

FORGE MEN NEXT WEEK.

President Edwards Urges Attendance at Convention Here Next Week.
 J. W. Edwards of Hastings, president of the Blacksmiths, Horseshoers and Wheelwrights' association of Nebraska, is sending to members of the allied crafts, a circular urging them to go to Norfolk next week for the semi-annual convention. The meeting here is important on account of three bills the association is backing before the legislature, two for laws and a bill for regulating the practicing of horseshoeing and blacksmithing in Nebraska.

Another Town Will Rise.
 The townsite of Jordan, eight miles from the western line of the county, is the most favorable of the government townsites. However, this site might have been placed much more advantageously, both for railroad accessibility and farm trade. As eight miles intervene between Jordan and Meyer county, another site further west is necessary to care for the Meyer county opening which is expected within two years, and business from that county.

Hope For Railroad Extension.
 Altogether it looks like a splendid opening is left for a line of new railroad towns across the county. Few improvements of a permanent nature will be made in any townsite until such a line of authorized railroad towns are established. The history of inland towns without railroad assurance is not conducive to much of an investment.

Man Named Stinkins Found With Feet, Hands, Face and Ears Frosted.
 Bonesteel, S. D., Feb. 16.—Special to The News: A man named Stinkins, living northwest of the city, rode into town Saturday evening and after filling up on the cup that cheers, went out in the country a few miles to play for a dance. The party broke up about five o'clock, and at a little after 8 o'clock the fiddler stumbled into K. Harbaugh's house in the northwest part of the city in a badly frost-bitten condition. He was turned over to the police and medical aid secured. His feet, hands, face and ears were severely frozen and he appeared dazed. His horse had not been found at a late hour in the afternoon, and he did not know where it was, or how he came to part company with it. Just how seriously he is frozen cannot be stated at this writing.

located in the midst of the poorest land of the county. From six to fourteen miles in all directions from this townsite stretches a barren waste of sand. Another site in the hills of the Keya Paha river district, with practically no farm country for support. Another site in the northeast part of the county could never hope for any future but that of an inland town.

membership in any church which would receive members on the simple acceptance of the principal of love to God and love to one's fellows, of the principles of the sermon on the mount and the Lord's prayer.

At the Methodist Church.
 A Lincoln program was also carried out at the First Methodist church, in addition to the usual service. Interesting papers on "Lincoln's Early Life and Education," by Miss Amy Leigh Payne of the high school faculty, and on "Lincoln, the Man," by H. L. Snyder, were read. M. C. Hazen discussed Lincoln as a lawyer. S. L. Anderson discussed Lincoln's religious belief in an interesting manner.

tenance of the organization for the coming year. The conditions as reported by the committee were very favorable to both delegations. The association at this point is maintained for the joint benefit of the employes of the railroad and the young men of the city. The large three-story building occupied at present provides rooming places for many of the railroad men, and special lectures are given each Sunday for their benefit. Judge Sayre, of this city, was the speaker at the regular Sunday meeting this week.

time it was said that the railroad was a certainty, and the grading had been done for many miles through Nebraska when the deal suddenly fell through. Many efforts have since been made to interest capitalists in the work. The one heavy loser when the work stopped was John Naughton, who recently died in Sioux City. Mr. Naughton took the contract for the Yankton-Norfolk road, and believing that his money would be forthcoming, did not force his employers to pay him regularly. He had accumulated a small fortune and was well able to carry on the work without drawing on the company. However, there came a day when the contractor wished he had not been so liberal with his own money in advancing wages. When he came to sum up his own losses they amounted to something over $60,000. It was just like starting all over again in life for John Naughton, for the small fortune which he had saved was swept away.
