TO ALL WHO WRITE FOR IT NOW
It will protect you against the dangers of heat.
Constipation or Decaying Bowels Cause Diarrhea, Cholera, Stomach Trouble and Dyspepsia
Blood Disorders, Skin Eruptions, Bad Complexion, Sun Stroke, Heat Prostration
Diarrhea, Cholera, Bowel Trouble, Etc., are symptoms of Constipation. Constipation means practically dead intestines and poisoned blood. Constipation is most dangerous during hot weather on account of sun strokes—heat delirium—prostration. If you suddenly check dysentery—fatal blood poison may result—a physic weakens and does not remove the cause, makes you worse. Dysentery, Cholera, Bowel Troubles, disappear when Constipation is cured.
Revive and strengthen the intestines or bowels before they decay from inactivity and contact with rotting food. UNTIL MULL'S GRAPE TONIC was put on the American market there was no cure for constipation.
We will now prove to you that MULL'S GRAPE TONIC will protect you against heat prostration and that it cures Constipation, Blood Disorders, Stomach and Bowel Trouble. It acts as food to the blood and intestines, cleanses and strengthens them and ejects the poison and decayed matter. MULL'S GRAPE TONIC is nearly 100 per cent grape which renders it a splendid tonic for the system during hot weather.

Four Facts For Sick Women To Consider

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Has an Unequalled Record of Cures—Mrs. Pinkham's Advice Is Confidential, Free, and Always Helpful

FIRST.—That almost every operation in our hospitals performed upon women becomes necessary through neglect of such symptoms as backache, irregular and painful menstruation, leucorrhoea, displacements of the uterus, pain in the side, burning sensation in the stomach, bearing-down pains, nervousness, dizziness and sleeplessness.

SECOND.—The medicine that holds the record for the largest number of absolute cures of female ills is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It regulates, strengthens and cures diseases of the female organism as nothing else can.

THIRD.—The great volume of unsolicited and grateful testimonials on file at the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., many of which are from time to time published by permission, give absolute evidence of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's advice.

FOURTH.—Every ailing woman in the United States is asked to accept the following invitation. It is free, will bring you health and may save your life.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women.—Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only. From symptoms given, your trouble may be located and the quickest and surest way of recovery advised. Out of the vast volume of experience in treating female ills Mrs. Pinkham probably has the very knowledge that will help your case. Surely, any woman, rich or poor, is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this generous offer of assistance.

If you want to borrow trouble you will always find people willing to lend it without security—but it's otherwise with money.

TWO YEARS OF AGONY.

One Cake of Cuticura Soap and One Box of Cuticura Cured Baby's Awful Humor.
"When my sister was eighteen months old a humor broke out on her shoulders, extending clear across the back. For two years it caused her intense suffering. It would scab over and then crack open and a watery matter ooze from it. Then the scabs would fall off and it would be raw for a time. We had several different doctors and tried everything we could think of, but without effecting a cure. Then we got one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment, which cured her completely and without scar or blemish. (Signed) Lillie Chase Walker, 5 Tremont street, Woodford, Me."

HIS SAD STORY.

The young man sighed heavily. After a few moments he sighed again, but it took a third before his roommate asked him what the trouble seemed to be.

"It don't seem to be," said the young man. "It is. Very much is. There isn't any blooming mistake about it. If it wasn't cold weather I'd go down and look at the lake and try to imagine how it would be to jump in and put an end to it all."

"I never thought you had any show," said his roommate, frankly.

"That's where you had another think coming," said the young man. "I had all the show I needed or I'm away off. I'm not stuck on myself, but I think I know the signs. And didn't you see what I got from her Christmas?"

"Why don't you use it?" asked the roommate. "Or let me."

"I think I see you butting your shock head into that cushion," said the young man. "If I think it's too good for me to use I wouldn't be apt to turn it over to you. She did all that fancy stitching on it herself, Sam."

"So you told me thirty times or so." "Well, it's all over now, that's all. I'm not sure but I ought to send that sofa cushion back."

"Which one was it sent you the sofa cushion, anyway?"

"I give it up," said the roommate.

"I called last night and everything was lovely—particularly she," said the young man. "I had told her that I always loved to see her in white and she was dressed in white, and one of the flowers I had sent her the day before was in her hair. She seemed a little flattered and I noticed that her hand trembled when I took it—or I thought it did. I may have been mistaken, of course. We talked about the usual things, though, for some little time until about 9 o'clock. Then I braced up and went and sat down on the sofa with her. The way she moved her skirts to make room for me was not discouraging.

"Presently I cleared my throat and wondered if it had begun to snow again. She wondered, too, but we did not get up to see. I thought a little and then I said: 'In here, all light and warmth and happiness. Outside, gloom and cold. Soon I will have to leave all this and wander out into the night.'"

"She looked at me shyly and sighed and then smiled—a little nervously, but kindly. I felt that the psychological moment had arrived and cleared my throat again.

"It's always like that when I leave you," I said. "No matter how bright the day may be it seems 'loomy' to me when I am away from you. On the other hand, when I see you the whole universe seems flooded with sunshine."

"I took her unresisting hand. 'Ethel,' I said, 'I wonder if at some time you wouldn't take pity on a forlorn and—'

"She drew her hand away very decidedly. 'Mr. Jithrew,' she said in a cold, hard voice, 'I believe I would feel more comfortable if you took that chair over there. You were talking just now about its being all light and warmth. I think the steam has gone down myself. I'm afraid we won't get any more this time of night.'"

"Well," I said, realizing how I'd queered myself, 'perhaps it's about time I was saying good-night?'"

"Perhaps it is," she said, inhospitably. "So I went."

"What did you talk so like a blithering idiot for?" asked the roommate.

"Oh, it wasn't that," explained the young man. "You see, her name isn't Ethel."—Chicago Daily News.

THE BOY WHO COULD COOK

"When I was a youngster," said a prosperous traveling man on a west-bound train, "I learned my lessons so rapidly that the teacher couldn't keep me busy, so I was generally in mischief in the school room. At home I did not have to study my evening lessons any time at all; and, as my propensity for seeing all that was going on was great, I spent too much time on the street. My mother was a widow but she was a wise woman, who knew that street education does not make even the best kind of boys into the best kind of men.

"One day she took me to a bakeshop and hired me out to the baker to learn the trade in my idle time, before and after school hours. I protested, for it seemed small business to me; but my mother was a firm hand and held me down to her bargain with the baker. So I learned to cook; I soon could make good bread and rolls, first-class cake and pies of all kinds.

"In a few years I was 17 and enlisted for service in the Philippines. My mother did not like the idea much; but my Aunt Mary said: "Oh, let him go; boys want to see the world; he is a lucky boy and will come out all right."

"Well, sir, in the Philippines my trade of baker was the best friend I had, and it made me lots of money, too. All the soldier boys were simply crazy for United States tid-bits and sweetmeats; and I sold easily all the bread, pie and cake that I wanted to make. Apple pie was a great favorite and I made one can of apples fill three pies—a little one always for myself—and I'm now ashamed to confess that it generally was much thicker than the other two. But boys will be boys, especially about apple pies. I was the only boy in our entire company that could cook and I often blessed the sagacity and foresight of my good mother in forcing the knowledge on me.

"What I learned in the baker's shop thus helped me to become one of the most popular boys in the regiment and won me many a privilege and kindly favor during the campaign. But just think of giving a boy a domestic cooking course as a preliminary to a military career!"—Chicago Daily News.

HOOD SCREEN FOR KITCHEN.

It Is Balanced by a Weight Over the Table.

Of course the modern housewife has no use for a screen cover for tables, as she strikes at the root of the evil and wages war on the housefly so ruthlessly that with the aid of the universal screen she is able to keep her house practically free from the summer pest. The restaurant-keeper, butcher, baker, grocer and other proprietors of public and semi-public rooms, owing to the constant traffic, is not so successful in keeping out all flies, and he is accordingly driven to protect himself by other means. It is for just such conditions as these that the screen cover for tables here illustrated was intended. The canopy support for the fly screen is counterbalanced by a weight, through the medium of cords and pulleys, operating in conjunction with the central upright post or support. The collar at the top of the canopy slides up and down this support, making the manipulation of the covers convenient and rapid. The vials or other articles whose attractiveness and salability depend upon their protection from the depredation of flies, are placed under these covers and the canopy lowered. When an article is to be removed the canopy is momentarily lifted, requiring but slight exertion, and then immediately dropped into place. The canopy is divided into sections to add to the convenience, and part of it may be rigidly attached to the table top.

CANOPY FLY SCREEN.

The Marriage Knot.

In India only, of all the countries of the world, is the much-talked-of marriage knot ever actually tied. Among the Brahmans marriage is a matter of purchase, and the would-be bridegroom is liable almost till the last moment to be ousted by a higher bidder; but, if no suitor appears willing to give the father a more valuable present, he leads his daughter to the first to offer himself, saying:
"I have no longer anything to do with you; I give you up to the power of another."

Then the bridegroom laces the tail, the insignia of marriage, round her neck, and secures it with a knot. The tail consists of a piece of ribbon with a gold bead suspended upon it. The knot it is that legally binds the wife to her husband and makes the marriage indissoluble, for Brahmans do not recognize divorce.

A VETERAN OF THE BLACK HAWK, MEXICAN AND THE CIVIL WARS.

CAPT. W. W. JACKSON.

Sufferings Were Protracted and Severe—Tried Every Known Remedy Without Relief—Serious Stomach Trouble Cured by Three Bottles of Peruna

Capt. W. W. Jackson, 705 G St., N. W., Washington, D. C., writes:
"I am eighty-three years old, a veteran of the Black Hawk, Mexican and the Civil Wars. I am by profession a physician, but abandoned the same."

"Some years ago I was seriously affected with catarrh of the stomach. My sufferings were protracted and severe. I tried every known remedy without obtaining relief."

"In desperation I began the use of your Peruna. I began to realize immediate though gradual improvement."

"After the use of three bottles every appearance of my complaint was removed, and I have no hesitation in recommending it as an infallible remedy for that disorder."—W. W. Jackson.
