

SCHITZ WILL GO FREE.

Honey Says Frisco's Former Mayor May Never Be Tried.

Chicago, Jan. 11.—That Eugene E. Schmitz, former mayor of San Francisco, probably never will be retried or convicted of complicity with the famous "hoodlers' ring, which still is being investigated, was the admission of Francis J. Honey, the nemesis of hoodlers.

"Although Mayor Schmitz is head in bonds of $280,000 and there are several pending indictments, it is doubtful if he ever is tried again," said Mr. Honey. "We proffered his conviction largely through the testimony of Abe Ruef, but under the decision of the circuit court of appeals, which finally dismissed that case, we cannot use that evidence again."

Mr. Honey said he had about recovered from the wound which he received on Nov. 13, when Morris Haas, an ex-convict, shot him during the third trial of Abe Ruef.

A LINCOLN VIEW.

Comment on the Norfolk Lawyer Who Never Dons an Overcoat.

The Norfolk lawyer who never wears an overcoat has been made the theme of an editorial in the Lincoln Star, occasioning the following comment from the Star editor:

There's a lawyer in Norfolk, Neb., who, according to The News of that city, never wears an overcoat; who never wears a vest; and who wears summerweight garments all winter. What's more, he could afford an overcoat if he wanted to. He used to have the rheumatism when he handled up, but now he's "Mr. Well and Strong" personified.

Which leads us to remark that the average man doesn't "bundle up" as he is used to. And neither do the women dress as warmly as in the years gone by. It is rather a common thing for men to wear throughout the winter months underclothing of medium weight, and there are several in Lincoln who sternly refuse to burden themselves with overcoats. One well-known man of this city not only refuses to protect his ears of neck, his chest or any other portion of his anatomy beyond the garments required by the rules of society and the laws of the land, but finds real comfort in walking in the snow barefooted before going to bed and would rather expose his brow to a frosty moon than bask in the sunshine of noonday.

Not many years ago the average man brought out his fur cap and his overalls, his overshoes and pulswarmers, and wore them from the time the first snow fell until the crocuses peeped up in the spring. One doesn't have to be very old to remember the heavy scarfs and fur collars and yarn mittens, but the grandmothers no longer employ their time in knitting "warm things" for the menfolk.

The result is that the below-zero days like those of the last week find one unprepared for such low temperatures and biting blasts, but the severe spells are so infrequent that there will be no heavy purchases of the weighty accessories that helped to make up a man's wardrobe years ago.

A. of the Northwestern railroad here. He also conducted the special meeting for railroad men on Sunday. The Y. M. C. Secretary Bailey is much pleased with the conditions here and the religious work of the railroad men.

SALOONKEEPER BALKED.

Religious Service Announced for Plainview Saloon Not Held.

Plainview Republican: The religious services announced to take place in the Farmers Home saloon last evening excited no little interest. A curious crowd gathered there early in the evening but the proprietor changed his mind at the last moment and refused to allow the services to proceed. Evangelist Dell, Rev. Fox-worthy and their friends, were disappointed. How much good services of the kind proposed could accomplish is hard to say. One thing is certain it has caused discussion and comment. Perhaps this was the object of such a unique proposal. If it was it succeeded admirably. We did not learn what caused Mr. Kerbel to change his mind. Perhaps he had good reasons.

THE AUTOMOBILE FACE.

W. S. Justice of Meadow Grove Has It.

Battle Creek Enterprise: W. S. Justice of Meadow Grove was a Battle Creek visitor the first of the week. We have often heard of the "automobile face" but never knew what the real thing was until we saw his. Mr. Justice was in an automobile which collided with a street car in Omaha last week, an account of which appears in another column.

THE HORSE LIFTS THE LOAD.

Dr. Mackay Decides Horse Neither Pulls Nor Pushes Wagon.

Norfolk, Neb., Jan. 11.—Editor News: Does a horse push or pull a load? This is the question a Sioux City daily paper has been recently discussing. The question is inadequate. More pertinent would it be to inquire, does the horse lift the load? The power in a horse, or, as it is technically called, the force of traction, is operated through the legs acting as levers upon the fulcrum of the spine. Of course we know that the contraction of muscles moves these levers. The British, Canadian and other governments have spent large sums of money to determine many points of dispute regarding the horse, but evidently these reports are not available for the editor of the Sioux City paper. That the horse cannot push a heavy load has been demonstrated by placing the horse behind the load and applying a purely pushing force from his shoulders and body. The largest load was moved when part of the load was placed upon the animal's back thus bringing into use the lifting force of the levers. It was also determined that to move a heavy load a horse must himself have weight, a considerable percent of which need only be fat. It has also been settled that two-thirds the force of traction comes from the hind quarters of a horse.

Very truly,
J. H. Mackay.

Martin Reforms.

Plainview Republican: Martin Soroson made a resolution to give up the use of tobacco. His system is soaked in thirty years of continual smoking and how much there will be left of him after he gets the nicotine eliminated is hard at present to say but it will not be much. He is as uneasy as an old maid on the last day of leap year.

The New Postmaster.

Battle Creek Enterprise: F. W. Richardson took charge of the Battle Creek postoffice Tuesday morning and has since been devoting his time to familiarizing himself with the workings of the office. He announces that there will be no radical changes made at present. Postage stamps will remain about the same price, though to make a good showing for the first quarter's business under his management he is offering three stamps for a nickel. Miss May Willis will continue to receive all kicks registered and read such postals as may be of general interest. May the new postmaster have occasion to lick nothing but stamps.

Railroad News.

George Heilman, who has for many years been the efficient telegraph operator at the Northwestern passenger station at West Point, has been promoted to the charge of the company's station at Crowell.

Will Harriman's acquisition of the New York Central carry with it the control of the Northwestern as indicated in Sunday's papers? Is Harriman to be really "king" in the railroad world with an unbroken chain of roads from the Atlantic to the Pacific, with the New York Central with its four rails from New York to Buffalo and its splendid road on to Chicago, the Northwestern with its double tracks from Chicago to Omaha and the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific completing the chain across the country? With the Northwestern an out and out Harriman road it would seem that the much talked of Pacific coast extension of the road would be dropped for all time and that Norfolk would never see coast bound trains passing through the city. The reports that Harriman has gained control of the New York Central are denied by President Brown of that road.

The debating enthusiasm in this section of the state is very high this season, due largely to the interest taken by Superintendent R. I. Superintendent Elliott has also been invited to judge in the Alsworth-Valentine debate at Valentine on January 15.

This animal weighed 1,000 pounds at nine months old.

The only change of officials in Cuming county made this year is the one by which the county attorney's office is turned over to Judge S. S. Krake, M. McLaughlin, the former prosecuting attorney retiring to private practice. Mr. McLaughlin, who is the Nestor of the Cuming county bar has served the county very acceptably for six years. Lincoln Journal: Superintendent C. H. Reynolds of the Nebraska district of the Northwestern, with headquarters at Norfolk, was in the city Friday looking after matters concerning the road. Mr. Reynolds says business on the Northwestern is rather light now. He thinks that a number of causes combine to make it so. General business over the country is waiting on congress, the state legislature is engrossing the attention in Nebraska, and the holiday lull is being contended with. Mr. Reynolds declares that the railroads are not worrying about what the legislature may do, saying that there is very little ground left on which to attack the roads. He believes business will grow better as the year grows older.

GAVE WIFE TO FRIEND.

Suicide Ended Life That Wife Might Wed His Best Friend.

London, Jan. 11.—Forcing her way into the squalid lodging of her husband, who had sacrificed himself in order that his wife might marry his best friend, Mrs. Anthony Strong today found her husband hanging from a hook in the wall. He evidently had committed suicide on New Year's eve. Strong was a son of a wealthy British clergyman and was twenty-two years of age. His wife was Miss Phyllis Blake, eighteen years old, and considered a London beauty. They had been married only three weeks when he allowed her to desert him.

Save that John Ruskin would not commit suicide, the case bears a striking similarity to the giving up by the noted author of his wife to his friend Leighton, the artist.

Young Strong was a chum and classmate at Oxford of Reginald Blake, gifted and brilliant son of a noted family.

But Blake, after graduating, fell on hard times. Since leaving college he had been a schoolmaster.

Last September Strong, who had fallen in love with Miss Blake, who, by a singular coincidence bore the same name as his chum, after a rapid courtship wed her. Young Blake acted as best man at his friends' nuptials. Blake continued to be on the friendliest terms with the young married couple. Suddenly Strong, according to testimony brought out at the coroner's inquest, discovered his wife had fallen in love with his handsome friend. Just three weeks after the marriage, and after a confession by the wife, young Strong permitted her to desert him for Blake's sake.

The suit was instituted by Mrs. Anna Irene Farrell, who alleges desertion as her reason for wishing legal separation from her husband. Mr. Farrell filed a cross-petition and on January 4 was given decree as prayed.

Mrs. Farrell has not lived here for more than two years.

Mrs. Farrell was formerly Miss Irene Dexter of Norfolk. She is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Dexter, formerly of this city and now of Chadron. Mr. Dexter operated the Norfolk Steam Laundry twenty years ago. Mr. Farrell is a traveling salesman for the James S. Kirk Soap company. The marriage was against the will of the bride's parents. The wedding took place in Norfolk.

HOLD UP SPECIAL BILLS.

South Dakota Legislature to Pass General Appropriations First.

Pierre, S. D., Jan. 11.—Among the more important bills just introduced in the legislature—judging from their titles, the bills being not yet printed—are, one to amend the primary law, by Senator Arneson; one by the same senator for insurance of bank deposits; one by Curtis, creating the office of parole commissioner; the drunkard's home bill, by Ewart—same as Woolley's home bill, introduced previously; two-cent fare bill by Byrne; standard policy bill by Byrne; one requiring investment of 75 per cent insurance fees by foreign companies within the state (introduced in the senate by Thoreson, and in the house by Woolley); by Eudsey, maximum telegraph toll bill; by Johnson of Minnehaha, requiring treasurers to account for interest on deposits of county funds; by Brynolfson, requiring secretaries of mutual insurance companies to file an annual report with county auditors.

The question of economy in appropriations, which promises to be a burning one this session, bobbed up on a resolution offered by Amadon "that no special appropriation bills should pass until the general appropriations bill is reported out of committee, or an estimate of the gross amount thereof furnished by the committee." While all agreed in endorsing the principle of the resolution for economy, there was grave doubt of its expediency. Senator Byrne thought its passage would operate to defeat its purpose. Laxon moved its reference to the committee on rules. Dillon favored reference and careful consideration. Laxon moved to refer, which motion prevailed.

Promise Passing of Cold Wave.

The weather man's promise: "Fair tonight and Tuesday with rising temperature."

It was a cheerful message clobbered off by the weather bureau over singing telegraph wires to north Nebraska people submerged in a cold wave which had nothing better to offer than zero weather.

Ten degrees below was reached Saturday night and again Sunday night. By an effort the mercury rose to the zero line Sunday but could not push above.

Man Who Laid Out First Lines Dead.

West Point, Neb., Jan. 11.—Special to The News: John G. Shadnam, one of the oldest pioneer settlers of the Elkhorn valley, died at his farm home Saturday, of old age. The deceased came to Nebraska among the first white settlers in this valley. At that time the Indians were very troublesome in this vicinity and several encounters between them and the state militia, to which Mr. Shadnam belonged, took place. The deceased was a member of the government surveying corps who established the original lines which now govern the subdivision of property in northern Nebraska, and his testimony as to disputed boundary lines has often been sought in the past, his memory of places and dates of fifty years ago being remarkably vivid. He acquired large property interests in Cuming county at an early day and died possessed of an ample estate. He leaves a large family of grown children and numerous descendants. He was a man of rugged character, a typical pioneer and was universally respected in this section of the state.

He had no prejudice as to churches, belonging at different times to the United Brethren, Methodist and Baptist churches and dying a Congregationalist. The Springfield Herald describes him as a true father and husband and a good neighbor.

Ice Cutting is Now On.

The first ice cutting of the year is "on."

George Staleup, who annually contracts with a number of the larger private consumers, had men at work hauling ice Monday morning. The work of cutting ice began Sunday. This ice is being obtained from the vicinity of the sugar factory.

Last week the ice ran from eight to ten inches and each succeeding night of frost has added to its depth. This will give between twenty and thirty of the "unemployed" around the town an opportunity to go to work.

This year it is possible that if the ice will stand for it the cut this year will be in slight excess of 1,500 tons of natural ice.

The state hospital requires an even million pounds of the necessity to carry them through the heat of summer, while the brewery vaults and ice houses call for about 1,600 tons of natural ice between them. There are also several smaller sawdust packed storages scattered over town.

Retail ice dealers will start at once to gather in the ice "crop."

The Pure Ice company, which for the last year has been manufacturing ice for distribution, will lay up an emergency supply of the "real" article in a warehouse at the Junction.
