Bluffs Soldier Meets Death Overseas

Another Council Bluffs man has surrendered his life in the war against the Hun. He is Luther H. Chorp, Colored, an enlisted man engaged as a stevedore, unloading transport ships on the other side. A relative, Mrs. M. A. Davis, 1230 Seventh avenue, received a telegram from the war department announcing his death. The telegram stated that death was accidental and was due to drowning. No details were given and it is supposed that he fell overboard at some French port.

Private Chorp had lived in Council Bluffs about 15 years. He was 29 years old. For six years he was one of the porters at the Elks club and thus became widely known to the business and professional men of the city. He was also for several years porter at the barber shop at 529 Broadway. His mother is dead and his father lives at Dayton, O. His only brother is a member of a cavalry regiment now on duty in the Philippines.

Don't wait to be urged to join the W. S. S. army. What if our men in the trenches waited to be urged?

HOUSTON ENTERTAINS KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS

Fred C. Williams Resumes His Interesting Letters From Southland, Interrupted by His Illness.

Houston, Tex., June 14, 1918.

To the Readers of The Monitor:
I again become your correspondent. Leaving LaGrange on the 7th inst where I had spent more than two months in recuperating from an attack of nerves which threatened a complete breakdown of the whole system, I arrived in Houston to find it in holiday attire, as the grand lodge of K. of P. was to open its session here Monday, June 10th, which they did as per schedule.

The formal opening was marked by the splendid addresses of the welcoming and responding orators. The sessions of both the Pythians and the Courts of Calanthe were daily examples of the efficiency of the grand officers of this great fraternal organization.

The last day, Friday, ended in a blaze of glory with a street parade of the Uniform Rank, headed by Race policemen and brass band, followed by the Grand Lodge and the Grand Court officers in automobiles, which made a splendid pageant. It formed at the City Auditorium, where the daily sessions were held. This building had been turned over to the reception committee of the local lodge by the city for the use of the Grand Lodge.

The parade wended its way through the down town business section and then out the long boulevard to beautiful Emancipation Park, where the work of the week was ended by the installation of all of the re-elected Grand Lodge and Grand Court officers.

The citizens of Houston exerted themselves to entertain their visitors, whose appreciation of that hospitality is best made known by their unanimous expression:

"I wish that I could always live in Houston."

The daily papers vied with each other in giving space and publicity to the happenings at the daily sessions; the correct data being gathered and given to the papers by that dean of Race reporters, Charles Stewart, Associated Press correspondent.

The Hon. S. W. Greene, of New Orleans, La., Supreme Chancellor, was in attendance, as were also a number of notables from all over the state.

But now the session is over and the delegates and visitors have gone home, Houston is tired, so I, too, am quitting it, leaving tonight for points east. Until next week,

I am correspondingly yours,
FRED C. WILLIAMS,
Traveling Representative of The Monitor.
