

FIRST NEGRO BISHOP FOR AMERICAN CHURCH

of noble and Godly men which, according to the doctrine of Apostolical succession which is held and taught by the Episcopal Church, reaches back through the Church of England, Britain, Rome and Ephesus to the time of Christ and His apostles. Taking him by the hand, Bishop Tuttle conducted Bishop Demby within the sanctuary, where he knelt until he received the Holy Communion and until the service was concluded.

Music Feature of Service.

During the offertory the anthem, "How Lovely Are the Messengers that Preach Us the Gospel of Peace," was effectively sung by the choir, composed of Mesdames Blagburn, Evans and Myers, the Misses Hunter and Story and Messrs. Jones, Grady, Smallwood, Stephenson and Wright. Indeed, the musical part of this beautiful service, under the direction of All Saints' organist, Mr. W. Elmer Keeton, was most devotional and faultlessly rendered.

The offering, which was for Bishop Demby's work in Arkansas, amounted to $120. At the conclusion of the service the procession retired from the church in reverse order to that of entering, the Bishops going first and the choir last.

Congregation Numbers Thousand.

The congregation, in which was a large number of white people, numbered more than a thousand. Among the distinguished persons noticed in the congregation was Judge Dyer, who issued the injunction against the segregation ordinance which it was attempted to put in force in St. Louis some months ago. He is the uncle of Congressman L. C. Dyer, author of the federal anti-lynching bill. Both of these men are communicants of the Episcopal Church. Sister Leila Mary of the Sisterhood of St. Mary, an order of Colored Sisters, came on from Philadelphia to attend the consecration.

The visiting Colored clergy present were: The Rev. E. Robert Bennett, Buffalo, N. Y.; the Rev. Shelton C. Bishop, Pittsburgh, Pa.; the Rev. John Bruce, Nashville, Tenn.; the Rev. W. H. DeClaybrook, Hot Springs, Ark.; the Rev. Frederick C. Garrett, Memphis, Tenn.; the Rev. Daniel E. Johnson, D. D., Little Rock, Ark.; the Rev. D. E. Johnson, Jr., Keeling, Tenn.; the Rev. James E. King, Mason, Tenn.; the Rev. Henry Rahming, Kansas City, Mo.; the Rev. M. Roker, Muskogee, Okla.; the Rev. M. E. Spatches, Kansas City, Kan., and the Rev. John Albert Williams, Omaha, Neb.

All the members of the Standing Committee of Missouri were also present. They are: Clerical—The Rev. Carroll M. Davis, D. D.; the Rev. Z. B. T. Phillips, D. D., and the Rev. J. Courtney Jones. Lay—Messrs. James Bull, C. M. Jennings and J. L. Ford.

Mr. R. B. Bancroft of Little Rock, secretary of the Standing Committee of the Diocese of Arkansas, came as a lay representative of that diocese, and the Rev. A. C. McCabe, Ph. D., of Dyersburg, Tenn., a warm friend of Bishop Demby's, was one of the representatives from Tennessee. The Rev. Leonard H. Burns was another of the St. Louis clergy present. Attorney H. R. Saddler, one of the vestrymen of Bishop Demby's old parish, Emmanuel, Memphis, was among those present in the congregation.

At the celebration of the Holy Communion it was noted that members of both races, without the slightest hesitation, knelt side by side to receive the communion.

This impressive and dignified function, considered an historic and epoch-making event, will doubtless do much to emphasize the truths for which the American Episcopal Church stands.

Missionary Meeting in Afternoon.

At 5 o'clock another large congregation was present, when three splendid addresses were made by Bishop Winchester, Archdeacon Johnson and Bishop Demby. Bishop Winchester's deep interest and sincerity in the progress and development of the Colored race, as he modestly told of his work among them from the time of his diaconate to the present, was apparent to all. Among the many good things he said, incidentally, in his address, which was listened to with marked attention, was this: "This church stands and must stand against lynching and injustice, and for law and order." He told how eager he was to have the Episcopal Church do effective work among all people in Arkansas and how pleased he was the church had given him Bishop Demby to stand by his side and help him do that work. This was the anniversary of his own consecration and his brother bishop had this day received the same unction as himself.

Archdeacon Johnson in his splendid address first cleared away the cobweb which he had reason to believe was obstructing the vision of some. He stated that this church has only three orders in her ministry—bishops, priests and deacons—and in their spiritual powers and functions each one who is ordained to either of these offices is the peer of his brother. The order of the priesthood is one. The offices may differ. For example, a priest may be a missionary, a rector, a dean or an archdeacon. These names are given him for offices he may fill. But whatever his office may be his order is that of a priest, and whatever priestly function he may perform it is valid by virtue of his priesthood. So with the episcopate. A priest is consecrated a bishop. He may be called a diocesan, a coadjutor, a suffragan, an archbishop, a presiding bishop, a metropolitan, if you please. All designate offices which he may fill. But he is a bishop and his episcopal acts are valid anywhere and everywhere. He then earnestly pleaded that Bishop Demby be loyally supported in his work and given means to do it. He used very effectively the fourth Liberty loan slogan, "Don't let the Son go down," in pointing out the church's duty to support Bishop Demby.

Bishop Demby made a most favorable impression in his address. He said he had answered the call to the episcopate realizing that it was a call to hard work. He told of the more than a million and a half of Negroes in the Province of the Southwest for whom the church could do a vast deal in lifting to higher Christian citizenship. He hoped to establish an orphanage to reach and save many cast-away children and train them for God and the nation. He hoped to establish schools for Christian education, so sadly needed. For constructive work it would take money and men; but he felt that if the people would pray earnestly for him and he should work faithfully, as by God's help he hoped to do, he believed that God would send whatever was needful. His prayer would be for humility, wisdom and strength to do faithfully the work unto which he was called.

Archdeacon Phillips of Philadelphia, the senior Colored priest of the church, presided, the brief service being conducted by Rev. John Albert Williams.

OMAHA MEN GOOD DRILLERS

Fort Logan H. Root, Ark. (Special to The Monitor.)

The seven young men who left Omaha September 25 for Camp Pike are able to cope with men who have had four months of drilling. The second day at Camp Pike Arthur Edwards, Harold Bentley and LeRoy Kelly were appointed acting sergeants in the Ninety-third and Seventy-seventh casual companies. Aaron Glass, Leonard Gamble, George W. Carr and Oliver Melton were appointed corporals. Our appointments in that instance proved that our sacrifices and the untiring efforts of Lieutenants J. W. Pierce, Bob Robinson and J. Bass were not in vain. It was all accomplished by a proper salute, standing at attention and explaining the position of a soldier at "attention." Of course, our letters pushed us on over a great chasm. After seven days we were transferred.

Leonard Gamble is the only member in the party not with us now. We were told by a comrade that he was honorably discharged.

Fort Logan H. Root is a fine camp on a high hill, which furnishes a picturesque view over the neighboring plains and the city of Argentina.

Upon our arrival we were shown quarters. Two days later Edwards, Carr, Bentley and Kelly were given squads of men to drill. After laboring with them for three days we had them drilling with men who have had four months' training.

Our commandants thus far have been real men and leaders. They have their eyes on us and we may have another adventure. We are drilling hard and studying.

Since being here we have seen the following Omahans: "Mockle" Jackson, Alexander Kirtley and also Mr. Walton, who belongs to Zion Baptist church choir.

The boys join me in sending their best regards.

LEROY KELLY, 75th Co., 19th Receiving Battalion.

YOUNG OMAHANS OUTWIT THE SPANISH FLU

Some of Omaha's most popular debutantes, having been cut off from all amusements Sunday, October 6, by the closing of all indoor gatherings, determined to outwit the Spanish flu.
