AUTOMOBILES IN COLLISION

Occupant Thrown to Street—Slight Injuries Sustained—$200 Damages Done to Car.

Monday morning an automobile owned and driven by Harry Leland, clubman and prominent citizen of this city, was smashed and virtually demolished by another car approaching from the south on Twenty-fourth at the intersection of Twenty-fourth and Cuming streets.

Leland, his wife and a friend, Mrs. Estella Hays, were in the automobile at the time of the accident, turning east from North Twenty-fourth street when a car going north on the same street hit head on, turning Leland's car up on its side and throwing Mrs. Hays to the street. Both of the women sustained minor injuries and were treated in the Hill-Williams drug store, Twenty-fourth and Cuming streets, and are very much improved.

Picts and Scots.

In his Dictionary of Phrase and Fable, the learned Rev. Dr. E. Cobham Brewer, writes upon Picts and Scots: "Pict is not the Latin pict (painted people). As Picts and Scots are always mentioned together, there is no reason why one name should be Latin and the other Gaelic. Scot is the Gaelic 'sgod' (a dweller in woods and forests), and Pict is the Gaelic pict-ist (freebooter), the two being equivalent to foresters and freebooters."

Lindsey had the little hen fast and was trying to bring her head close to the ground. "What might you be trying to do?" exclaimed her father coming upon the small girl in the yard. "I'm trying to make this hen say her prayers." "Well," said the parent sadly, "I hope she'll say: 'Now I lay me.'"

WHO IS HYPOCRITICAL?

Mr. Cox asserts that "the man who says the League of Nations means war is hypocritical and he knows it."

Well, let us look at this assertion without hypocrisy and see what it comes to.

Article X of the treaty provides that the members of the league "undertake to respect and preserve as against external aggression the territorial integrity and existing political independence of all members of the league," and it directs in case of threat of aggression the council shall "advise upon the means by which this obligation shall be fulfilled."

Is it hypocrisy to hold that this means war?

On this point Senator Harding cited a significant incident in his speech last week on foreign relations.

"A few days ago," he said, "a delegation of an organization which calls itself a Society for the Prevention of War appealed to the premier of Great Britain to unite and use the powers of the world in defense of Poland, Armenia, and the Dardanelles. The British premier replied, according to his remarks quoted by the newspapers, to the effect that, while the formation of 'an international army' would be 'an ideal solution,' it could not be accomplished because the European nations could not furnish the troops and the United States had 'withdrawn from co-operation'—a polite and diplomatic phrase, and more exactly meaning, of course, that the senate of the United States had not completed the partial obligation assumed by the president to do that very thing—that is, to 'furnish the troops.'"

Was Mr. Lloyd George hypocritical in his remarks to the delegation or has he a different understanding of the meaning of Article X from that which Mr. Cox would like American voters to adopt?

If there is a difference of opinion, wouldn't it be wise to have it cleared up by an explicit reservation to our agreement to this "obligation," as proposed by the republican senators, rather than to dodge, as attempted by Mr. Cox?

Besides Article X, the covenant which Mr. Cox proposed to ratify without reservation, there is in Article XI the following: "Any war or threat of war, whether immediately affecting any of the members of the league or not, is hereby declared a matter of concern to the whole league, and the league shall take any action that may be deemed wise and effectual to safeguard the peace of nations."

Does this mean what it says, or is it mere hypocrisy?

Article XII provides that in the event of the failure to carry out the award of arbitration provided by the covenant, "the council shall propose what steps should be taken to give effect thereto."

Article XVI provides that should any member of the league resort to war in disregard of its covenants under Articles XII, XIII, or XV, "it shall pro facta be deemed to have committed an act of war against all other members of the league," and that "it shall be the duty of the council in such case to recommend to the several governments concerned what effective military, naval, or air force the members of the league shall severally contribute to the armed forces to be used to protect the covenants of the league." It may be hypocrisy to hold that these provisions mean war, in view of the fact that war in defiance of them is at this moment being waged in Poland, threatened on the Albanian frontier, and smoldering throughout eastern Europe and Asia Minor.

But our notion of hypocrisy is that displayed by the democrats, who propose that we enter the league of nations, not with frank, open, and explicit reservations, but without intending to carry out wholeheartedly and to the full the obligations it prescribes and imposes.—The Chicago Tribune.
