Why the Money Trust Wants War.

The Currello Reised On Wall Street's Underworld. - How the War Plants of Big Business Promise to Bring the Cores of Militarism Upon Our Country.

But who, at the dictum of the Money Trust, will toil to pay for those untold millions to be spent by our country on armament for the upkeep of the new war plants? Who, at the dictum of the Money Trust, must shed their blood in the wars that are "followed by others"? Brothers, you and I.

Yes, my thoughtless brothers, and then we, too, shall echo the bitter groans we have heard emitted by despairing millions, staggering Europe's monarchies.

And now are we to be the dupes of Wall Street "patriots"? If we investigate the patriotism of the members of the Money Trust we shall find it to be thin-skinned, in great fortunes, and then to seek new homes in France and England for reasons such as to escape unpleasant public inquiries, or that in the hope of soon secreting there be approved by their fellow country-

I refer to expatriates such James Stillman, one-time president some time will be ended, and the of the National City Bank; James Money Trust's war munitions plants Hazen Hyde, of insurance scandal must not be idle. But when the day of trouble comes, such fine gentry troop back nome, as these have done. And then they read us a lesson in patriotism and tell us that we must fight for the countries of their adoption,

Yes, they say that to us; we, the millions who stay here and toil and suffer for our country's good; we, who are descended from races other than the English; we, whose fathers tilled the soil in pioneer days, and shed their blood in all our country's wars.

They tell us that we must fight for England, these expatriates, these lip-patriots, their pockets fat with British gold—we must fight for Eng-land, the hereditary enemy of our land, for her against whom our for England, our

The New York newspapers know that what I write about the Money Trust is true, but they do not dare to print the truth. And that is why it is printed in The Fatherland. No more cold-blooded, rapacious conspiracy was ever concocted than this robbery of American commerce under the guise of legitimate war operations. Recently Great Britain has made cotton contraband, so that it may be seized without compensation to the owner. At the same time British exports of cotton to countries adjacent to Germany are rapidly increasing. Heretofore cotton cargoes were paid for; now they are merely robbed on the high seas.

The United States government has delayed making an effectual protest to Great Britain against this high-sea piracy because of the complications arising from the Lusitania, Arabic and similar horrors, which fixed public attention upon they may lead lives that would not the questions affecting life rather than property. In the meantime, the British policy of destroying American trade relations with Holland, Denmark, Norway and Sweden has been pursued with the utmost diligence. It is time that the United States should call all offenders to account. The commercial war that being waged against this country calls for decisive action, unless the United States is willing to become an adjunct to the British commercial system.
