DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE PIG PALACE.

"Often where we lived," said Sir Percival Pork, one of the pigs who had just come to the barnyard, "we used to speak of our home as the pig palace."

"Up to Date."

"You flatter yourself," said Pinky Pig.

"Oh, well, let him," said Grandfather Porky, "for we have something else to talk about now."

"I would like to use our old name," said Sir Benjamin Bacon.

"The only trouble would be," said Mrs. Pink Pig, "that we don't really live in a palace."

"No," said Ham, "we don't. We live in a pen. I don't believe anyone would call this a palace."

"Because it isn't a palace. It's a pen," squealed Miss Ham.

"And we can't make a palace of it," said Mrs. Pink Pig.

"There is no law against it," said Sir Percival Pork, "and if there were I'd do away with that law and choose a new one in its place."

"That isn't the way laws are usually made, is it?" asked Mrs. Pink Pig. "By one person doing away with one and then choosing another? I didn't know there were laws made as they were needed to keep folks in order."

"That's the old-fashioned way of thinking about them, but not my way," said Sir Percival Pork.

"Besides," said Sir Benjamin Bacon, "it would be nice to have a new kind of palace."

"Of course," said Sir Percival Pork. "There have been too many of these palaces I've heard of with courtyards and beautiful towers and turrets, and beautiful ladies and gorgeous men."

"Now we should have a change. We should have a change of scenery and people and creatures. We should have a palace of mud, decorated with pig weed and we should have big pigs and little pigs in it instead of ladies and gentlemen.

"We should have a palace of our own, of our own kind, and we wouldn't fuss over it the way some creatures fuss over palaces. We wouldn't bother about sweeping it and polishing the great brass door knockers, for there wouldn't be any brass door knockers."

"But I won't live in a palace which has to be closed at all," said Miss Ham, "and that part of the job would fall back on me, I suppose."

"And upon me," said Mrs. Pink Pig. "Nonsense," said Sir Percival Pork. "We wouldn't do such a thing as to ask you two to keep the palace clean. We don't want it clean."

"We want a regular pig palace, a new kind, with mud and dirt and nice dirty pigs in it, not any fine kind of a polished up palace of marble walls and shining wooden floors."

"And we'll all behave as creatures would like to behave in palaces if only they dared," said Sir Benjamin Bacon.

"We'll dig down in the earth with our good, strong snouts and we'll find delicious grubs."

"We won't have our meals served on golden platters, but on nice muddy pigpen tables."

"You mean palace tables," said Sir Percival Pork.

"Yes, palace tables," said Sir Benjamin.

"Well, that sort of a palace is all right. It would only be a change of name," said Miss Ham.

"Yes, that will suit me, too," said Mrs. Pink Pig.

"We wouldn't have any other kind," said Sir Percival. "We would be homesick if we did."

"Very homesick if we did," said Sir Benjamin.

"Very homesick," squealed the rest of the pigs.

"The pig palace or pigpen, which ever we call it, will always be kept homelike for us," ended Grandfather Porky.

"Palace of Mud."

"Blotting Up B-b-y."

Mother had left Betty to mind the baby. When she came in baby was screaming and Betty was trying to stuff some paper into its mouth.

"Why, what ever are you doing to the poor child?" asked mother.

"Well, mother, baby has drunk some ink, so I'm trying to get her to eat some blotting paper!"

London's Housing Problem.

The London housing board has inspected 2,000 houses that may be converted into flats. Of these 1,000 have been approved and work is to be commenced immediately. Work has also been begun on 8,000 houses.

A child is not a blank paper on which we may write our own ideas, but an individual, who has a character to be developed and a place to make in the world.

FEEDING THE CHILDREN.

The "child welfare" movement which is doing such splendid work in our country should be encouraged, for there is no system of care or feeding which insures a child's health. Further, a child's appearance can never be trusted. No mother can be sure that her child is well, except on a physician's examination and a thorough one, including a blood test. It will pay parents and it will be profitable for the state and nation to see that every child is examined every year. By the system of height and weight charts sent out by the children's bureau, any mother may know whether her child approaches the normal or not and, if underweight, he should be examined at once.

Children need whole wheat. Other cereals may be used for variety. They need fat, particularly butterfat, which contains the wonderful substance which promotes growth. They should have sugar in moderate quantities and an abundance of fruit and fresh vegetables, especially those like spinach, chard and lettuce, for in them also is this life-promoting principle found in milk, butter and cream.

Another food that a well-nourished child should have is the egg. Serve one in some form daily for each child.

Then fruit of various kinds, orange juice particularly, are good for infants. Prunes, figs, dates and raisins when well masticated or cooked, are most wholesome for children. Apples, baked, are especially good; bananas when thoroughly ripe and scraped to free them from the stringy fibers are also good. As each fruit has some valuable property in itself it is wise to have a variety. Children fed on prunes with no other fruit will develop scurvy, so that orange juice with potatoes is recommended for that trouble. The young child can take orange juice; the older ones are able to take potatoes.

Fish, if fresh and carefully cooked, is a food which may be given children in place of meat. Poultry, if one can afford it, is another good food for the child. Cornmeal, mush, rice and potatoes once a day to young children are all good foods, provided they are well cooked.

NILE QUEEN

Kashmir Chemical Co. Springfield, Ill.
Chicago, Ill.
Gentlemen Nile Queen preparations have done wonders for my hair and skin. I tried nearly every thing to clear my complexion of pimples, liver spots and blackheads without success, until I found Kashmir Nile Queen. Now my skin is so smooth and healthy as can be and my hair has grown so long and glossy my friends all admire it. I wish all our women would try Nile Queen.

THE MOTHER GOOSE FAIRY BOOK

By Eleanor Schorer

Today is Oct. 29. In two days Hallow'en will be here. All Mother Goose Land is preparing for a revelry. Peter Pumpkin-eater is in an awful fix. Every orange pumpkin has hid itself off to be christened "Jack O'Lantern" and left Peter without a morsel to eat or even a shell to keep his wife in.

The old woman went to sweep the cobwebs out of the sky and give the face of Mr. Moon its annual washing. How he bellowed when she mopped out his ears with lots of soap and water! But he smiled again, more brightly than ever, when she took out the candle stumps that were almost burned out and put in big new fresh ones.

In a secret dell stand the orange-faced fellows named "Jack O'Lantern." Their smiles, together with those of newly-washed Mr. Moon, light the dell where musicians are assembling to tune up their voices. "Baa" bleats Black Sheep. "Grunt!" goes Piggy Grunt. Carrion Crow caws, Waddle Duck quacks, Cock Robin chirps, "chirp," "Puss-in-the-Well" mews, and Mother Hubbard's dog barks.

To this music on Hallow Eve, Nixies dance with Babbling Brook, Ghosts, Goblins, Fairies, Elves, witch women, witch men and all Mother Goose's people who have stout hearts come to gambol and frolic and tell spook stories to see if they can frighten each other. Of course, they never can, for every one knows that spook stories are fibs. But it is heaps of fun, and Mother Goose wishes each kiddie a good time that day.
