Can Fred Thompson Win?

Chicago, Aug. 12.—Fred Thompson, champion all-around athlete of the United States, will contest with nine headliners in the amateurs' union championship events here today. Thompson, who moved down all opponents while representing Los Angeles, will appear for the orange and black of Princeton. F. Holmes, the negro who carried off first honors in the Gallic meet here Sunday expected to be a strong contestant.

They Broke Camp Monday.

Tomorrow night after the 10:30 p. m. bell tolls announcing the hour for retirement and the signal to pull down the flaps of the tents and guard the wall tents against shadow moving pictures that are made by the electric lights, a "family" close to 100 strong, will look their last upon the beautiful chautauqua grounds they have called "home" for more than ten days.

Constable A. W. Finkhouse will ring that signal bell and after he is assured that all of the chautauqua family are tucked away behind the mosquito bars in safety he will roll his good natured body between heavy quilts in his tent and give a mournful sigh which will mean that he has "lost the best job of the year."

The chautauqua this year has been a great success. The attendance has been about the best and it is believed the chautauqua company will no longer care for a guaranty. Manager Gose is jubilant over the season's work and declares Norfolk getting better every year. His work has been pleasant, he says, and the "family" has been well behaved.

Ten in a Tent.

The "family" are the inhabitants of the various forty-one tents now on the grounds. In each tent there are at least two people and sometimes, when "visitors" have come, there have been counted as many as ten.

There is "system" among the "family" and there is "regulation." Constable Finkhouse calls it "order" but the "family" declared it "fun."

"There has been more of an informal feeling among this year's campers than at any chautauqua I have ever attended," says Manager Gose. "It has been like one big family and every child belongs to anyone, because it seems as if everyone is interested in the welfare of the other."

The "system" referred to is the plan instigated by Manager Gose and Constable Finkhouse. Lights are out at 10:30 and the "family" is assured of both a good night's sleep and good protection.

The routine of a day's work at the grounds is interesting and it has been rehearsed like clockwork for at least ten days. Manager Gose turns on the sunrise alarm by clanging the bell, or giving an account of the next day's program to some sleepy eyed business man, whose face is submerged in a tin basin filled with tar soap and Northfork river water. The washstand is conveniently close to the tent door and is built of "home made" construction.

The regular fishing march is rehearsed early after the "wash" and sometimes before. Women, children and even the business men make haste in all sorts of uniforms to the edge of the river where often a two-pound catfish had been captured for breakfast. The breakfast is made on the grounds. There are four "cook" tents and the "family" have not yet quarrelled who was to have possession first.

Fish for Breakfast.
Fish are often divided with less lucky members of the family and the smell of the frying fish, and probably bacon from another direction, has put a keen touch to the appetite, even though it be of the poorest construction. Miss Lucile Hazen and Elder Kirkpatrick, both members of the younger generation of the chautauqua family, are the champion fishers, both having captured two pounders.

The "men folks" unwillingly leave camp for the more strenuous work of life after the breakfast and the usual smoke. The womenfolk get busy and "tidy up" the tents and seek shady spots where they hold a "sewing party" or discuss the performances in the big tent during the evening before.

The arrival of the grocery and meat wagons and even the milk and ice man announce that noon is close and the hungry men will soon be back. Lunchtime arrives with amazing rapidity and the men can be seen trudging by the old mill stream path which leads to the camp. There are encircling bundles and packages of eatables, and soon the scenes of peace and prosperity are all over the camp.

Very few of the men leave after that noonday meal and the hammocks and cots are captured for a short "siesta." This slumber is rudely awakened by the arrival in the middle of the plaza of either Constable Finkhouse or Manager Gose, who clangs away with the bell which announces that some celebrated speaker or some talented body of musicians will endeavor to please them.

After being entertained, the "family" return "home" and after short conferences the bathing suits are donned and a cool refreshing swim is enjoyed in the river. Guests have arrived at the camp by this time and the bathers return only to be hurried into clothing more adapted for the occasion. Tea is served and some new while others entertain the visitors.

At 7:20 the signal bell is again clanging the announcement that the big tent is being filled up with "neighbors" and more entertainments are enjoyed. There is little time for the "family" after this and the open air congregation slip off their shoes and take refuge in the hammocks and easy chairs in front of their tents. Electric lights burn brightly. Soon the word is passed that the "lights out" bell will ring. Chairs and pillows are hustled into the exterior. Beds are made ready and the flaps of the tents are closed. One by one the lights go out and after the echo of the good-night has drifted over the Northfork river into the green fields beyond, the guardian of the chautauqua, making his rounds, wonders at the queer shadows which are reflected against the walls of the tents. The last light has been turned off and the moon shines brightly over the home of the peaceful "family."

Miss Mattie Carstensen has charge of the Killian rest tent which has proved a great comfort to many of the visitors. The crying babe has often been put into good humor in this tent. The tent is provided with all luxuries for womankind.

The W. C. T. U. tent, in charge of Mrs. Brewer, has been a great help and has protected many from the heat of the sun and a short rest between the many entertainments.

Among the owners of the tents on the grounds are: A. L. Killian, W. C. T. U., Mrs. Brewer, R. B. Hyde, Miss Esther Wetzel and four friends of Madison, Ed Seifert, W. R. Hoffman, G. A. Kuhl, Mrs. C. C. Doughty, Z. H. Bateman, Louis Lederer, C. H. Sterner, L. Sessions, A. Binson, G. T. Sprecher, D. Rees, J. W. Kirkpatrick, M. C. Hazen, L. M. Beeler, E. R. Hayes, George Williams, B. Wille, J. H. Coleman, A. W. Finkhouse, C. P. Parish.

Many of the campers declared they will not break up camp immediately. Some will remain a few days longer on the grounds.

SPECIAL TRAIN TO NELIGH.

C. L. Wattle's came to Norfolk from Neligh yesterday and secured from Gen. Supt. Braden of the Northwestern a promise of special trains for Thursday and Friday of next week to run from Norfolk to Neligh to take care of the people going to the aviation meet.

The train leaving Norfolk will make connection with the Winner and M. & O. trains, and leave the Seventh street depot at 11:20 a. m., stopping at all intermediate points. Returning the train will leave Neligh at 8 p. m.

The committee on arrangements there are making big preparations to handle the crowds and to carry off the three big events each day of fights by William Blakely in his Curtiss biplane, the trotting and pacing events in the race meet, and the baseball games.

Every visitor will be taken care of. The committee guarantees the best of order and has prepared to handle 10,000 people on both Thursday and Friday.

Extra cars are to be attached to all trains from the west and immense crowds are planning to come from all along the line west of here.
