RECITAL BY ANDREW REED.

Monday evening, February 21st, at the Grove M. E. Church, a very remarkable entertainment was given. I say remarkable, because of the fact that a boy living in our very midst presented a program that ranged from Edgar Allen Poe to Neil O'Brien, minstrel.

His rendition of the "Raven," by Poe, was convincing and realistic; his tonal effects and facial expression were appealing and sad; he painted a most beautiful picture of the mysterious visitor.

Next he gave us James Thornton's famous monologue in a heavy humorous voice. It was enjoyed very much. He then gave a scene from "The Devil," one of the dialogues between "Karl" and "the Devil."

In this his facial expression was full of egotism and deceit; his voice was cunning, and persuasive. Old Satan must have been proud of his imp. "The Indian's Address to the White Man" was humane and positive.

Then from an argument of "Life and Death" he gave us Neil O'Brien's quaint monologue in Negro dialect. The dialect was held throughout and the lines read in a droll manner. It's too bad more of our people were not out to hear him.

This young man gives great promise of becoming a character actor of high order.

I trust the time will come that the people will know Andrew Reed as the artist that he is.

DAN DESDUNES.

PLEASED WITH MONITOR.

Sheridan, Wyo., Feb. 24, 1916.

Dear Father Williams:

You have been sending me The Monitor almost regularly since you began to edit it, which was in July or August, if I am not mistaken, so I am enclosing $2.00, one to pay up for the first year, and the other for a year to come.

We look forward to the coming of The Monitor every week with eagerness, for it not only gives us the best of race news, but occasionally we see personal mention of those we know in Omaha.

Thanking you most kindly for having sent the paper to us, and with best wishes for its continued success, I am, as ever,

Your friend and well wisher,
ANDERSON CHENAULT.
