One of the pleasant social events of the spring was the May party given by the Elks last night to members and friends. An unusually large crowd attended, the music was good and the evening altogether a delightful one.

Mrs. S. M. Braden entertained twelve ladies at bridge on Tuesday afternoon. The honors went to Mrs. J. C. S. Wells, jr., of Omaha. A dainty supper was served by the hostess at the close of the afternoon.

Mrs. E. H. Kuleman, Mrs. D. S. Roseborough and Mrs. J. F. Phinney were hostesses at a Kensington last Saturday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Kuleman on Norfolk avenue.

A Wayne Wedding.

Hasn't Norfolk Got the "Bug?"

What's the answer? Isn't Norfolk as sportily inclined with the gambling fever when it comes to grain futures as many smaller towns in the state, or do the local speculators do their business away from home?

Have Norfolk grain speculators been nipped at the game and got cold feet, or is this a community of level-headed, sober-minded, conservative beings who never feel in their blood the tingle of the gambling germ?

The closing of the Gooch grain brokerage office in Norfolk this week because of lack of business, and the federal government's campaign to rid the country of bucket shops, brings to Norfolk's attention the fact that, rather singularly when the size of the town is considered, there never yet has been a grain brokerage office in this city that could get enough business to make it pay.

Within the past twenty years there have been a half dozen brokerage offices, each one running for a few months or perhaps a year, but none of them remaining permanently, as they have in Columbus, West Point and some other smaller towns.

Coming to Norfolk.

Plainview News: J. K. Smith has purchased a fine forty-six acre suburban tract of land just a mile east of the Junction at Norfolk recently, and expects to move onto the same, leaving here about a week from next Tuesday. It is a fine little place and has bran new improvements which will make it an ideal little home for them to keep some stock and yet be handy to town. He will keep his Plainview property and perhaps rent it to some good tenant who will look after his crop of winter potatoes. We are sorry to see J. K. and his estimable wife planning to leave the city, but our best wishes go with them wherever they may reside.

Trial to Last All Next Week.

Neligh, Neb., May 7.—Special to The News: Of all the inconveniences encountered as a witness for the state in the McKay-Brown murder trial now on in this city, Henry Nagel of Brunswick has had the worst experience. He was placed upon the stand on the afternoon of Thursday, occupying the same seat during the entire day of Friday and a great portion of today.

It may be stated at this time that Mr. Nagel was among the first persons discovering the lifeless body of Albert G. Brown in the cellar of his home on or about the 8th day of December, 1909.

The rigid cross-examination of Senator Allen has not in the least varied his previous statements in regard to the finding of the body, the axe, the condition of the stove, and its breakage, and the general disorder of the furniture in the room of the murdered man. He became confused during a late hour in the afternoon of yesterday and absolutely could not positively identify any of the exhibits previously introduced by the state. According to his statements on the stand blood stains were in evidence leading from the sitting room through the kitchen into the cellar. He also stated as a certain fact of the footprints in the snow that led from the Brown home to that of the accused.

After the conclusion of the testimony of Mr. Nagel, W. W. Buckmaster, town marshal, who accompanied the foregoing witness, and discovered the body of the murdered man, will be called upon the stand next. It is expected that before the state and defendant's attorneys will be through with him, that two days will have been consumed.

O. A. Williams, attorney for the defendant, stated last evening that the case without doubt will drag along until the latter part of next week.

It is stated authoritatively today that the trial of F. M. Thornberg, charged with murdering his neighbor, A. G. Rakow, will not come up at this term of court, but will be held at a special term of court in June.

Doctors Meet Next Week.

Dr. P. H. Salter of Norfolk President of State Association.

Norfolk will be in evidence at the forty-second annual meeting of the Nebraska State Medical Association, to be held in Lincoln next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. Dr. P. H. Salter of this city is president of the society and will deliver his annual address in the Temple Auditorium on Wednesday night at 8:30, following a reception for him at 8 o'clock.

Dr. J. H. Mackay of this city is on the program at a medical session for Tuesday afternoon, for a paper entitled, "Health, a National Asset."

Dr. J. L. Greene of Springfield, Ill., formerly superintendent of the Norfolk insane hospital but now chairman of the Illinois board of control, will discuss "The Non-Partisan Control of State Institutions."

Dr. F. A. Long of Madison is a delegate to the American Medical association from the state society and will report.

Besides being president of the association, Dr. Salter is a member of the legislative committee.

Among the members of the board of councilors are: Dr. D. W. Beattie, Neligh; Dr. J. P. Gilligan, O'Neill.

Among the members of the house of delegates are: Dr. J. M. O'Connell, Ponca; Dr. C. C. Johnson, Creighton; Dr. L. R. Pheasant, Pierce; Dr. H. J. White, Ainsworth; Dr. J. J. Williams, Wayne.

In conjunction with this meeting will be a session of the Nebraska State Health association of which Dr. Mackay of Norfolk is treasurer, Dr. F. A. Long of Madison is on this program for a paper entitled, "The Failure of Quarantine Regulations in Rural Nebraska." Dr. Mackay will read his paper before this society, too.

Norfolk Man Talked Out.

Lincoln State Journal: An incident not on the program of the Nebraska Electrical association, which is the proceedings of the final day, in the shape of a speech by E. A. Bullock of Norfolk severely criticizing Mayor Love of Lincoln because the latter in his welcoming address on Tuesday made some remarks favorable to municipal ownership and cited Lincoln's experience with waterworks and electric light. Mr. Bullock characterized this talk as an "insult" to the association and wanted to take the convention next year to some city where it would be "welcome." His address created a great deal of stir but in the afternoon everything was smoothed over and the meeting concluded with no further display of feeling.

All of the old officers were re-elected except two. The new list is as follows: President, B. C. Adams, Lincoln; vice president, F. H. Brooks, Lincoln; secretary and treasurer, Frank McMaster, Beatrice, Executive committee—E. A. Bullock, Norfolk; B. P. Egan, Nebraska City; William J. Scott, Kearney. Those retiring are Joel M. Roberts of York as vice president and L. W. Schwingel as treasurer, neither caring to continue in an official position.

No Meeting Place Named.

No meeting place was named for 1911, but the executive committee, which includes the three principal officers, was empowered to make a choice. President Adams extended an invitation for the association to meet in Lincoln again. Before adjourning, the convention on Bullock's motion extended a vote of thanks to the New Lindell hotel management for its courtesies and attentions, to the newspapers for publicity of the proceeding, and to the Lincoln Traction company for furnishing a special car on which members were taken to inspect the plants of that corporation and the Lincoln Gas & Electric Light company.

Didn't Stick to Text.

Mr. Bullock's speech was easily the leading feature of the day's proceedings. He took the floor, as he said, to make a report of the Iowa convention held recently at Sioux City, but soon passed off of that subject and began discussing the part of Mayor Love's address to which he had taken exception.

"The next time our association meets," said Bullock, "I hope it will be in a place where we will be welcomed. If I have anything to do with it, I will try to find some city which will feel honored to have us come and glad to receive the money we pay for hotel accommodations, cigars and stuff like that. Perhaps we can find a city whose mayor will not insult us when he is graciously asked to give an address of welcome."

"When we met at Omaha last year, Mayor Dahlgren spoke. He is not of my politics and on some things I don't believe the same way he does. I have heard two or three times that Mayor Dahlgren drinks too much, but I want to say that he's a gentleman. He may be opposed to county option, but he's a gentleman. It has been whispered also that once or twice in his life he has played a few cards, but he's a gentleman." The word "gentleman" was pronounced with fine scorn each time, indicating that the speaker's opinion of Mayor Love was quite different. Bullock continued:

"Mayor Dahlgren never went out of his way to slap any man, woman or child. He is a man, and if you don't like his politics, he would not stand up and make statements which were untrue, through ignorance, nor would he want to hurt your feelings in any such way. He is too smart and too truthful a man to stand before you and lie. I hope that somewhere in Nebraska we shall receive an invitation from some city that has a gentleman for its mayor—an intelligent gentleman, if you please."

Bullock concluded his speech and left the floor at this point. There was some applause on one side of the room from Omaha men and a few others, among whom Bullock had been sitting before he addressed the convention. There was no further demonstration either way, and President Adams stated that the convention would adjourn for luncheon.

Adams Bids for Convention.

Upon calling the convention to order in the afternoon, President Adams spoke as follows:

"I am very anxious personally that the convention next year shall come to Lincoln, and in advocating Lincoln as the next meeting place I want to point out one or two features in reference to Lincoln as a location. You will all have to admit, I believe, that the newspapers in Lincoln have given us very fair consideration in writing up our meetings; they have given us prominent places in the newspapers and have written what we have said. It is possible for our papers to give us much more publicity than the Omaha papers, for instance, can give us. What publicity we do get here shows up more prominently than it does there."

"In reference to Mayor Love's remarks, I must say in justice to the mayor, that he has made about the same speech that he made to us to nearly every convention that has come to Lincoln, and he was just unfortunate in giving us the same line of talk that the others get."

"As has already been pointed out by Mr. Bullock, we have been fortunate in getting everybody to come to our convention, to attend our meetings and take an active part. That has been largely due to the fact that we have had no other attraction of greater or less importance and you have had to come here, and I am boosting for Lincoln on this proposition and I hope to get this convention here next year."

Mr. Bullock offered an expression seconding part of President Adams' remarks. He closed the incident by saying:

"I want to endorse what has been said in regard to the newspapers of Lincoln, heartily; they have given us very fair reports and very full reports, considering their space, and they have liberally given us space in their newspapers. I am informed during the noon hour that Mayor Love never thought that he was doing anything wrong or that he was making any misstatement; he was simply mistaken, and if that is intended as an apology it is accepted as such by me."

Wayne Normal Notes.

The new term opened the 25th of last month with an enrollment equal to that of a year ago.

Prof. John Power, who came from the university to take the place vacated by Professor Bright, is very popular with the students.

Mrs. Pile has taken Mrs. Bright's work until Miss Bechtel comes, which will be the middle of the term.

Mrs. Helen Pile-Newton left for her home in Rochester, N. Y., Thursday. Fred and Jim Pile accompanied her as far as Sioux City.

New students are enrolling this week, the second week of the term. Among the number are Mary Davis, Madison; Hulda and Edla Pearsch, Wausa; Esther Bengtson, Wausa; Connie Andrew, Bloomfield.

Our garden is having a rather strenuous time for an existence, but, despite all setbacks, we expect to be able to report a good crop later on.

Superintendent E. A. Murphy of Knox county was a welcome visitor on the Hill Tuesday.

Professor Conn, who was elected president of the school when it is taken over by the state, took supper at the college Saturday. Professor Conn was one of the most intimate friends of the founder of this school and his selection as president pleases all.

The play given by the elocution department was most entertaining. Miss Carroll is a most efficient instructor. That the summer term will be large is assured. Daily letters are coming in for reservations of rooms in the dormitories. Several new instructors will be added to the faculty. Mr. Reese Solomon of Norfolk will have charge of the vocal music, which is assurance that that department will be here in charge of the manual training.

ON THE Stage

The Crystal's Overland Four were not on this week but the theater made up for their absence with a number of good reels of pictures, which were appreciated by good houses every night.

The Chappell and McPherson team played to a record breaking house this week at the Lyric. The Lyric Comedy company also were on for a comedy sketch which was well received by a number of full houses. "A Norfolk Hotel" was the title of their sketch.

Next week Norfolk sees the beginning of the every Saturday engagement of the Kennedy Stock company, who will appear at the Auditorium each Saturday night for twelve weeks. The company is composed of clever people, and, at popular prices, their engagements are expected to be well received. "When We Were Twenty-One" is the first week's bill.

Twain as Horsethief.

Deadwood, S. D., May 7.—As far back as 1864, when he was a raw newspaper correspondent at Carson City, Nev., the late Mark Twain showed the humor that was afterward to be the dominant characteristic of his life. The story of how he posed as a horsethief, and the photograph he used for that purpose, have never before been published. They are in the possession of Major A. J. Simmons of this city, a former comrade of Clemens, and one of the co-conspirators in the joke.

Major Simmons, Clemens and the late Judge William H. Claggett of this city were intimate friends in Carson City in 1864, just at the time when three horsethieves were being sought by the vigilantes. Twain conceived the idea of posing as the criminals, and took Simmons and Claggett to the photographer's, where the trio had their picture taken. Twain then wrote on the back of the photograph, "Three villains recently hung by the vigilantes at Aurora, Nev.," and the day after the hanging circulated the photograph in Carson City to such good effect that many who did not know the originals in the photograph took them for the dead bandits.

Hoskins Is Now "Dry."

Remonstrance Against Saloon License Carried Up to Court.

Hoskins is now a town ranked in the "dry" column and will so remain until the district court decides otherwise. A two days' trial owing to a remonstrance filed by August Deck against Fred Zieler, a petitioner there, is the cause of the trouble. The trial ended Thursday with the town board deciding in favor of the petitioner. Deck ordered a transcript and will carry the case to the court.

A notice of appeal was immediately served on the town board which restrains Zieler from opening his saloon. County Attorney Davis and F. A. Barry of Wayne were counsels for the remonstrator and H. E. Simans of Winslow for the petitioner.

Freight Rates Hurt Norfolk.

Two wholesale grocers were in Norfolk recently looking over the situation here with the intention of starting in business in this field, but changed their minds when they found that they could ship from Omaha into any point of this territory as cheap as from Norfolk. Adding the local freight rate from Omaha to Norfolk for shipping into this point, it was found that they would be very materially ahead of the game by virtue of the Omaha location.

The location of Norfolk appealed to these men as an ideal one for a wholesale establishment. They found the city discriminated against in the matter of freight rates and thus another prospective enterprise for this city faded away.

SHOE SALESWOMAN WITH CORNS

Admits, Though, That She Ought to Know Better.

A saleswoman in a Norfolk shoe store is suffering with corns.

This statement, although not sensational, is causing gossip among shoe clerks in town who believe a salesperson in a shoe store should never suffer from such ailments.

"I know," says the young woman, "that I should not have 'em, because I work in a shoe store, but nevertheless I sure suffer with them. Every time before it storms my feet hurt and I know the next day it's going to rain."

HAND PAINTED CLOAKS.

That's What's Coming in Norfolk, a Painter Says.

Norfolk women will soon be wearing cloaks and capes decorated with hand painting. Many of the military cloaks worn by Norfolk women already are decorated with hand painted trimmings which now seems to be the rage here and in the east. A fresco painter here was called on by a Norfolk lady who employed him to trim her cloak.

"After it was finished," says the painter, "it surely looked very pretty and I am going to surprise my wife by decorating her cloak the same way."
