Persistence of Aged Voters.
Timothy Woodruff was talking to some friends at Republican headquarters the day after the last Presidential election, when some one casually made an observation as to certain returns from Delaware County.

"That's the county," said Mr. Woodruff, "where, they say, the old-time Republicans never die. A friend of mine told me once of the astonishing number of octogenarian voters to be seen in the neighborhood of Phoenix. 'Why,' he remarked, 'there is one old chap there, 98 years old, who voted for Roosevelt, and says he isn't through yet. The fact is there are many other aged Republicans up there who, I honestly believe, will have to be shot if they are to die in time for the resurrection.'"

AWFUL NEURALGIA

Mr. Porter Thought He Should Go Mad But Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Cured Him.

"It seems like a miracle that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills should have cured my neuralgia," said Mr. Porter. "They are certainly a marvelous medicine and I am always glad to recommend them.

"For two years," he continued, "I had suffered almost unendurable pains in my head. They would start over my eyes and shoot upward most frequently, but they often spread over my face, and at times every part of my head and face would be full of agony. Sometimes the pains were so intense that I actually feared they would drive me mad.

"My eyes ached constantly and there was always a burning sensation over my forehead, but the other pains varied, sometimes they were acute, and again they were dull and lingering. I could not sleep. My temper was irritable and I got no pleasure out of life.

"I tried remedy after remedy, but finding no help in any of them, I became a despairing man. Even when I began to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I had no great hope of a cure.

"That was in December of 1903. To my surprise, a change in my condition took place right away. The pains grew less intense and the acute attacks were further apart, as I kept on using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The improvement began with the first box, and when I had used six boxes I stopped. My ears were completely and have lasted ever since."

Mr. Charles H. Porter lives at Raymond, N. H. He is one of many grateful people who have found that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will cure diseases of the nerves that have stubbornly resisted every other remedy tried. Not only neuralgia, but sciatica, partial paralysis and locomotor ataxia yield to them. They are sold by all druggists, or may be obtained directly from the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

Miss Willing (to bereaved husband)—Your late wife and I were such intimate friends, Mr. Lonely, and if it isn't asking too much I would dearly love to have something of hers for a keepsake.

Mr. Lonely—My dear Miss Willing, I should be only too glad to oblige you. How would you like the ring I gave her three years ago?

Miss Willing—Oh, Mr. Lonely! This is so sudden.

Advancing the Farmers' Interests.

Traveling agents and salesmen are now sent from the home offices of the Coca-Cola packers into all South American and Asiatic countries. They are going into every land, no matter what language may be spoken or what money be used. They will exchange their goods for cowries or elephant tusks—anything to sell the product and get something in return convertible into money. It may seem odd to some folks, but traveling men, carrying cases with samples of American meat products, can be seen in the desert of Sahara, the sands of Zanzibar or in Brazil, "where the nuts come from." Great is the enterprise of the Yankee merchant. The greater the market, the greater the price and stability of the price of the product and all that goes to make it in its various stages.

It Wasn't Rye.

Saphead—Bifkins actually had the audacity to call me a donkey this morning.

Miss Caustique—Did you have that suit on then?

Saphead—Yes; but why do you ask?

Miss Caustique—I can't understand how he mistook a clothes-horse for a donkey.

What He Wanted.

"Give me a pair of suspenders," said the funny man, as he entered the clothing store.

"Suspenders!" echoed the astonished clerk.

"Yes; web suspenders," explained the would-be humorist, with a large, open-faced grin.

When Music Hall Artist Was First and Sarah Only Second.

Sarah Bernhardt has told in her memoirs, recently published, about the result of the final examination at the Paris conservatory, says the Pittsburg Dispatch. She was, she says, almost overcome, failing to receive even honorable mention for her performance in tragedy and obtaining only the second prize for her work in comedy. The first prize went to Marie Lloyd, who afterward became a music-hall artist.

Of her chagrin and disappointment on that occasion Mme. Bernhardt writes:

"The tall girl I had pushed went forward, looking graceful and radiant as she arrived on the stage. There were a few protestations, but her beauty, her distinction and her charm won the day with every one, so that Marie Lloyd was heartily applauded. As she passed near me she kissed me affectionately. We were great friends and I liked her very much, but I always considered her a nullity as a pupil. I do not know whether she had received any prize the year before, but no one expected her to have the prize. I was simply petrified with amazement. 'Second prize for comedy, Mademoiselle Bernhardt!' I had not heard, but I was pushed on the stage, and while I was bowing I could see hundreds of Marie Lloyd's dancing about in front of me. Some of them made grimaces at me; others threw kisses; some of them were fanning themselves, others were bowing; they were all very tall,

If you have cream to separate a good Cream Separator is the most profitable investment you can possibly make. Delay means daily waste of time, labor and product.

NEAR NATURE.

"You didn't put an egg in the coffee," said the man in the brown duck trousers, looking discontentedly into his tin cup. "It's liquid mud, that's what it is, and nothing else."

"Suppose you try it again next meal," suggested the camper in disordered flannels. "This is coffee, at all events, if it isn't clear as it might be. Your attempt last night would have made a good omelet—for a man who likes coffee omelet. You've buried the bacon, too. I thought you said that you were a good cook."

"I don't put saleratus in the biscuit instead of baking powder, anyway," retorted the other. "I'm cook enough for that, all right."

"Cheese it, my friend," said the man in flannels. "We'll quarrel the first thing you know. Give me a pipeful of tobacco, won't you?"

The man in the duck trousers threw over a paper package. "It's that confounded hay," he grumbled. "I wonder when we'll get a decent smoke again. Do we fish this morning?"

"We do if you'll clean 'em. I'm tired of cleaning fish for you to eat."

"Don't you eat 'em?"

"I suppose I do," said the man in the flannels, gloomily. "It's force of habit, I guess—eating, I mean. What are you taking off your shoes at the breakfast table for? Haven't you any manners?"

"Sand in my shoes."

"What's the use? You can't keep it out. You might as well try to keep the crickets out of the blankets. No news of the washing, I suppose?"

"No chance of it for another week. I halled Pete as he went by this morning. Tried to get him to give up a paper, but he said it was more than his job was worth. Gee! It's going to be another roaster to-day! Did you sleep last night? I don't believe I did."

"Yes, I'm getting a little used to the

A FAMILY MAN.

The pleasant-looking young conductor jumped off the car with alacrity and helped the matronly woman with the baby and folding go-cart to a seat. The woman thanked him with effusion. "I'm afraid that cart's going to be in your way," she said.

"Not at all, marm," replied the conductor, eyeing the cart with some interest. "Them's mighty handy," he remarked.

"I should say they was," said the woman, adjusting her infant's hood and removing some traces of recent cooky from its mouth with her handkerchief. "My land! I don't know how I'd get along without this."

"In a family man myself," said the conductor, with some pride.

"Then you ought to know how a woman's tied to a baby. Wherever she goes the baby's got to go."

"That's what," said the conductor, touching the baby under the chin.

"But they're a great comfort as well as a care. I've raised four of 'em and I'd be kind o' lost without a baby."

"I would myself," said the conductor. "It sounds good to hear 'em yellin' out. Seems like home, don't it?"

"You're different from most o' the men if you like it," said the woman. "My husband likes his children, but he can't stand for it to hear 'em bawling."

"This fellow don't talk yet, does he?" asked the conductor, presently.

"My land, no! He ain't but 14 months old yet. Oh, he says some things, but not real plain, as you may say, to talk. His sister, she talked at 14 months, though little gells generally talk sooner'n boys, they say."

"Mine's a little girl," said the conductor.

"I've got three boys an' a gell, said the woman.

"I've sure got to get one o' them little carts," the conductor declared. "Pick 'em up an' take 'em anywhere, can't you? I've seen lots of 'em, but I never paid no particular attention to 'em before. Put 'em on a street car anywhere."

"It ain't so easy as it might be," said the woman. "All o' the conductors ain't as clever an' accommodatin' as you are. There's a many of 'em won't never offer to help."

"I know how it is myself, you see—being a family man."

"Have you got many?"

"Jest the one, but she's a corker."

"How old is she?"

The conductor pulled out his watch and consulted it carefully. "Well," he said, "she's just 8 hours an' 33 minutes old right now."—Chicago Daily News.

BERNHARDT AND MARIE LLOYD.

all these Marie Lloyds; they were higher than the ceilings; they walked over the people's heads and they came to me, seizing me, stifling me and crushing my heart. My face, it appears, was whiter than my dress."

One of the Literary Crew.

In a Boston club not many years ago a visitor from a Western State, hearing some one mention the Atlantic Monthly, asked if it was a yachting magazine. When the American yacht recently outalled its competitors in the international race from Sandy Hook to the Lizard, an instructor of literature at Harvard had an experience enlightening in regard to the comparative values of literature and sport in undergraduate estimate.

Walking with a Boston editor, he met one of his "star" pupils, upon whom he wished to confer the honor of an introduction to a great light in his own profession.

"Ah, Mr. Smith," he said, hailing the student, "you are just the man I hoped to see. I want you to meet Mr. Blank." Then, for the benefit of the student, he added in an aside, "Mr. Blank, of the Atlantic, you know."

The student beamed enthusiastically. "Oh, I say!" he exclaimed. "I'm glad to meet you, Mr. Blank! Splendid race you fellows made! How did you come it over that Dutchman! But it was all Charlie Barr—wasn't it, now? Who'd ever have heard of the Atlantic if it hadn't been for Charlie Barr?"

Opportunity sometimes waits until a man goes out before knocking at his door.

WORKING WOMEN

Their Hard Struggle Made Easier—Interesting Statements by a Young Lady in Boston and One in Nashville, Tenn.

All women work; some in their homes, some in church, and some in the whirl of society. And in stores, mills and shops tens of thousands are on the never-ceasing treadmill, earning their daily bread.

All are subject to the same physical laws; all suffer alike from the same physical disturbance, and the nature of their duties, in many cases, quickly drifts them into the horrors of all kinds of female complaints, ovarian troubles, ulceration, falling and displacements of the womb, leucorrhoea, or perhaps irregularly or suppression of "monthly periods," causing backache, nervousness, irritability and lassitude.

Women who stand on their feet all day are more susceptible to these troubles than others.

They especially require an invigorating, sustaining medicine which will strengthen the female organism and enable them to bear easily the fatigues of the day, to sleep well at night, and to rise refreshed and cheerful.

How distressing to see a woman struggling to earn a livelihood or perform her household duties when her back and head are aching, she is so tired she can hardly drag about or stand up, and every movement causes pain, the origin of which is due to some derangement of the female organism.
