Another Version of Little Mary.

Some friends of the STAR send us the following clipping, and not knowing from what paper it was proper credit:

Mary had a little lamb, its fleece was white as snow, it strayed away one summer day where lambs should never go. Then Mary set her down, and tears streamed slowly from her eyes; she never found the lamb because she did not advertise.

And so the brokers seized his stock, but still he lingered near; and Mary came to drop with him a sympathetic tear. Home Patrons the Real Benefactors.

It is purely selfish motives that cause people to patronize "mail order" houses. They think they can buy a little cheaper than at home, which as a rule, is not true: but suppose it were true, they are building up outside stores at the expense of their own home merchants. The effect is not noticeable at once, but the home stores and home market must depreciate as the home patronage is withdrawn. taken, we must let it go without If good stores and a home market are not valuable why is it that land is worth several times as much when close to a good town? In this connection it should be noted that the newspaper publishers, with rare exceptions, are loyal to their home and country. Few persons sending away for goods in order to save a few cents know And Mary had a brother John, that every editor can get two or who kept a village store; he sat three times as much for advertising space from the mail order houses as the home merchants the people passed along, and did pay. But the editor looks ahead, he knows that as the home merchants are starved out the need of the mail order houses advertising will decrease.

The merchants are often to blame. An Oklahoma editor was at the depot and saw a farmer get a set of harness from Chicago. He tried to prove to the farmer that he could have bought the Remembering now her own bad harness of a local dealer just as cheap, etc. "But," said the farmer.
