

MIGRATION IS ADVISED
BY M'ADOO
Secretary of Treasury Says Most Patriotic Duty is Seek Work Best Suited, and if Necessary, Move to Other Parts.

Washington.—Secretary McAdoo, on March 16, called on American labor not to object if the nation's war policy of conserving credit results in curtailed building operations, but to seek other employment, if necessary, as a patriotic duty.

In a letter to Samuel Gompers, answering a protest by the Building Trades Council of San Francisco and other labor unions against shutting down of buildings during the war, McAdoo said:

"Men are needed to build ships, to build houses to house men working in the shipyards, to erect plants to produce war material, to run our railroads, to operate war industries, and to produce food required by the Allies and ourselves. These are needs already great and will increase, not lessen, as the war progresses. If our wage earners are unable to find employment for which they are best fitted and which they would prefer, or if they are unable to find employment where it would be most convenient for them to work, the opportunity is presented to render a most patriotic service in this period of national stress by seeking other kinds of employment, and if need be, move to other districts where work is to be had."

The above is significant inasmuch as the migration of thousands of Negroes from the South, during 1917, was solely for the purpose of filling the shortage of labor, in important industries, due to war. Manufacturers saw the need of Negro labor to keep the plants open. The hostility of the unions, in several localities, has prevented this safeguard, and the result is as stated above.

The matter was first called to the attention of Adj. Gen. McCain, who saw fit to retire Col. Charles Young on recommendation of a medical board, but the adjutant stated in his reply that Lieut. Tribbett is accused of violating a state ordinance and the case must be dealt with accordingly. Attorney Robert Fortune is fighting in the interest of Lieut. Tribbett, who is now stationed at Fort Sill.
