

REDS MAKE GOOD FARMERS.

Great Strides Shown by the Winnebago Indians. Winnebago, Neb., July 26.—Never have any of Uncle Sam's Indian wards made such progress toward becoming genuine American citizens as have the Nebraska Winnebagos during the past eighteen months.

Mr. Kneale's report shows that the Winnebagos are becoming industrious and sober. Not more than twenty or twenty-five members of the tribe are now classed as drunkards, while hundreds of them are farming intelligently with excellent prospects for good crops.

The twelve men who are the councilmen for the tribe are among the progressives. Most of them are well educated and they live in respectable homes and work on their farms or at their trades.

At a council held this week at the Flagpole hill Superintendent Kneale announced the names of the Winnebagos who will be permitted to do their own leasing in coming seasons.

The superintendent's annual report shows that the Winnebagos are farming about 8,000 acres of their own land this year. Inspection by the expert farmers of the reservation indicated that much of the land has been efficiently farmed.
