Separate the Figures When You Call a Telephone Number

Always give a telephone number to the operator slowly and distinctly.

Separate the figures of a telephone number when calling, as "one, oh, seven," for 107, with a slight pause between each figure.

Don't transpose the figures in a number. For example, don't ask for 389 when you want 398. Many people do this unconsciously. Always look in the directory first.

Don't mumble your telephone conversation through a cigar or address the wall. Talk directly into the telephone with your lips not more than an inch away.

Don't tip the telephone over when you talk; hold it in a vertical position.
