Elevators, it is reported, have some difficulties in obtaining cars. It is necessary for a farmer to telephone the elevator before bringing his grain to market. Members of the local company of national guards have been ordered to report at their armory tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock to prepare for the government inspection, which takes place here Tuesday evening. Allowance is only made by the inspecting officer for the members actually present. It is believed that every man of the Norfolk company will be on hand for this inspection.

thirty rods from the house. He had killed himself with chloroform, with which he had saturated cotton tied over his face with a wire. Bryan and Tom Allen, others who are direct lieutenants of the presidential candidate.

The case was settled out of court and the fine of $5 was paid by Best. Both Best and his wife are in charge of resorts that recently closed. It was said some misunderstanding had caused the action of the Best woman, and therefore a settlement was made.

Four Omaha Swindlers Indicted.

Omaha, Jan. 31.—Four Omahans have been indicted by the grand jury of Plymouth county, Iowa, on a swindling charge. One of them is in jail here and the authorities are looking for the other three, so far in vain. The quartet are Warren Winslow, Ed H. Fowler, J. M. Finnell and T. H. Little. Fowler spends part of his time in Chicago and Little lives at times in Lincoln. The man in jail is Winslow. The charge against all four is that of representing themselves to be physicians and contracting to heal invalids for sums running from $50 to $250, according to the seriousness of the ailment, and the estimated wealth of the patient. The contracts turn out to be notes of hand and have been invariably discounted at some banks.

This attorney will be asked for a continuance so that he may have an opportunity to study the evidence. This will probably be granted and the case may then be heard at a special term in June.

Then they shook hands and went home to dinner. "As soon as I had him shaved I found a scar on his face I put there myself when we were playing Indians twenty years ago," Rich said. "We were separated when boys and had lost each other for twenty years."

Think Husband Killed Her.

Cincinnati, Jan. 31.—Detectives raided a house and arrested six persons on suspicion in connection with the death of Mrs. Jesse Van Zandt whose body, bound and gagged and literally roasted over a gas stove, was found in the kitchen of her home Saturday. This was the only important development in the case. Those taken into custody are Charles Berry, Edward Rattman, Patrick Langen, Ada Friendship, Mrs. Mary Ford and the latter's 14-year-old daughter, Lilly Ford. The detectives say that Jesse Van Zandt, husband of the murdered woman, who is being held on suspicion, spent considerable time recently in the raided house with Agnes Berry, sister of one of the men arrested, and it is believed her testimony will develop something on which formal charges against Van Zandt may be based. Van Zandt continued to assert his innocence. The police claim that he has made conflicting statements.

The capital stock of the company was increased to $25,000 and articles of incorporation have been applied for. Work on the building and construction of the lines, etc., will be pushed as rapidly as the weather will permit, and soon Gregory will have an excellent electric light and power plant in operation.

The Underpaid Preacher.

Dodge Criterion: At a recent meeting of the Elkhorn Valley Medical association held at Norfolk, it was stated that it had long been the custom of physicians to give their services free to clergymen and their families, and it was resolved to discontinue the custom. There is no good reason why ministers should not pay the same as others. A minister should receive a salary sufficient to enable him to live as other people do, and pay for it. We have noticed that underpaid ministers are often embarrassed because they are compelled to appear as objects of charity. Most of them are fitted by education for lucrative positions, yet he is expected to get along on salary that most of his parishioners would indignantly reject.

FIGHT TAFT'S POLICIES.

Some Insurgents Won't Support Rail and Conservation Ideas. Washington, Jan. 29.—The torn state in which the republican party in congress finds itself is shown by the antagonisms which exist not only with respect to the house organization, but in reference to the president's legislative program. The original revolt is against the rules which govern the house and the reign of Speaker Cannon. Opposition has developed among the standpat republicans to the conservation of resources recommendations of President Taft. In the same quarter there is opposition to President Taft's recommendations for the creation of a postal savings bank system. Among the insurgents and some of the standpat republicans there is opposition to the administration's bill for the regulation of railroads. Objection to the ship subsidy legislation prevails in both factions. The foregoing shows that the dove of peace has not returned to its nest on the majority side of the house of representatives. Realizing this fact, President Taft proposes to continue to use his good offices to remove the differences which prevail in the hope that before the present session of congress closes the party will be unified. Through the decision to supersede the committee on rules by caucus action the administration believes one cause of the disagreement among the republicans in the house has been removed. The expectation that Cannon will announce his determination not to be a candidate for reelection as speaker will have, it is hoped, a further soothing effect. Finally, the enactment of legislation in accordance with the provisions of the republican platform will form a base upon which the entire party may stand. The insurgents are expressing some dissatisfaction with the caucus arrangement, believing it to be a trap. They fear if they go into a caucus resolution will be put through making the decision of the majority binding upon all members of the party. There are also some features of Mr. Taft's legislative program which they do not feel they can support. For instance, there are details of the administration's railroad bill which, in their judgment, practically destroy the principles enunciated by the president in his special message. Suppose they ask that the administration bill is presented at the caucus as a party measure. Must they pledge themselves to vote for a measure which, in their view, fails to reach the evils of which the country now complains? The insurgents insist that in the agreement reached by Representative Hayes with the president no decision was reached with respect to future caucuses. At the same time it is apparent to insurgents that they will be placed in an embarrassing position by a refusal to attend a meeting called to consider a recommendation of the president based upon a platform promise. To stay away undoubtedly would lend more or less weight to the charge that they were not republicans.

APPENDIX WORTH $25,000.

Omaha Woman Sues Surgeon Who Cut it Out. Omaha, Neb., Jan. 29.—Special Figuring that her appendix was worth $25,000, Miss Lillian Robotham, a pretty young woman of Omaha, has sued Dr. Arthur C. Stokes for this sum, alleging that she has sustained damages by reason of having the apparently useless organ removed from her anatomy without her knowledge or consent. In her petition filed in court Miss Robotham alleges that she was given a dose of morphine, put into a deep sleep and while sleeping the appendix that was "well and hearty" was cut out. Dr. Stokes is a well-known surgeon of Omaha, but he refuses to discuss the suit brought against him by Miss Robotham, contending that it will be his turn to talk when called upon by the witness stand to make his defense. As Miss Robotham tells the story, last May she visited Dr. Stokes and talked with him with reference to a treatment for enlarged varicose veins. At that time, so she avers, he told her that the trouble with her was that she had an appendix that needed to be removed. "I did not believe this," states the plaintiff in her petition, "although he said it had gone to such a point that operation was necessary." In October Miss Robotham says she again called on the doctor and had a consultation with him, with the result that on the last day of the month she went to the Swedish hospital, where she expected to have an operation on the veins. On the following day, when the operation was to have been performed, she was taken into the operating room, given morphine and became unconscious. When she came out from under the influence of the drug she says there was a small incision where the varicose vein had been and a still larger one at a point where she afterward had formerly rested. She afterwards found out that while unconscious her appendix had been removed. Now she wants damages.

Stuart Has Another Fire. Stuart, Neb., Jan. 31.—Special to The News: Stuart's second disastrous fire for January occurred Saturday, resulting in the total destruction of the Checkered livery barn, owned by George Robertson & Co., and serious damage to F. C. Horak's ice house, which stood at the rear of his meat market, just across the alley from the burned barn. D. W. Stuart's general merchandise store also stood flush with the alley and was in the greatest jeopardy for a time. This store and the meat market could hardly have been saved had it not been for the splendid equipment which this town now has for fighting fire. The contents of Stuart's store, the meat market and B. Shearer's harness store were hastily moved into the street, as these buildings at one time were all on fire and it was thought that they were all doomed. As was the case January 3, the elements were favorable. Only a light wind was blowing, and snow was falling. The liverymen saved all of their stock, buggies, and auto. Three horses belonging to outside parties were burned. One was a fine driving horse, the property of B. C. Farner. The liverymen's loss will probably reach $2,000. They carried $1,000 insurance. All of the other parties who sustained damage either by fire or in moving their goods carried insurance and no doubt will be reimbursed by the companies. The livery barn, it is understood, is to be rebuilt with cement stone. The fire is said to have started from a lantern that had been used by a mail carrier in harnessing his team, and had been left burning in a remote corner of the barn.

Astronomers Discover That the Visitor's Tail Has Split. New York Jan. 31.—The latest bulletin from the Columbia university astronomers on the subject of Comet A, 1910, as the astronomers call the De Rake comet, calls attention to the splitting of its tail, which was first reported in dispatches from the west. The announcement says: "The splitting in the tails of comets has been noticed before, but the causes of the phenomenon are not definitely known. It may be due to electrical disturbances. "The discovery of sodium in the composition of a comet is very unusual, and the presence of sodium may account for the unusual brilliancy of the present visitor. Usually comets are composed of hydro-carbons. "What the present comet is, what is its orbit and how great is its velocity cannot yet be known. Its visit was altogether unexpected."

HOW TO MAKE A TEA GOWN. Something New and Fine Suggested by a New York Modiste. New York, Jan. 31.—These hints for a woman's wardrobe were given out by a fashionable modiste here today: "For a tea gown or the sort of dress worn invariably at tea time in country houses, a skirt of Irish lace with a loose coat of the same, so long that it descends to the ankles and made over light tinted colored satin, is a veritable robe de luxe. "For what we used to call our 'Sunday best frock' this is a good example: "A skirt with velvet at the hem reaching half a yard up, cut in V shape at side and headed by gilette above, meeting kilt plaited chiffon; the sleeves are plaited also; the square cut bodice is filled with lace; the front has a heavy stonacher of black gilette, with pendant ornaments at the side. "A cashmere and silk gown has a lace front, a lace strap confining the fullness at the back, the bodice all lace, perfectly plain, descending as a cuirass to well below the hips, stay height on the bodice, with a square chemisette of lace set over it. The short sleeves are tucked horizontally, descending to the elbow, meeting lace under sleeves. "A pink chiffon frock is plain and untrimmed about the skirt, with runners heading the fullness round the hips, meeting a corset of heavily embroidered silk, pointed back and front. Plaitings of chiffon headed by lace, which edge the short sleeves, constitute the low bodice. "A black satin may be plain about the skirt, with a full bodice, and tunic covering the front, the sleeves
