STEAMER GOES DOWN

PROBABLY 100 LIVES LOST IN THE ENGLISH CHANNEL.

Caught in a Fierce Storm-Vessel Crushed on Reef Off the Jarden Light House-Some of the Lost Were Prominent People.

A London special says: The Southwestern Railway's cross channel steamer Hilda was wrecked Sunday morning off St. Malo, on the north coast of France, and it is believed that 100 or more passengers and crew were drowned. The Hilda left Southampton Friday night for St. Malo with considerably more than 100 souls on board. Her passage was greatly delayed by fog in the channel, and when nearing St. Malo she ran into a severe snow storm, apparently missed her course, and foundered on the rocks off Jarden lighthouse, three miles from St. Malo.

The company's steamer Ada, outward from St. Malo, rescued five passengers and one of the crew. These are now on the way to Southampton.

There is an unconfirmed report that seventy had been saved.

The crew numbered twenty-six, and there were about a hundred passengers, all Frenchmen, the majority being onion dealers from St. Braie and neighborhood. A telegram from St. Servan, adjoining the town of St. Malo, gives the few details available.

The Hilda was near St. Malo Saturday morning. She struck the rocks at 4 o'clock Sunday morning in the roadstead off the island of Cezambre, having missed the tide owing to bad weather and fog. The majority of the crew and passengers were asleep at the time. Two boats were lowered, one of which, con- the finance committee of the Municipal Five Cremated in a New York taining five men, arrived at St. Servan. St. Cart, where thirteen bodies were washed ashore. The top of the Hilda's funnel and her mast are visible at low tide, according to the telegram from St. Servan.

An indictment was returned against them by the federal grand jury in November, 1904, and an additional indictment at the May term of the federal grand jury in 1905. The first indictment charged them with illegally fencing, maintaining and controlling 200,000 acres of public land. Those counts of the indictments charging the defendants as being part owners and agents of certain of the fences described as unlawful were quashed, but were sustained as to such sections of the fences of which they were owners, and also the counts which charged them with wrongfully asserting ownership and exclusive occupancy of the illegally enclosed government lands. BORROW CHECKS TO FORGE

At Nebraska City last Saturday even ing the cashier in Mandelson's depart ment store cashed a check for $25.50 purported to be signed by George W. Yiels but which is said to be a forgery. A stranger entered Mr. Yiel's store last Saturday evening and asked for a blank check. Mr. Yiels tore a check from the back of his check book and handed it to the man who turned to a companion, who was standing in the door, and said, I will give you a check for what I owe vou.

Later in the evening the check for $25.50 made payable to W. B Ebert, was cashed at Meldeson's. The city directory does not show such name as a resident at Nebraska City. The forgery was not discovered until the check was presented for payment at a bank Monday.

It has developed that the men visited several stores and asked for blank checks but did not use any that were given them except the one they secured from Mr. Yiels, which bore his name across the end.

FIND COAL AND GAS.

Farmer Boring a Well Made Valuable Discovery.

A Humboldt dispatch says: Quite a little interest is being manifested in this section over the prospect of finding coal in the southwestern part of the county. There is talk of a stock company being formed to prospect the land of a farmer, who some time ago took from a well he was boring a nice supply of coal at quite a depth. The farmer in question kept the matter quiet for a long time in the hope of getting satisfactory options, on surrounding land, but failing in this he revealed the facts to a neighbor, and the present agitation resulted.

It is claimed the indications point strongly to gas and oil as well as coal, and the parties interested will stop at no expense to determine the extent of the two, three and five of the second indictfind.

The supreme court at Lincoln Saturday held the Dodge primary election law valid and capable of enforcement, though it declared unconstitutional three of its sections. The writ of mandamus asked for by Clerk Adair, nominee of the socialist ticket, to have the socialist nominees placed on the ticket, though nominated by a convention, was refused. The sections declared unconstitutional are these: The one making the primary day the first day of registration; that one requiring 1 per cent of the salary of the office to be paid as a filing fee by the candidate and the one regulating the form of the ballot. The fact that these sections do not render the law as a whole incapable of enforcement does not in the opinion of the court invalidate the entire law, and it is consequently held to be valid and constitutional, The opinion ----written by Chief Justice Holcomb. he holds that the primary law does not affect the general law or any other election law which does not conflict with its provisions, and except in the sections pointed out it does not interfere with existing election laws.

A rumor is current in Lincoln that a gigantic trust or corporation has been formed which has for its object the control of the brick yards of the entire west. It is understood that large eastern interests are in the movement, together with the brick manufacturers of Omaha and probably of Lincoln. It is known to be a fact that many brick yards in Nebraska which are backed by small capital and which have a small output have recently been bought, and in some instances options have been taken on the yards to hold good until the first of the year. One brick yard has closed down, sold its out-"DENVER KID" LEADS BREAK put and is now waiting to be transferred to the new company. Who is in the company and who is financing it cannot be learned at this time, and neither can it be learned who is making the deals for the yards.

BODIES IN STEEL INGOT.

Unique Funeral of Victims of Mill Accident.

A funeral without a parallel in Philadelphia, Pa., took place Sunday at the Midvale Steel works, where a forty-ton ingot of steel, permeated with the flesh, blood and bones of two workmen, was buried with the solemn rites of the Roman Catholic church.

The workmen who were so strangely laid away were John Forkin and Joseph Gazda, two foreign speaking laborers, who met a horrible death a week ago. They were in a pit near a cupola containing many tons of molten steel. A plug gave way and 80,000 pounds of the fiery fluid poured from the cupola and overwhelmed thin. The men were completely incinerated and not a trace of themselves or their clothing was left.

The flames were first noticed at 6 o'clock in the morning on the fourth floor of the building, which was occupied by 330 men. An alarm was raised and the firemen responded quickly, but flames and smoke were then issuing from most of the windows on the fourth floor.

An extraordinary scene was created, a procession of almost naked men rushing put of the entrance, and against their frantic efforts to escape the firemen had actually to fight for admission.

One of the most difficult problems that has confronted the governor's staff has just been solved by an order from the war department. Now, however, the war department has taken up the matter and Thursday an order was received telling just exactly how these things should be worn.
