SAVE IT.

As the straw indicates the way the wind blows, the women shoppers indicate the shop where style and values are to be found. If any reader of this paper will interest his or her self enough to keep trace for any space of time the constant stream of buying women that visit Flynn's South Omaha Store, he or she will be convinced that the right attractions are being offered at the Flynn Store. We believe in quality first and the best possible price that can go with it. It is not uncommon to find up-to-date merchandise here for half what the high priced center stores ask for the same goods.

We are open Saturday evenings until 9 and we guarantee to save you the fare from any part of Omaha on a small purchase.

JOHN FLYNN & CO.,

THE SOUTH SIDE.

The South Side, frequently called South Omaha, is that section of Omaha that lies due south of the main business section of the city. It was formerly a separate city in itself, having its own separate government. It was recently incorporated into Omaha properly and is now called the South Side.

This part of Omaha contains about one-fourth of the city's population and about the same proportion of its business. These businesses thrive quite independently of the North Side. They have their own banks, groceries, hardware stores and their dry goods and department stores. The leading dry goods stores are The Leader, Phillips, John Flynn Clothing and the Co-operative Clothing Stores. When considered from business volume, these stores are second to none on the north side.

In this section are located the great packing plants, which employ thousands of laborers of both races. They constitute the bulk of employment for the unskilled laborer in this city. Here about 4,000 colored people live, most of whom patronize these stores. We also find several race business enterprises on the smaller scale in this section, such as restaurants, tailoring and tonsorial establishments. The leading among these are Davis and McGill's Cafe, 2516 Q street; Harris and Woodard's barber shops, 4911 and 4912 South 26th street, respectively. Among the drug stores, Melcher, the Q Street Pharmacy, and the Handy Drug are the most famous.

The reporter herewith commends all of these business places to the many readers of The Monitor for your trade and patronage. They have all been fair with our people and give the best prices and attention to us when in their establishments.

LINCOLN, NEBRASKA.

By W. W. Mosley,
Lincoln Correspondent.

Lincoln is the capitol city of Nebraska and is located in Lancaster county, about fifty miles southwest of Omaha. It is on the main Chicago-Denver route of the Burlington system, as well as the Rock Island, both of which pass through Omaha.

Lincoln has a total population of about 60,000, of which 2,000 are colored. It is the state's greatest school center. It has schools of all kinds. Thousands of students from every section of the country, representing both races, attend school here yearly. The schools in Lincoln have always been perfectly fair, giving all students, regardless of their color, an equal show for the opportunities offered them in the schools.

The colored people of Lincoln own over one per cent of the entire property of the city. They have many businesses which they operate on a high scale. They are all doing a good business and seem prosperous. They are engaged in a great variety of business and demonstrate skill in all. They have several churches here, all of which are pastored by the highest types of ministers. The city has many thriving business places among the whites, the foremost among which are Speir-Simon, Gold & Co., Mayer Bros., Hardy Furniture Co., and many other big stores and business houses. The correspondent commends all these to the many readers of The Monitor as being perfectly fair and courteous to our people. They solicit our patronage and will supply our needs.
