Ed Harter, still census taking despite the rain, had enumerated 1,831 people at noon. He is still working in the northwest portion of the city.

The household effects of Robert Utter and R. W. Williams were shipped Thursday to Beville, Tex., where both men will engage in fruit raising.

A meeting of the Norfolk Commercial club auxiliary will be held at the automatic telephone building next Saturday evening at 9 p. m.

The meeting will be an important one.

Taxway, Douglas Cones, Pierce; G. W. Park, Oakdale.

A little eight-year-old son died at the Butt home five miles northeast of Norfolk at 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. Death resulted from scarlet fever.

In Madison it was thought that Hugh Jackson, alias Jack Curtin, alias Clarke, the criminal who shot an Omaha policeman the other day and who has since died from wounds received from another officer, may have been from another officer, may have been the Clarke who, a number of years ago, was confined in the Madison county jail on the charge of house breaking and who made a daring escape from jail. George Losey was sheriff at the time and though every effort was made Clarke was never captured.

Graduating exercises at the training school for nurses at the Norfolk state hospital are held this evening in the chapel at the hospital, a class of five receiving diplomas. The members of the class are: Jane S. Hubble, Kathleen T. Curry, Naomi Moore, Stella M. Ewing, Mabel S. Eckert. An effort was made to have ex-Governor Sheldon come to Norfolk and deliver the address, but the former governor and his wife leave today or tomorrow to spend several months in Mississippi where the governor has large interests. Dr. G. A. Young as superintendent will therefore probably make a short talk in addition to presenting the diplomas. Dancing will follow the exercises.

The funeral of Ira G. Westervelt, for a quarter of a century a resident of this vicinity, was held yesterday afternoon from the family home on Madison avenue. Rev. C. W. Ray, pastor of the First Methodist church, conducted the services. N. A. Rainbolt and John R. Hays also spoke, the former speaking about Mr. Westervelt's course in business affairs, the latter reading a sketch of his life. The details of the funeral had been planned by Mr. Westervelt before his death. He had selected all the pallbearers in advance, speaking to some of the men as much as two years ago. To one of the pallbearers, Frank Prince of Madison, the request was made five years ago, interment was at Prospect Hill cemetery. The pallbearers were: William A. Bishop of Pierce, Frank Prince of Madison, C. S. Bridge, C. B. Durland, A. N. McGinnis and S. M. Frazier.

Fred Marshall, who has purchased the Niorara Tribune, is well known among school people as the former superintendent of Knox county and as an officer of the North Nebraska Teachers' association. He is a son-in-law of A. H. Vicle of this city.

Norfolk theatergoers have received news of the forthcoming engagement of Adelaide Thurston in her new play, "The Woman's Hour," with genuine pleasure, as it promises a real treat. Miss Thurston is one of the favorites on the American stage today. She comes Tuesday, February 9.

Tickets for the forthcoming entertainment will be given by the freshman class of the high school as its share toward paying for a new high school piano, are now on sale. The entertainment will be given a week from Friday night and will be more humorous than those that have gone before.

Messrs. Melcher and Irvin have received a new five passenger four-cylinder Overland touring car which they purchased recently. Their North-east touring car was sold last fall, after three months' service, to a man who wanted a car for immediate use in Tripp county and who paid the original purchase price.

Ice has about surrendered to the rain and warm weather in Norfolk. The Norfolk is reported to be largely clear of ice. Before the ice went out G. W. Schwenk had filled his house. John Scholly still lacks about two layers of having his ice house filled. The Pure Ice company were going to put up 800 tons of natural ice but were forced to wait for the completion of the First street bridge until the weather made it impossible to harvest ice. Cold weather may bring another ice gathering season.

Friends of Mrs. Kezlie McCully of New York City, who made her home in Norfolk during the past year, have received word of the tragic death of her father, who was accidentally killed as he was returning from a duck hunting trip at Portsmouth, N. H. Mr. Cooper was stepping out of a motor boat when the trigger of his gun caught on the side of the boat, the load taking effect in his right hand. The party, which consisted of a son and two friends were ten miles from a physician or hospital. When the hospital was reached after two hours, the hand was amputated at the wrist, but Mr. Cooper did not rally from the shock.

Norfolk school property is insured for $46,700. One of the recent acts of the board of education has been to raise the amount of insurance carried $2,000, half of that amount being added to the Grant building, the other half to the books and supplies kept in the high school. The insurance carried since these additions were made is as follows: High school building $25,000, supplies and furniture, $4,000 additional; the old Lincoln building $1,800, furniture $200 additional; the new Lincoln building, $4,000, furniture and heating plant, $1,000 additional; Grant building $5,000, furniture $500 additional; Washington building, $4,000, furniture $200 additional; Edgewater building $1,000, furniture $100 additional. The amount of insurance carried on the old high school building when it burned was $15,000.

Veterans of three of the historic wars of Germany took part in the flag dedication Wednesday of the Norfolk Landwehr Verein. All who belong to the Verein are ex-members of the German army and many in the ranks of the veterans took part either in the war of annexation of 1864, of the campaign of 1866 against Austria and of the war with the French in 1870-71. The Norfolk Verein now has nearly seventy members. In addition to these veterans and their local guests, there were present veterans from West Point, Columbus and Omaha. The Norfolk membership includes former soldiers from Norfolk, Pierce, Hoskins and Hadar and as far away as Ainsworth, Meadow Grove and Cornelia. The Norfolk Verein is nine months old. The extensive program carried out Wednesday is its first formal celebration. Other regular reunions will probably be held in the future. The lodge flags dedicated Wednesday were an American flag of silk and a fine German flag, such as the veterans once marched under. A feature of the parade Wednesday was a squad of the veterans carrying rifles as of old. German songs and old German dances marked the ball and banquet at Marquardt hall in the evening. The reunion was one of the jolliest affairs ever held in Norfolk.

St. Louis Falls, S. D., Jan. 28.—Special to the News.—That it sometimes is very expensive to "tote" a gun around has been discovered by Eugene Hillel, a well-known resident of the little town of Seneca, S. D. While he was "toting" a heavy revolver around in a belt the weapon was accidentally discharged and he was seriously injured. The heavy ball struck one of his legs, breaking it in two places and severing some of the arteries. It required quick work on the part of a physician to prevent him bleeding to death.

SOUTH DAKOTA LEGISLATURE.

Senator Dillon Seems to be Busy Introducing Bills.

Pierre, S. D., Jan. 29.—Senate bill 78, a bill providing for settlement of accounts between Butte, Perkins and Harding counties, was, on motion of Senator Stokes, recalled from the governor for correction and amendment.

A resolution by Senator Stokes makes February 15 the last day on which bills may be introduced, except committee bills, without the consent of the senate.

Senate bill No. 105 was considered a short time and postponed one week. The bill abolishes the office of road overseer and places the duties of that office on township supervisors. Road tax to be paid in cash and road work to be done by contract.

Senate bill 28, by Senator Dillon, passed. It abolishes the privileges of senators and representatives of giving free scholarships in the state educational institutions.

A. E. Hitchcock of Mitchell, was nominated and confirmed as a regent of education, to succeed Dr. H. A. Spafford.

Bills were introduced in the senate as follows:

One by Senator Amsden, prohibiting architects and superintendents of buildings from accepting commissions from manufacturers or dealers.

One by Amsden, prohibiting discrimination in furnishing cars to grain dealers.

One by Senator Dillon, reducing the number of officers and employees of the legislature. It abolishes the assistant sergeant-at-arms, assistant postmaster, one page, watchman, assistant janitor, and reduces the force of committee clerks to five, to be expert stenographers and typewriters employed by the secretary of state after a civil service examination.

One by Dillon, providing for engraving and enrolling to be done on typewriter instead of long hand, as heretofore.

One by Dillon, providing that the printed journals shall be the permanent journals, and reducing the pay of the secretary of the senate and chief clerk of the house for compiling and indexing them to $100 per session.

Two Jarmer Suits Filed.

The two Jarmer suits, based on the killing of Frank Jarmer by Herman Boche, have been filed in the district court at Madison. There are two actions, each for $2,000.

One suit is brought by Frank Ueckerman, as administrator of the Frank Jarmer estate, against Herman Boche. Boche is charged with being responsible for Jarmer's death and hence responsible for the widow being deprived of her husband's support.

Mrs. Bertha Jarmer, the widow, files the second suit. It is directed against Frank Ueckerman, as administrator of her husband's estate, and the Title Guaranty and Surety company of Scranton, Penn., the latter company of course being the real defendant. This action alleges that Jarmer sold liquor to Boche, causing the latter to become intoxicated and that while intoxicated Boche killed Jarmer. The claim is made that the bond company, which furnished Jarmer's saloon bond, was responsible for his acts as a saloonkeeper and consequently responsible for the sales of liquor which made Mrs. Jarmer a widow and deprived her of her husband's support.

It is set forth in the petitions that Jarmer made from $3 to $5 per day, which was used in the support of his family.

"B. B. Thomas" Bound Over.

St. Louis Falls, S. D., Jan. 28.—P. T. Unruh, formerly postmaster at Tyn-dall, S. D., faces a charge by the federal authorities was an attempt to defraud through the United States mails. It is claimed that he tried to cheat the Mennonite Aid plan, a mutual insurance organization, out of large sums of money, through the medium of the mails.

In the complaint brought by the federal attorneys in the federal court here, it is alleged that Unruh mailed, at Emmett, Neb., March 18, 1908, a letter addressed to David Ewert, secretary of the Mennonite Aid Plan, at Mountain Lake, Minn. His object, the complaint states, was to defraud the mutual association. The prosecuting witness for the government is J. A. Tracy of Sioux City. Other witnesses named are Jerry Carleton of Sioux Falls, and David Ewert of Mountain Lake, Minn.

In the hearing before United States Commissioner White, Unruh was bound over to appearance before the federal court under bonds of $1,000.

Unruh was known in Norfolk as B. B. Thomas, under which name he made his headquarters here for three years. He operated among other places at Emmett and Anoka. The charge is that he milked the insurance company, a mutual concern, by collecting on fake fires.

The Red Man and His Names.

Dallas, S. D., Jan. 29.—The Indian is a man of many names. Until recent years, since Uncle Sam has taken him in charge, he had no family nor surname, each member of the family having his own peculiar appellation. Even today they are known by some nickname given them for some incident in their lives or for that which the child shows a special interest or adaptability. This is often changed later by the child himself to another, bearing on some important happening in his career.

Some years ago, upon the advent of twin boys, the father went to the chief for aid in the selection of names for his young sons. The chief had been very much interested and impressed with the recital of events and incidents by a soldier just returned from the Philippines after the Spanish-American war, and named them respectively, "Shot At And Throws The Dirt Over," and "Runs Through The Bullets." Both showing happenings in the attack and defense of a fortress. In going over a list of "Inherited Indian Lands for Sale" one finds names like these: "Sophie His Horse Chasing," "Lizzie Night Pipe," "James Yellow Robe," "Ida Deaf and Dumb Crazy Bear," "Moses Bear Looks Behind," "Peter Swift Bear," "John Fast Horse," "George Charge On The Village," and many others. The Christian names of these have been fixed for them by the government, with the help of the Indian agent.

Has One Secret Name.

Aside from the names already mentioned, every Indian child has a name given it by the mother, which is never divulged to anyone. It is the name known only to the mother, for she gives it to the child—to the child and the Great Spirit. This is the name used by the mother and child, and in later life by the man or woman, in his supplications to the "Good Father." If the name should become known to some other Indian he might use it and thus become the recipient of the answered prayers. It is a part of their religion to strictly guard their names. An Indian will not talk of his religion, though he will speak fluently on any other subject.

No Indian woman ever tells her name, neither the one by which she is legally known nor her nickname. After buying some goods in a store and asking for credit, when the merchant asks the spaw her name, his quest was calmly ignored. Under no circumstances would she have told her name. A man may possibly give his nickname, but the woman, never.

A Handsome Indian.

For some years the president of the Osage council has been Hollow Horn Bear, who is said to be the finest specimen of an Indian living today. He is a great Indian, being not only handsome, with good classic features, of a splendid physique, strong and straight, with noble bearing, but also a notable orator. With this gift he has often swayed the council.

The Indian who has gained his notoriety as leader of the famous "Cow-boy band" is called Chief Yellow Horse. This band was organized at the time of our war with Spain, started for the Philippines, but was recalled before actual service. It has figured prominently several years at the Ak-Sar-Ben at Omaha.

The story that the Indian is fond of dog meat is no fable. During a trip over the Rosebud recently an Indian came to the camp and asked for one of the dogs. He was given to understand that he could have the one he liked the best. Presently he returned, shaking his head and saying, "Bow-wow, bow-wow." This was to let us know that he wanted a live dog, one that could bark. The dog behind the tent was a dead one.

In the Koyu Paha country, along the river bearing that name, is a range of hills, one of these is called "Turtle Butte" on account of its formation resembling a turtle. A very interesting story is told of this Butte, which is founded on fact.

Where Gold is Hidden.

Not many years ago a party of white men came from a great distance, apparently in search of some spot in a particular locality. They finally pitched camp at the foot of Turtle Butte, where they spent the greater part of the summer in digging. It was not until their departure that their mission became known, and this is the story told by one of their party to Mr. Raymond, a pioneer living several miles from there: "Some fifty years back a party of miners coming from the Black Hills country, in the region where we now find the city of Deadwood, and carrying gold valued at several thousand dollars, were overpowered, robbed and killed by a band of thieves. After traveling in an easterly course for a long distance, the robbers were pursued by Indians, fearing they might be massacred, it was agreed to bury the gold and flee for their lives. This was done at night. The next day part of the band was killed by the Indians, but a small number escaped. When their starting point was reached, only one of the original party was left. Before his death he gave to his son a description of the location of the buried treasure, and it was this son, now in middle life, who had organized this searching party and made the long journey to discover, if possible, the hidden gold. Their efforts were not successful, however. The description tallied in every way to Turtle Butte and neighborhood."

Northwest Weddings.

The announcement of the marriage, at Elgin, Ill., of Miss Rose Schmela to Clarence R. Cain of that place has reached West Point. Miss Schmela is the youngest daughter of the late Ferdinand Schmela of West Point and was born and brought up in that community. The newly married couple will reside in Elgin where the groom is established in business.

With the Travelers.

"The sheet law" introduced last week in the legislature has resulted in a good many puns and no little ridicule from people who did not understand the intent or reason for the bill, which is backed by traveling men. The travelers insist that there is as much reason for the regulation of hotels as there is for the regulation of railroads or telephone companies. The bill is to a large extent a counterpart of the Oklahoma nine-foot bed sheet law, these provisions being incorporated within its demands. The under sheet must be of sufficient size to completely cover the mattress and the top sheet must be of equal width and three feet longer and folded back at the head so as to cover the top clothes. Sheets and pillow slips must be made of white cotton or linen and must be washed and ironed after being used by one guest and before used by another. Bed clothes and mattresses must be aired and disinfected at least once every three months. In all the wash rooms, whether the main room or private bath rooms, clean individual towels are required to be furnished to each guest. The labor commissioner is made responsible for enforcing the law and is to be provided under the act with not more than $10,000 for inspecting hotels under the law. The penalty for violation is from $25 to $100. "There is a certain appropriateness in the fact that this bill by Representative Sink, who takes a sheet something more than the average size to cover him."

COUNTRY MERCHANT GAINING?

Report Shows Chicago Catalog House Has Lost Business.

Clearwater, Neb., Jan. 29.—Special to The News: Has the country merchant finally got the bull by the horns? The semi-annual statement of Sears, Roebuck & Co. in the Chicago daily papers would indicate that he has.

Their gross sales for the six months ending December 31, 1908, were $21,813,529, as compared with $17,187,297 for the twelve months preceding. At this rate their gross sales for the year ending June 30 next will show a falling off of $5,569,113, as compared with the previous year. If it also be taken into consideration that the fall trade is heavier than the spring trade these figures will doubtless be increased.

It is further shown by the statement that while their sales have fallen off their profits have increased. Their net profit for the six months ending December 31, 1908, is given as $1,991,456, as compared with $3,328,592 for the previous year, one-half of which, $1,664,251 would show an increase of profits of $327,265 on materially reduced gross sales.

It is further shown in the statement that while their assets in the form of merchandise on hand were $8,028,677, December 31, 1907, on the same date 1908 they are credited with only $5,655,895, in merchandise.

These figures, which are doubtless as near the truth as any market or stock reports can be, will furnish food for thought to everyone interested in the mail-order business either pro or con. There is a world of encouragement for the small dealer in this report. Patrons of mail order houses can also study it with profit.

Mojeik Found.

Herick Press: Henry Mojeik, the former Herick butcher, who last week disappeared from his home and this part of the country, as reported by the Press, has at last been found. Mojeik is at Parkston, S. D., where he has relatives residing. It seems that Mojeik during his business career had a number of shady transactions, among which is said to be the forging of his mother's name to a note and selling the same to a local banking institution. However, no papers had been drawn for his arrest nor do we believe the note had been found to be a forgery previous to his disappearance, but it is apparent that he became frightened and sought safety in flight.

He was tracked by a party of hunters to within a few rods of his mother's home, five miles north of Herick, but his relatives insist that he did not come to the house nor had they seen him. However, he made his way apparently on foot, after leaving here, to Lake Anles and took the train to Parkston, where telephone service revealed his place of refuge.

Hotel Burns in Blizzard.

Amid the furor of the fiercest blizzard that has swept northern Nebraska since the year of 1888, the Norfolk rooming house burnt to the ground last night. The structure, which for a year past, has been run under the name of the Pioneer hotel, was the first real hotel erected in Norfolk for the accommodation of the traveling public.

The hotel was a part of the property of the late Mrs. C. E. Farley who died November 11, 1908. Since that time it has been managed by her son, M. M. Farley, who returned from Mexico prior to her death.

The origin of the fire is entirely unknown. It started, however, in an upstairs room.

About 7:20 Thomas Woods, a lodger, entering the hotel, commented on the smell of smoke. Investigation found the entire upstairs ablaze.

Unable to get the central office on account of the fire Mrs. Farley, her baby in her arms, struggled across the street to the Fred Reed home in the Times-Tribune building, where she turned in the alarm. The call received immediate attention, Mrs. Farley stating that she had barely hung up the receiver before the whistle blew.

The fire department was quickly on the scene and two streams of water were concentrated on the burning building.

Besides Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Farley and the little child there were some twenty guests that occupied the house. One or two of these lost their personal belongings. Two trunks, a sewing machine, and several bureau drawers were the only salvage of the blaze.

Farley, at first estimate, placed his loss and that of his guests around $4,000. Insurance will cover $1,500.

Mr. Farley was on the verge of selling the hotel. An Atkinson party was to have come down today to look it over.

Much relief was felt that the blaze started when it did and not at a later hour. Had the fire caught the occupants abed it is probable that some would have been unable to get out of the old building.

Draped like whitecaps with the clinging snow, the members of the fire department stayed at the scene of action until the last spark had been extinguished. On account the velocity of the wind it was not at all improbable that a flying spark might have ignited the adjoining building or those across the street.

George Farley sheltered his brother's family in his Branch avenue residence. The roomers scattered over town.

A Pioneer Building.

The old hotel which went to its death in the big storm was one of the first buildings erected in Norfolk. The west part of the building was put up on First street by Leonard Wagner, in 1870. It was the first hotel on any pretensions in Norfolk. In 1873 the east part of the building was erected on its present site by Charles Hahn. Wagner soon afterwards bought Hahn out and brought his own building up to Second street and Main, joining the two buildings. The hotel remained in the Wagner family until about two years ago. It was for a number of years the principal hotel in Norfolk and nearly all of the town's visitors in the early days were housed in it.

Were Expecting an Alarm.

At the time the fire whistle blew Norfolk firemen were taking steps to prepare for an emergency call. Chas. W. Winter of the fire committee held a conference with Chief Krantz, with the result that the latter had started to call a squad of firemen to the city hall in case overtaxed heating plants should result in a blaze. The expected call came while he was so engaged.

While the old hotel was virtually destroyed the firemen prevented the flames from spreading to the brick building adjacent and to the frame buildings across the street. Water was turned on these buildings at once and the icy protection saved them. Norfolk firemen never fought a fire under more trying circumstances but they never left their posts. They were given a hot supper afterwards.

The hotel is virtually a total wreck. It was a rambling two story structure and covered a good deal of ground.

AFTER TIMBER THIEVES.

Prosecutions Likely in Rosebud for Stealing Government Timber.

Bonesteel Herald: H. W. Caton, teacher in charge at the Ponca issue station, Milk's Camp, was in Bonesteel Tuesday to see State's Attorney P. J. Donohue relative to some cases that are liable to be brought up soon.

Mr. Caton has been busy the past week investigating cases where settlers have been removing timber from government land or Indian allotments in Gregory and Tripp counties. The cases that are liable to come up from Tripp county will be turned over to the United States district attorney, but those from Gregory county he prefers to handle through the local courts in order to secure more speedy action.

There has been considerable violation in this line recently. The offense is a grave one and not thoroughly understood by many.

The penalty attached to the removal of timber from government or Indian land is three years in the federal prison.
