

INFLUX OF NEW SETTLERS

GREATER IN SOUTH DAKOTA THAN EVER BEFORE.

IMMIGRATION STARTS EARLY

People Pouring Into the Region West of the Missouri River in a Constantly Increasing Stream in Search for New Homes.

Fairfax Advertiser: The influx of new settlers into South Dakota this spring is greater than for several years, and it commenced much earlier this season than usual, owing, doubtless, to the fact that the weather has continued warm and springlike for the greater portion of the past few weeks.

While it is impossible to procure the exact figures, it is conservatively estimated that during the course of the past few weeks between 1,500 and 2,000 carloads of stock, farm machinery and household goods belonging to new settlers have been hauled into South Dakota. The new settlers are pouring into the region west of the Missouri river in a constantly-increasing stream. Hundreds of carloads of settlers' effects have crossed the Missouri river at Pierre and Moberge, and at Chamberlain fully as many are crossing, to find new homes in the territory tributary to the railroad extensions from the Missouri river to the Black Hills.

The movement of immigrant cars from the east to the western part of South Dakota is rapidly assuming gigantic proportions. During a period of only eight days a total of ninety-seven carloads of new settlers' effects crossed the Missouri river at Chamberlain. At present the number is about twenty per day and a big increase is certain as spring advances. Special trains are necessary to accommodate the large number of new settlers from eastern states who are finding homes on the comparatively cheap deeded lands east of the Missouri river. Practically every county in eastern South Dakota is receiving its share of the new settlers.

The new settlers are experienced farmers from Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri and other states, and they come prepared to carry on farming operations on scientific and progressive principles.

Many of the new comers are men who rented farms in the states mentioned, and who had accumulated sufficient to purchase outright farms at the comparatively low prices at which they are held. Others are men who have farmed for years on their own land in the states farther east, and, finding purchasers for their land at good prices, have decided to follow farming in South Dakota and reinvest a part of the proceeds from their old farms in the belief that in time the land will advance in price as much in South Dakota as in the older states.

That an aggregate of anywhere from 20,000 to 40,000 or 50,000 new arrivals, including the new settlers and the members of households, will find new homes in South Dakota during the present season is assured.

CAN'T TAKE JOKE.

Presence of Indian Student in Senate Gallery Proves Disastrous.

Washington, April 4.—F. D. Dedshaw, of Thavancore, India, this afternoon occupied the seat reserved in the gallery for the vice president of the United States. He wore a turban of pronounced reddish hue and a cloak lined with crimson-colored cloth, thereby furnishing a vivid contrast. He is neither a graduate of the Ohio Wesleyan university and en route back there to take a post graduate course.

Word was quickly passed around the floor of the senate that the Duke de Abruzzi sat in Mr. Fairbanks' reservation. The Hindoo lawyer at once became the center of attraction. One senator, intent on hazing Mr. Elkins, approached him and said: "Say, Elkins, I see the Duke de Abruzzi is in the reserved gallery."

In reply Mr. Elkins said never a word. He turned a fiery red, matching the raiment of the Hindoo and left the senate chamber. He did not return during the afternoon.

The thoughtlessness of senators in having fun with Mr. Elkins is well illustrated by the audacious conduct of his colleague. Earlier in the day Mr. Scott rushed up to Mr. Elkins and said: "Steve, what is the market quotation on dagos today?"

Mr. Elkins went scarlet, bit his lip, made no reply and slid out the side door. He does not like these jests, but his associates are determined to have fun with him. He is already called everything from baron and count up to duke and royal highness.

CRIPPLES IN FIGHT.

Carving of Initials in Another Man's Wooden Leg Arouses Anger.

Chicago, April 4.—The initials "E. H." carved into a wooden leg precipitated a unique fight at 114 Green street on Tuesday night, according to evidence given before Judge Beitler at the Desplanes street branch of the municipal court yesterday.

The opposing forces were composed of six beggars—three on each side. The factions were distinguished from one another by the fact that the three members of one have wooden legs, while the opposing trio use crutches.

The six made their headquarters in the basement of the Green street house. They formed a crippled beggars' association, funds for which were chiefly supplied by obtaining alms, the sale of boot laces. The money was used to keep the sextet supplied with clothes, food and beer.

All went well with the organization until the fateful Tuesday night. At that time, after several hours of merry making, Edward Hickey, user of a crutch, in a frolicsome spirit of mirth, carved his initials into the wooden leg of Charles Thorp. Charles saw the initials, but failed to see their humor. He thereupon unbuckled the inflated leg and proceeded to "beat up" Hickey. Hickey retaliated with his crutch.

Thorp thereupon called to his aid Charles Whitlock and Joseph Ryan, who also have wooden legs. These two mingled in the fray. Then Hickey was reinforced by the remaining members of the organization, Edward Williams and Joseph Burns, both users of crutches. A battle royal then took place, wooden legs versus crutches. The police arrived before either side had gained a decisive victory.

The six appeared in court yesterday to answer a charge of disorderly conduct. As no defense was made, each of the sextet was fined $15 and costs. They did not pay the amount and will have to spend a month at hard labor in the Bridewell.

HUBBARD SPEAKS.

Speaks to Admirers in Studebaker Hall, in Chicago.

Chicago, April 4.—Elbert Hubbard, Roycroft and philosopher, lectured on "The Spirit of the Times" at the Studebaker theater yesterday afternoon. A fashionably attired audience filled the playhouse, revealed in an atmosphere poetic and philistine, and applauded sometimes when the speaker expected and other times when he didn't.

Fra Elbertus talked for nearly two hours. His topics were numbered by sands of the sea. He touched upon Athens, packing plants, and art. He painted a pile of horseshoes in a country road, and jumped from there to a madhouse. A dip into Egypt was followed by a condemnation of Scotch whisky. Then he told his hearers he was ashamed of America for fighting Spain, and that it folks eat less and breathe more they'll live longer.

Mr. Hubbard spoke of the spirit of the times of Babylon, Athens, Rome, and then of the spirit of modern times. Here are a few of Hubbard's aphorisms: "Better send people to Egypt to learn, rather than missionaries to teach."

"Nothing is permanent in this world, but change."

"Failure consists in admitting failure; the man who never knows he is licked never is."

"When a man has $200,000 he has enough. More than you can use of anything will make trouble for you."

"Happiness is a habit. Believe you are enjoying your work. Be happy every moment of your life."

"No man's opinion on anything is worth anything. You have to take the best traits from one hundred men to get one good man—and he has to be hand-made."

"Every man who marries a barbaric woman becomes a barbarian; neither should a woman marry a man to reform him."

"A girl did to Julius Caesar what the Gauls and all the other nations couldn't do. He died of compulsory vaccination when he was 56."

"We are not black devils, and we are not white saints; most of us are slate colored."

"Nations die when they begin to rest."

"There is but one big stick now, and that is public opinion; if anybody tries to wield it too much by himself we send him to oblivion and he never is brought back."

"I am ashamed of America because she jumped on weak, helpless Spain and whipped her."

"The day will soon come when women will have the right of suffrage."

"The last time I spoke it was in an insane asylum. I had been running on for half an hour when an old woman got up and said: 'My lord, I can't stand this any longer.' She went out, and I stopped soon."

The Roycrofters entertained a number of friends on the Studebaker stage at an informal reception following the lecture.

THIS ONE AT STUART.

Four Children Hurt by Accidental Shot Gun Discharge.

Stuart Advocate: One evening last week while R. R. Johnson's children were assembled in the living room, a muzzle loading shot gun, which was standing in one corner of the room, was accidentally thrown to the floor and discharged. The charge of No. 4 shot, with which the gun was loaded, struck the heel of one of the boys, a little fellow about six years old, tearing away the flesh and splintering the bone so that a number of small pieces had to be removed. The shot then struck a heavy graniteware plac that was on the floor, from which it scattered and slightly wounded three other children. Dr. Colburn was called and dressed the wounds, and reports rapid progress toward recovery.

ENGINE MEN SAVE MONEY

A COMFORTABLE FORTUNE IS SAVED EVERY MONTH.

ON NORTHWESTERN RAILROAD

Reduction of Expenses $10,000 Each Month by the Economical Use of Fuel in the Locomotives—What Co-operation Will Do.

"By co-operation on the part of our engineers we are saving approximately $10,000 per month in the cost of our engine fuel as compared with an equal tonnage hauled a year ago," Frank Walters, general manager of the Northwestern lines west of the Missouri river is quoted in the Omaha Bee.

"Several meetings with the train and engine men have been held at the various division points and the interest shown by the men is reflected most in the fuel cost, which is, as all know, the largest item of expense on any railroad.

"This question of saving fuel is not a new one and the main point is to keep the men interested in their work. The fireman who puts eight or ten shovels of coal in the firebox at one time makes labor for himself and wastes money for the company for which he works, for the reason that 25 per cent of the coal's value is emitted from the chimney in black smoke.

"A scoop of coal weighs close to twenty pounds, and if each fireman working for this company on the lines west of the Missouri had during the month of February saved a scoop of coal every mile run by a locomotive, which is a very easy thing to do, the saving of that alone would have aggregated $6,560 and manifestly from our fuel savings more than one scoop per mile was saved during that month.

"The way to make money is to save it and no one class of employees on a railroad can do more toward effecting real economies than the engineer and fireman."

"These meetings held along the line of the Northwestern were similar in nature to those held on the Omaha road, which is also a part of the Northwestern system. General Manager Trenholm and Superintendent Nicols have been holding similar meetings at the principal points between Omaha and St. Paul and they report a great saving along the same lines. In fact they were able to report an absolute gain in the earnings of the road and attribute it largely to the loyalty of the men, which was secured in part by these meetings, by means of which the men were able to listen to their superior officers and to meet with them.

Nelgh Register: While looking over the private papers and letters of the late W. B. Lambert, S. C. Lambert found a copy of the New York Daily Gazette dated Friday, May 1, 1789, which is in an excellent state of preservation. Among the interesting items is an advertisement offering "For sale, a likely, healthy, young negro wench, about fifteen and sixteen years old." Also an account of Washington's first inaugural and "his excellency's speech to both houses of congress."

Springview Herald: This office acknowledges a pleasant call from Otto Mutz, chief promoter of Burton, while he was in town on Saturday. He informed us that the town had established as a policy that one man or firm could hold but one kind of business of the place, and making many more boosters for the town. They recognize that the one or two man town is a dead one. Another good feature is that every business that starts up in the town must promise absolutely to patronize that most essential town boomer and builder, the newspaper, before he can even start up in business. These things will help build up the place.

O'Neill Democrat: The first Sunday in April promises to be one of the great lodge days in O'Neill history. A class of sixty is to be installed in the Knights of Columbus order on that date, and this important day in K-C lore is bringing many notables to our city, among whom are C. J. Smyth, T. J. Mahoney and other men whose fame as citizens, statesmen and politicians extend over the great west. The Knights of Columbus are to be congratulated upon the eminent success of their order. It has grown in a measure that has surprised the most ardent enthusiasts of the order, and this additional sixty members will give the O'Neill lodge a class of over 300 members.

Burke Register: We look for Boyd county to lead the counties of the State this year on average yield of winter hard luck, such as a hail storm of "green bugs." The prospect was never better at this season of the year than it is at the present time. Last year there was but one county in the state that beat Boyd county on average yield and that county had a very small acreage and beat us by only a half bushel to the acre. Winter wheat is wonderfully well adapted to our soil and climate and every year sees an increased acreage of this crop. Both winter wheat and alfalfa are going to figure largely in the future prosperity of our peerless county.

Omaha Bee: F. H. Davis, vice president of the First National bank, has returned from Columbus, where he went on business. On the train Mr. Davis met Mr. McMillip, former democratic candidate for congress in the Third district, who recently has had some difficulty in land transactions in the Cedar valley. As Mr. Davis is concerned in Mr. McMillip making good and redeeming his credit, the Omaha banker looked into the affairs of the democratic politician and said when he returned to Omaha that McMillip was just a little hard up and had been trying to handle more than he was financially able to swing with comfort, but will come out all right. Mr. Davis said the report that McMillip had fled to Canada was absurd and he met the man on the train and went to Columbus with him.

NEBRASKA POLITICS.

O'Neill Frontier: The democrats always carry the election about six months before the votes are counted.

Bonested Herald: W. N. Huse, editor of the Norfolk Daily News, was elected a delegate to the national convention by the republicans of his district. The Herald congratulates Mr. Huse.

Ainsworth Democrat: E. P. Skillman of Long Pine was in Ainsworth this week circulating a petition to be presented to the next legislature asking for the submission of a prohibition amendment to the state constitution.

Oakdale Sentinel: The Pierce County Leader says that the delegates from Pierce county to the democratic state convention returned to Pierce "filled with democracy clear up to the chin." If so, no doubt they had to be taken home on drays.

Stuart Advocate: Arthur Mullin, a young attorney of O'Neill, was in Stuart Sunday night. It is reported that he was trying to collect a little money to be used to advertise a man named Bryan, who it will be remembered ran for president sometime ago and now wants to try it again.

Atkinson Graphic: A number of populists in this vicinity have expressed themselves as being satisfied with the present republican administration of national, state and county affairs now that their former party leaders have abandoned the populist cause, they will return to their former allegiance and support the principles of the republican party.

Freemont Herald: A very ordinary man was mentioned for congress the other day, where upon everybody laughed. And yet, did you ever think that anything is absurd in political possibilities? Just a few years ago, U. S. Senator Carter of Montana was peddling books in the rural settlements in Nebraska. He was then, as now, a shrewd, designing man, inexorably committed to the policy of looking out for Carter.

Stella Press: Edwin H. Lulkart, son-in-law of W. H. Hogrefe, is being favorably mentioned as a candidate on the democratic ticket this fall for the office of state auditor. Mr. Lulkart is one of the most capable young men of the state and is well qualified to discharge the duties of a state auditor. His home is at Tilden where he is cashier of a bank. He has never been an office-seeker, although prominent in democratic politics since a boy. His father, who died three years ago, served in the state legislature and was a delegate to two national democratic conventions. Mr. Lulkart was appointed state examiner about ten years ago, serving in that capacity three or four years. He numbers among his personal friends such men of prominence as W. J. Bryan, in whose regiment he was during the Spanish-American war. Mrs. Lulkart was one of the most beloved girls who have ever resided in Stella, and owing to the prominence of her father, W. H. Hogrefe, Mr. Lulkart may be sure of the undivided support in this section of the state should he be a candidate.

WHAT PAIN IS.

Rev. Samuel Fallows Divides Feeling Into Two Classes.

Chicago, April 4.—Do dealers in stocks and bonds and board of trade speculators feel it when they lose?

Ordinarily the average man is somewhat overcome by that feeling commonly referred to as "down and out" when he loses his all, but stocks and bonds dealers and board of trade speculators because of mental training rise superior to their difficulties and feel little, if any, distress when they are wiped out.

So said the Right Rev. Samuel Fallows, speaking on "The Mission of Pain," to a congregation that filled the chapel of St. Paul's Reformed Episcopal church, West Adams street and Winchester avenue, last night to hear the bishop's address at the regular weekly health conference.

The bishop announced before he began his talk that the address would be one of the most important he would ever make on the subject of religious psychology. He spoke for an hour.

"Pain, as it is visited upon us both mentally and physically," said the bishop, "is God's warning that calls our attention to some difficulty in our organism. It is God's danger signal that calls us back to discipline. It is one of God's most blessed gifts. We have physicians to alleviate it, but the pain itself calls our attention to His supreme being."

Pierce Call: On the informal ballot at the congressional convention the Pierce delegation voted for E. D. Gurney of Fremont, although he did not have the support of his own county and assured the Pierce boys he was not a candidate in any sense of the word. The next time the Pierce republicans instruct for any one they should at least find out whether he wants it. The seven votes of Pierce county don't cut much ice with every other county in the district arranged in another column.

ONLY A TRAMP.

Recitatione Pathetique. I'm only a tramp with a grimy face; The rags I wear are a foul disgrace, Tattered and dirty, and stooping and thin, With a queer battered hat and an unshaven chin; Dirty and tattered, and bleary of eye, And the women shrink back as I pass them by.

Hungry and thirsty I shambled along, Shunned by the haughty and well-fed throng, And I heard from the lips of a woman fair; "Ah, the poor wretch, how he poisons the air!" Fainting and footsore I paused by a door That swung at my touch o'er a smooth polished floor. The floor was filled with an odor sweet, The floor was warm to my blistered feet; Softly I entered and peered about, Ready to fly at a warning shout. But the room was still—I was quite alone As I pressed my way o'er the floor of stone, Pressed my way till my bleary eye Saw a row of vats so huge and high. Then to my mind came a knowledge clear, These were brewery vats and filled with beer.

Even as I gazed, a beautiful child, With sunny curls and hair blown wild, Came romping along the narrow plank That stretched above from tank to tank. Then as I watched the child so sudden She slipped and fell with a rash splash! Slipped and fell with a choking cry, And sunk like a stone from mortal eye!

I shrieked aloud—there was none to hear! I sprang to the place with the speed of a deer— Sprang to the vat where the child went down, With her merry smile and her curls so brown;

I'm only a tramp with a grimy face, A shambling pest and a foul disgrace, Yet I knew what to do in that fearful hour— The courage was mine, and the will and the power! I bent o'er the vat and with gulplings wild I drank all the beer and saved the child!

Mr. Man with one eye registered in a Columbus hotel. Then he inquired for his mail. He drew one letter and tore it open. He found a draft for $30.50. The banks had closed. Would the obliging clerk cash it? The obliging clerk did. The man with one eye left. He did not come back.

COMMERCIAL CLUB SMOKER FOR COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS.

A FEAST OF STORY TELLING

Freight Rates Were Discussed, President Durland and the Committee Reporting a Rather Favorable Outlook for Lower Rates.

It was a mingling of Commercial club and commercial men at the city hall Saturday evening, when the Commercial club gave a smoker to the resident traveling men of the city. It was the regular time for the quarterly open meeting of the club and the officers decided that it was an appropriate occasion to entertain the traveling men. As most of the traveling men are also members of the club, it was after all but a great big family meeting of the commercial interests of the city. The meeting was well attended by both traveling and resident business men.

The early part of the evening was devoted to a report of the club's committee on freight rates as applied to Norfolk, and the later hours to story telling and a social time. The refreshment consisted of cigars of Norfolk manufacture, which were passed around freely and frequently from early in the evening until the last guest had departed. In the story telling contest, Tom Price, one of the most genial travelers who calls Norfolk his home, won the prize of a box of cigars.

President A. J. Durland of the Commercial club presided over the meeting. He opened by giving a concise statement of the work the Commercial club is engaged in this year—the securing of a freight rate that will induce jobbing houses to locate here and the development of a water power on the Elkhorn that will bring factories and plants using power. For the purpose of investigating the water power proposition, Andrew Rosewater, city engineer of Omaha, will be here during the week and give the proposed project a thorough inspection.

Mr. Durland, as one of the committee on rates, related what had been done on the freight rate question and believed that there is every prospect that a much lower rate may be secured than Norfolk has. The committee has met with the railroad commission of the state, and on Friday held a meeting in Omaha with freight agents of the various roads entering Norfolk. As the result of this conference the committee is very much encouraged to believe that Norfolk may become the distributing center that its location entitles it to be. H. C. Brome of Omaha, a leading attorney of the state, has been employed by the club to look after the interests of Norfolk. It is hoped that a rate satisfactory to this city may be put in without resort to the courts, but it may be necessary to appeal to the interstate commission.

Mr. Durland's report was followed by statements by P. F. Sprecher and E. A. Bullock, other members of the committee. Mr. Sprecher rather thinks it will be necessary to fight for every concession, while Mr. Bullock is more sanguine and believes that any kind of a wholesale house that might want to start in Norfolk would receive such rates that it could compete with Omaha, Lincoln or Sioux City.

After the reports were disposed of, Mr. Durland on behalf of the club and the city expressed his appreciation for the large attendance of traveling men, and said that the club considered them as much business men as though they were behind the counter of some Norfolk institution. Their homes are here, their interests are here, and Norfolk is anxious to become such a city as will attract this desirable class of people here as permanent residents.

A number of the traveling men responded to this sentiment and said that the time was when the traveling man from Norfolk always registered from the town where his house was located, being somewhat ashamed of Norfolk. But for the past year things have changed and now every resident traveling man and some who do not live here register in a firm hand from Norfolk, Nebraska. Now they are proud to be classed as Norfolk people and they can boast and do it well—they are talking Norfolk and giving it a send off every time an opportunity is presented to do so. They believe it is destined to become a great city and they are building homes here and investing money in betterments which all help a town.

Then the story contest started and was participated in by Messrs. Sprecher, Sturgeon, Price, Bullock, Doughty, Day, Durland, Hoffman, Randklev, Spear, John R. Hays and others. When a traveling man starts in to tell a story it may be depended upon that it is a good one and the spinning of yarns accompanied the annihilation of good tobacco until after midnight. The committee awarded the box of cigars to Tom Price as being the best story teller in the bunch but the committee had difficulty to determine which was best, as all are artists along that line.

COMMERCIAL CLUB AUXILIARY. Young Men of Norfolk Are Formally Organized For Work.

The Norfolk Commercial Club Auxiliary is now an active organization out in the field for members. The new auxiliary was formally organized at a meeting held last evening at the Norfolk National bank. "Articles of association" were adopted at the meeting. The work of soliciting members began this morning. The next meeting of the auxiliary will be held next Tuesday evening, the place to be announced later. The election of officers will probably be held on April 28. The auxiliary was organized to work in conjunction with the directors of the Commercial club, who are expected to refer a good many details of their work to the new organization. Through its membership among the younger men of the city and through its regular semi-monthly meetings the auxiliary will reach many men who have had no part in commercial club work before and will unite them into one body working for the town's interests. The meetings are expected to be fruitful of many new ideas.

The officers of the auxiliary will be a chairman and clerk, elected at the first meetings in January and July. The funds of the new organization will be kept by the treasurer of the Commercial club in a special account. Each member is required to take one and no more than one share of stock in the auxiliary, each share involving the payment of 50 cents a month. These funds are under the control of the auxiliary. Regular meetings shall be held on the second and fourth Tuesday of each month.

The parent club is recognized by being accorded a certain supervision over the affairs of the auxiliary. The auxiliary itself was recognized at the last meeting of the board of directors and steps taken to accord the holders of auxiliary shares all the privileges of the holders of regular shares.

At the meeting last evening those present signed the articles of association and paid their first assessment.
