a little disjoyned, yet so as the teeth are just discovered while shee holds her peace or laugheth not, unmoved; that is such a woman that doth not rest, nor bite, nor suck her lips; these lips thus described add a wonderful grace and dignity to a woman's visage. Neither is the nose to be omitted, the honor and ornament of visage, which represents the outward part of a rose, of a meane size, strait, cleane, with certaine obtuseness acute, but the holes of the nostrils small. A round, smooth pill'd, or smooth chin, the candor where of seems to introduce into the beholder's mind a certaine suspition of a rose colour, but no traict at all, nor any perception of haire to be seen, neither on the lips or chin. A small, short, purple tongue most certainly doth become a woman, which is yet scarce or never seen, the tip scarce appearing while she speaks; the eyebrows ought to be black, subtile, disjoyned, soft, and sweetly arched. Somewhat black eyes, declining to smallnesse, concave, rolling laughing, pleasant, and shining. The bats of the cheeks round altogather void of haires, fleshie, rosie, and resembling the red sunshine apples of autumn. Above these remains the temples, which ought to be no less white than the forehead, and without a suspicion of any bones, yet not swollen or depressed, but in a manner a little scarce; ears graven, somewhat short, soft, and delicate, aspersed with the pelucid color of roses. The whole head rather little than great, more round than a man's, comely, erect, and elevated."—London Truth.

THE latest sensation connected with the Illinois senatorship is that the democrats propose to buy a republican representative, who is to receive five thousand dollars and resign, thus giving the democrats a majority of two in the house and one in joint session. We would be inclined to believe the story were it not for the fact that the dispatch states that the democrats are having some difficulty in raising the funds, and that some of them became so indignant at the scheme that they gave it away to the republicans. It stands to reason that if the democrats can purchase a republican representative for five thousand dollars they will have no trouble in raising the money, and furthermore that it is not natural for any of them to "give it away."—Bee.

QUITE a business is carried on in Washington in the way of selling chips from the Washington monument, with miniature representations of the monument, and Mount Vernon painted on the rough surface. This industry will continue to flourish so long as that Maryland quarry, from which the monument stones came, holds out. It is estimated that enough of these bogus souvenirs have already been sold to build another monument, equal in size to the original.
