They have from astronomical figures estimated that the comet should be seen here at 4:30 this morning, but failing will not give up their search for a glimpse of the comet, however,

Not alone are these two men interested in the visiting comet. Fred Schiller, brother of R. F. Schiller of Central City, proprietor of the Oxnard hotel, who is a visitor here, although having the misfortune to have been born blind, is taken in as a confidant by Mr. Currier who while peering through his glass explains to Mr. Schiller the various stars he sees in the heavens. Mr. Schiller is well post ed on the movements of the comet having been educated in some of the best universities for the blind and having associated for many years with a number of professional men, he is not ignorant of the movements of the world about him with which, although he sees nothing, he keeps in close touch. Each evening Mr. Schiller's voice can be heard in the lobby calling to Mr. Currier: "The comet in sight. Will?"

And up to this time the answer has always been: "Not yet, Fred."
