

LOCAL KEYS ARE CLICKING

NORFOLK FEELS LITTLE TROUBLE FROM THE STRIKE.

COMPARED WITH MANY CITIES

Messages of All Sorts Are Being Received at the Local Office of the Western Union Each Day, Despite the Paralysis.

(From Tuesday's Daily.)

Norfolk is getting along in the communication business in view of the existing wire strike just about as comfortably as any town in the country and another advantage of living in a small city is being brought to the minds of local people. Not the slightest echo of the strike is visible in the local office of the Western Union nor in the local railroad offices, so far as outward appearances are concerned, and the only difficulty experienced at all is by way of reflection from Omaha, Chicago and other points.

But for all that Manager Haviland of the Norfolk office is handling everything given to him in the way of telegrams, accepting them subject to indefinite delay.

Norfolk is kept in touch each day with the city situation to a certain extent through the messages that are received for The News and other business firms. Up to date the Chicago Western Union office is managing to muster enough men to send out considerable matter, including each day's weather bulletin, so that people of the northwest keep right on knowing when it is going to rain, despite the trouble in Chicago.

It is also noticeable that the leased wire service from Chicago to Omaha for the brokers has been unbroken, today's News containing figures from the Chicago board of trade as though nothing had happened.

Fearing that the Omaha office might not be able to handle the stuff, the South Omaha live stock company sending live stock reports to this paper each day is now using the long distance telephone.

But many news telegrams are coming to the paper daily through the Omaha office, so that the wires are not completely idle even yet.

WYOMING OIL FOR FUEL

NORTHWESTERN TO USE OIL ON ITS LOCOMOTIVES.

NEW INVENTION IS PRACTICAL

Northwestern Company Negotiating for Purchase of Large Tracts of Oil Bearing Land Near Lander and Douglas—Dallas Extension Finished.

In pursuance of their determination to use oil for fuel in the near future on the Omaha-Wyoming branches, an Omaha report says that Northwestern officials are steadily negotiating for the oil fields in that state. A representative of coal mines near Lost Springs and Douglas, Wyo., has been in Omaha for some time, conferring with the Northwestern officials, Messrs. Walters and McFarland.

Ever since the first test of the oil burning locomotive, in which it was demonstrated that the new invention is practical, the Northwestern has been steadily gobbling up the oil territory in Wyoming, first the famous Henderson wells in the northern part, from which a pipe line is being run to Hudson, and now from the Douglas district.

The mines about Lost Springs are rich with coal and the geological survey of the United States asserts there is undoubtedly an unlimited amount of oil to be found in the same territory. Consequently an eight-mile extension is being built to that district and soon several wells are to be sunk.

A Northwestern official in Omaha is quoted as having said:

"The Northwestern is after all the oil it can get and doubtless intends to operate oil burning locomotives in the future. Already it has obtained so many wells that a great deal of oil has had to be burned because of a lack of tanks."

The decision of the Wyoming and Northwestern to use oil on the line between Casper and Lander has increased the activity in oil development in that state also, especially in the Dry Creek field. Outfits are already at work in that section sinking wells and a spur will be built to them from the main line, which is but ten miles distant. The first oil deliveries are expected within sixty days.

The representative of the Lost Springs territory now in Omaha, and who has been in conference for some time with the Northwestern people in regard to the development of the supposed oil beds there, said Monday: "I have been told on good authority that the Northwestern intends to push their oil burners, and for this reason I have been instructed by my people to offer our lands to them. Wells will probably soon be sunk near Douglas."

AN HISTORICAL EVENT.

Last Spike is Driven on the Dallas Extension.

Dallas News: The steel is all laid. The last spike is driven. The railroad has reached the only gateway to that great commonwealth, Tripp county, soon to be opened to settlement. The tie that binds a land mad multitude to the last unsettled choice land in the corn belt is completed. It was indeed an act of historical significance Saturday when the last spike was driven that completed the railroad to Dallas. The Northwestern permeates the great agricultural states of the union, congested, crowded, teeming with a horde of homeseekers restlessly awaiting the moment when they may enter the fair domain of Tripp county. To the hundreds of thousands who will register and the thousands who will secure homes the completion of this line is a matter of vital interest.

In Tripp county the coyote now sings his mournful evening song undisturbed, the meadow lark jauntily swinging from his blue stem perch pours forth the note that emphasizes rather than breaks the silence of an unpeopled prairie. Ere long the blue stem will give place to fields of waving grain and growing corn and the evening song of the coyote and note of the lark will be lost in the hum of civilization.

HINTS FOR WATER ACCIDENTS.

Iowa Board of Health Has Taken Notice of Many Drownings.

With seventeen drownings as the record in northern Nebraska and southern South Dakota during the season, and with six near Norfolk in less than a week, the following notes from a bulletin issued by the Iowa state board of health as to drowning and the possible revival of the victims,

may be of interest:

It is pointed out that promptness in treating a person near death by drowning is important. The admonition is not to give up too soon. Some of the suggestions follow: Send for a physician, if possible, but don't wait for his coming. Get to work at once. Begin work as soon as the body is taken out of the water. Don't waste time with thoughts of dry ground. "Get busy" and endeavor to start the breathing. It will be time enough for hot baths and warm clothing after breathing has commenced. Remove all obstructions to breathing. Cut the clothing at the neck and wrists—if a woman, open the corset—but don't remove the clothing in winter or in summer. Give the patient plenty of fresh air. Prevent crowding around him. Endeavor to restore breathing in the following manner: Instantly turn the patient face downward, with a large firm roll of clothing under the stomach and chest. Place one of his arms under his forehead, so as to keep his mouth off the ground. Press very heavily two or three times for four or five seconds each time upon the patient's neck, so that the water drains out of the mouth. Then quickly turn the patient face upward, with the roll of clothing under the back, just below the shoulder blades, and make the head hang back as low as possible.
