The Thursday evening meeting of the city council failed to materialize for want of a quorum. Those present adjourned until Wednesday evening, April 10, when the routine business of the month will be transacted.

Askes thrown against the rear of the Reed barber shop on Norfolk avenue started a fire yesterday afternoon that prompt discovery prevented from damaging the building. The fire department was called out but their services was not required.

The school situation will be further canvassed at a meeting of the board of education Friday evening in Dr. Cole's office. Architect Eisentrout of Sioux City is expected to meet with the board and give them additional information touching the rebuilding of the high school.

The progress of the new sewer system up First street has encountered an obstacle in front of the pumping station, where the city water main is found to stand squarely in the way of the line of sewer pipe. The city councilmen are puzzling over the complication, the only relief from which seems to be an arch in the water main. It is said that this can be done and still leave the water main some four or five feet under ground at the point of the arch. The recent delay in the sewer construction has been occasioned by failure to receive expected shipments of sewer pipe.

Messrs. Simms and Evans, who are to start a vinegar and pickling factory in Norfolk and who are now selling stock for the plant, have called a public meeting to be held in the office of A. J. Durland Saturday night at 8 o'clock when they hope to present their plans to more business men than have up to date been interested. The promoters say that they can sell all of the stock for this plant outside of Norfolk but they prefer to keep as much of the stock in Norfolk as possible. The Commercial club directors have endorsed this proposition as a good investment.

Not only the regular drop curtains of the Auditorium, but the wings as well, and every last piece of furniture must come off the stage before the mammoth Isle of Spice production can be staged. Theatrical scenery belonging to the local house will be spread outside in the alley in order to allow the big show to get in. And at that, it is said that the cubic volume of the big stage will be taxed to its utmost to accommodate the electrical effects and the special stage arrangements that are needed to properly set off King Bompoka and the chorus of singers and dancers. The company comes from Fremont.

Congressman J. F. Boyd of Neligh, who was in Norfolk yesterday afternoon for the first time since he became a full fledged congressman, has just recently returned from a trip to Washington, where he went to "get on the ropes." While there he met the president, cabinet members and heads of departments. Seats have not yet been assigned for the session of next winter but will be allotted by a drawing to be held when the session begins. Congressman Boyd says that there is as yet little discussion in Washington as to next year's presidential prospects, but he found that Secretary of War Taft was very popular with congressional delegates.

Trainmaster E. O. Mount of the Northwestern railroad has received a note from D. Rees of this city. Mr. Rees tells how people are treated in Great Britain for attempting to cheat a railway company out of carriage. Every person caught attempting to ride free or to escape payment of fare, is arrested and fined and may be imprisoned in jail. Every person thus convicted is given more or less notoriety by the posting of a large bill at every railway station within fifty miles announcing his guilt and conviction. The presentation of a ticket more than one day old is considered an attempt to cheat the railway company out of its proper fare. "In this country trying to cheat a railroad is considered stealing," writes Mr. Rees. "What do you think of that?"

The curtain will ring up on The Isle of Spice at 8:30 o'clock sharp. No one will be seated after the curtain rises, during the first musical numbers. The lecture of State Deputy Superintendent Houck of Pennsylvania was changed from this evening to 4 o'clock this afternoon in order that teachers might be given an opportunity to enjoy the musical comedy if they desired. The Isle of Spice will be the musical comedy event of the season in Norfolk and there is every indication that one of the largest audiences yet seen in the theater will enjoy the rollicking fun of the funny men, the bright and breezy music and songs of the musical artists and chorus, and the lavish electrical effects. The company arrived at noon from Fremont, one car being used for the company of sixty persons and another car for their baggage. The troupe carries its own orchestra in order to handle the special musical numbers and the songs that have made such a hit all over the country. More people from outside towns—including Battle Creek, Meadow Grove, Tilden, Neligh, Pierce, Winside, Hoskins, Stanton, Enola, Warnerville and Madison—will see this production than any other that has been in the house this season. A number of drummers are coming in from the road to see the show. Seats have gone fast, though it is believed there will be enough tickets for all who may wish to purchase at the box office tonight.

PUBLIC MORALS RISING

SENATOR DOLLIVER OF IOWA PLEADS FOR OPTIMISM.

HAS SEEN COUNTRY IMPROVE

Brings to Northern Nebraska Teachers a Message of Hope—Asks That They Instill in Young Minds Whole-some Regard for Government.

North Nebraska teachers were told to instill the spirit of national optimism into the minds of their pupils Thursday evening at the Auditorium. They were told in straight direct language that the government and institutions of America were more firmly planted along right lines today than in the past. It was United States Senator J. P. Dolliver of Iowa, speaking Thursday evening before the North Nebraska Teachers' association, who brought the message of confidence to Norfolk.

"There is one lesson that you Nebraska teachers ought to teach over and over again and it forms the basis of my remarks tonight," said Senator Dolliver. "It is: That our institutions are all right and that American public life is all right and that there is no excuse for despairing as to those institutions or as to their administration by the government. A firm faith in the integrity of our institutions and, on the whole, in the integrity of our national life is necessary if we are to contribute to progress."

Senator Dolliver spoke as a former school teacher to the teachers of today. His speech was a plea for the America of today and he wanted the spirit of hope and confidence breathed in every school house. Mr. Dolliver made a plain direct talk to the teachers. His words were followed closely by the big crowd that filled the Auditorium, his humorous sallies bringing smiles and his telling points applause.

Watched Him Rise.

The speaker of the evening was introduced by Hon. John R. Hays, whose acquaintance with Senator Dolliver dates over a period of many years, during which time the Iowa statesman has been known successively as Mr. Dolliver, Hon. J. P. Dolliver and now Senator Dolliver. Mr. Dolliver said in part:

"I do not believe that ideal moral conditions once flourished in our country but are now lost. I do believe that the standard of morality and the integrity of American public life was never more worthy of the confidence of the American people. It is a 'humbug' proposition that the old standards and the old ways were altogether holy and pure and that we have now fallen into evil ways. We must combat those men anxious to impeach the public morality of their day.

"The truth is that we of today know better what is going on in our country than the people of 1835 did. We even know better what went on in those days than did the people of the time. Private conversation as a method of communicating and discovering facts has given way to an organized press. The dark lantern has been thrown on the standards of those early days with results that will not bear out those who contrast the libels and hearsays of the public life of these days against the moral standards of those far-off days of alleged moral perfection.

Drunk Senators Gone

"I am a humble but willing witness to the gradual rise of moral sentiment in the national capital. Twenty years ago both house and senate had their saloons. Drunken men staggered through the hall of the house and before the bar of the senate. We have lived to see drunkenness practically abolished at the capital and have seen drinking places driven from every public building in the United States.

"The national character of our people is going upward and forward. The whole attitude of the public mind has undergone a radical change. The situation is viewed from a new angle. The moral uplift of the American people finds expression in its congress."

Senator Dolliver said that the questions engaging attention in Washington at this time were not the tariff, money or railroad issues but other questions hitherto neglected but now vitalized by their human connections. The government has been striving to send a million and a half children from the mines and factories to the schools, to protect the interests of the million young men in railroad service, to protect the health of the people from adulterated and poisonous foods, drinks and medicines and to prevent fraudulent and unlawful agreements between railroads and corporations injurious to the welfare of the people.

No Niche For Pessimist.

These things indicated, the senator said, that the government had become responsive to the conscience and will of the people. The signs of the times were encouraging and the cry to the pessimist should be put aside. "You who teach the young should communicate your confidence in the institutions of your country," was Senator Dolliver's message to the teachers. "Our children must not carry the idea that our public life is corrupt or corrupting. They should be taught that public life is an honorable thing. They must not think that the new generations are falling to meet the responsibilities of government." A piano duet rendered by Misses Stewart and De Groot and two vocal solos by W. L. Campbell of Wayne, completed the Thursday evening program and were received with favor.

ENROLLMENT HAS INCREASED.

367 Had Enrolled by Thursday Night, 500 Will be Approached.

Thursday's enrollment in the North Nebraska Teachers' association brought the association membership up to 367. The influx of new teachers today is increasing that membership. By night the association will have passed the 400 mark safely and may approach towards the half thousand mark originally forecasted. But with the enrollment where it is, the officers are satisfied with the attendance, which compares very favorably with other meetings.

The enrollment figures of the present session are actual figures and not estimates. Of the 367 people registered by Thursday evening practically all are bona fide teachers. Less than a score of Norfolk people not in the teaching profession have enrolled to obtain the benefits of association membership but the remaining membership of the association is composed of north Nebraska educators who are spending a happy vacation in Norfolk in a highly profitable way.

Madison county naturally leads in the number of teachers attending the meeting. About 125 registered members of the association sign from Madison county. Madison, the home of President Perdue, is represented by a large delegation of teachers. The first two days registration was distributed among the different counties of the district as follows: Stanton 9; Wayne 23; Dakota 1; Dixon 20; Cedar 27; Pierce 40; Antelope 19; Knox 15; Holt 24; Boyd 24; Platte 18; Cumming 7; Thurston 2; scattering 11.

TEED IS MADE PRESIDENT

NORTH NEBRASKA TEACHERS HONOR PONCA MAN.

MAY COME BACK TO NORFOLK

The Selection of a Place for Meeting Next Year Has Been Left With Executive Committee, and They Favor Returning to Norfolk.

A. V. Teed, Ponca, president, R. M. Campbell, West Point, vice-president, Miss Florence Zink, O'Neill, secretary.

Frank Pilger, Pierce, treasurer. When the North Nebraska Teachers' association convenes next year year association convenes next year in Norfolk, as it undoubtedly will, it will be for a program of even greater merit than the one arranged for the twenty-first annual meeting. To make possible the contemplated improvement in the program the membership fee of the association was raised from 50 cents to $1. The motion to increase the fee raised debate in the Friday morning business meeting, but was carried by a large majority.

At the close of the general Friday morning session at the Auditorium President Perdue called the annual business meeting of the association. The election of officers resulted in the selection of the following educators to manage the business of the association during the coming year: County Superintendent A. V. Teed of Dixon county, president; City Superintendent R. M. Campbell of West Point, vice president; Miss Florence Zink, county superintendent of Holt county, secretary; County Superintendent Frank Pilger of Pierce county, treasurer. These officers constitute the executive committee. Mr. Teed, the new president, was advanced from the office of treasurer and has been a prominent and efficient worker in the association for a number of years.

Favor Norfolk.

The place of holding next year's meeting was left to the executive committee, who, it is understood, will favor Norfolk again. The new executive committee was also instructed to draft a constitution for the association, the constitution to be presented at the next meeting of the north Nebraska teachers.

Superintendent Campbell of West Point, Superintendent Doremus of Madison and Miss Florence Zink of O'Neill were named Friday morning by President Perdue as a special committee to present resolutions for the consideration of the association at the afternoon session.

The teachers' meeting closed with a general session held Friday afternoon in the Methodist auditorium. This session, embracing the lecture by Superintendent Henry Houck of Pennsylvania, was held at 4 p. m., following the afternoon department meetings. Originally scheduled for Friday evening the last general session was advanced to the afternoon in order to accommodate the teachers desirous of attending the production of "The Isle of Spice" and also to afford the teachers leaving the city on the evening trains an opportunity to hear the lecture of the Pennsylvania educator.

He Would be a Teacher.

"Who is going to be the republican nominee for president? If you could answer that question, your newspaper circulation would go sky high. That is what they all ask, but none can answer. Prophecies along that line are merely problematical and a waste of breath. When you find out who will be nominated, let me know."

This was United States Senator Dolliver's way of answering a query that is now being much discussed. He remarked that Nebraska would no doubt have a candidate on the democratic ticket—"Nebraska has a candidate with great staying qualities," said the senator.

Senator Dolliver, in company with his host, John R. Hays, called upon The News just before he took a train for Sioux City. Treasurer Teed of the teachers' association, locating the statesman at The News office, has tened to pay up for the lecture of the night before. Senator Dolliver explained that his late arrival in Norfolk was due to the fact that he had just reached his home in Iowa the night before he was booked for Norfolk. He had quite forgotten his engagement here until Mrs. Dolliver reminded him of the date. "And," said the senator, "she quite insisted upon my filling the engagement."

Senator Dolliver was the guest while here, at the home of his long-time friend, John R. Hays.

Rather be Teacher Than Senator. "Is it true, Senator Dolliver, that you would, if you had it to do over again, keep out of politics?"

"That is the situation," said the statesman of Iowa who has for twenty years represented his state in congressional halls and who has never experienced unpleasantness nor been called on to spend money in the holding of his office.

"I have often said," he continued, "that I should like to have been a teacher. I have been required to refuse the offers of three university presidencies within the past few years. I believe that if I had followed that line of work, I could have performed a great public service without having been forced to run for office."

His objection to being a senator, Senator Dolliver said, lies in the fact that a man works forever and never gets anywhere.

Thank Their Friends.

In consideration of the kindness and good will of our democratic and republican friends who gave us their votes at the recent election, we wish to express to them all our sincere appreciation.

J. E. Haase, City Treasurer.
E. B. Kauffman, Second Ward Councilman.
