A letter from United tSates Senator Millard, in reply to the telegram sent of Norfolk citizens, was received at Pierce, Madison, Stanton. noon. Senator Millard says that the Omaha was to be included, so that the news dispatch in that paper was foundation for apprehension here. Senator Millard says:

Washington, D. C., Jan. 19, 1907.-Norfolk News, Norfolk, Nebraska, Gentlemen: Your message of last night was received here this morning together with one from Mr. C. E. Burnham, which latter I replied to as follows: "No attempt to do away with feder al court sessions at Norfolk, and any movement to that end would be de feated. Please notify Norfolk News. I assume the reason it has been reported that Norfolk was left out, was the fact that Norfolk, Hastings, Lincoln and Omaha were all left out in this proposed new bill, for the reason that courts are designated at all of those points and it was unnecessary should be included in the report of the newspapers.

It is very questionable whether any thing will be done in regard to the judicial bill other than perhaps an ad ditional judge, but one thing is certain that Norfolk will not be eliminated if any bill does go through.

Yours truly. J. H. Millard.

Her connection in a similar capacity in "The Girl From Dixie," was even more brief. She appeared for a time in "Florodora," and it was then that she first met Thaw. At no time did Miss Nesbit occupy a stage position of any prominence.

Miss Nesbit was one of the party, of which Thaw was also a member, that went abroad in the spring of 1904. It was known then that they were often in each other's company. The gossip about them, however, did not become general until dispatches told of Thaw's arrest while speeding an automobile in Switzerland in company with his 'wife."

Not long after that a story became current that they had been married abroad, and that Thaw's family was so annoyed by the reports that he could hope for no further advances from his father's estate. The story of the marriage was indignantly denied soon afterward by Thaw and Miss Nesbit, when they returned to this country in October, 1904. The pair traveled together and attracted much notoriety from the fact that many hotels refused to receive them unless they would register as "man and wife." When the scandal became unbearable, the couple were summoned to Pittsburg by Mrs. William Thaw, and the next the public heard about the matter was that they were married in that city. Many different stories of events and threats alleged to have brought about the marriage have been told since the tragedy of last June.
