colonial rule, and he warned against it. But the traders, the capitalists, were too strong for him, and suddenly the Hereros found themselves under strict military discipline, something they had never before experienced and did not understand. The German verboten appeared everywhere, and the natives were flogged, fined and imprisoned for attempting to continue in the freedom of the rights which had been theirs from time of mind.

Protests to Courts Fruitless.
Protests to German colonial courts brought neither relief nor justice; for the natives it became the sjambok humiliation and forced labor; for the German it was champagne, immunity and unbridled license.

At last the Hereros preferred to die wholesale as warriors instead of piecemeal as slaves. They rebelled in 1904, and for two years the bush ran red with the bloodiest race war known to history. The Germans deliberately and systematically set out to destroy a race with their cruelty and repeated oppression could not subdue. Gen. von Trotha was in supreme command of the German forces, and his conduct in the field was marked by a fiendishness new even for a German. No matter what were the barbarities of the Hereros, the Hun out-saved them at every turn, and on October 20, 1904, General von Trotha issued his infamous proclamation:

"I, the great general of the German soldiers, send this letter to the Herero nation. The Hereros are no longer German subjects. They have murdered and robbed and cut off the ears and the noses and other members of wounded soldiers and they are now too cowardly to fight. Whosoever brings one of the chieftains as a prisoner to one of my stations shall receive 1,000 marks, and for Samuel Maherero I will pay 5,000 marks.

"The Herero nation must now leave the country. If the people do it not I will compel them with the big tube. Within the German frontier every Herero, with or without rifle, with or without cattle, will be shot. I will not take over any more women and children, but I will either drive them back to your people or have them fired on. These are my words to the nation of the Hereros.

"The great General of the Mighty Emperor, VON TROTHA."
The Hereros would not surrender their chiefs and Von Trotha made his threats good. He shot and hanged and crucified and outraged and poisoned and starved and buried alive. So fiendish were his acts that he became the object of bitter attacks by the social democrats at home, but he was vigorously defended by the imperial chancellor in the Reichstag on December 8, 1905, when it was officially stated that he had "given proof of great humanity during the period of his command!"

Hereros Practically Wiped Out.

By that humanity the Hereros were practically exterminated or driven into the fastness of the Kalahari desert, there to "eke out a miserable existence until many finally succumbed to hunger and thirst."

While the Herero rebellion cost Germany the huge sum of $150,000,000 and more than two-thirds of the native population, it enabled her to introduce great numbers of troops and vast military supplies into the colony and otherwise to prepare for the Day.

But when The Day finally arrived in August, 1914, despite her preparations and her intriguing to foment trouble between Briton and Boer, Germany was amazed and disgusted to find Briton and Boer fighting shoulder to shoulder, and after nine short months of the most strenuous and bitter fighting known in this great war of hard and bitter fighting she was in full retreat in southwest Africa, and over Windhuk, its capital, was hoisted the Union Jack. Among other German supplies captured were enough steel horse shoes to shoe all the horses in South Africa for the next twenty years!

The Huns now have the supreme and colossal impudence to declare through Dr. Solf, their colonial minister, "that the African colonies must be returned to Germany, even if Belgium and occupied France and Alsace-Lorraine must be given in exchange therefor.

"For Germany's future position as a world power seems most closely bound up with her colonial future. . . . This balance of power created in the colonial field will, by removing future possibilities of conflict, constitute one of the best guarantees for lasting world peace!"

Germany was never more brutally and frankly Prussian than when this pedagogue, this mothpiece of the All Highest and the rest of the Potsdam gang so put himself on record. She has given further notice that her idea of a lasting peace is one where she, triumphant, will control the rest of the

U. S. GOVERNMENT GRANTS

$5,000,000 LOAN TO LIBERIA

The United States government has placed a credit of $5,000,000 for the benefit of the Republic of Liberia, to aid it through the war period. Liberian finances are threatened by reason of the breakdown of its commerce through her declaration of war against Germany. The rich products of Liberia will prove helpful to the allied governments arrayed against Germany. The committee which laid the condition of Liberia before the president of the United States, and was largely instrumental in securing this $5,000,000 loan, was made up of Dr. Robert Russa Moton, Emmett J. Scott, Dr. Ernest Lyon, Dr. James H. Dillard, Dr. Thomas Jesse Jo and William H. Lewis.
