Bottle Papers Aid in Ocean-Current Study

Philadelphia.—Not all bottles thrown into the sea are dead ones, according to Clarence Shomber, nautical expert in the United States hydrographic office at the customhouse.

Many an empty bottle, he admits, has been heaved overboard by skipper, passenger and crew alike, to gurgie its way to a salty grave.

But many others, having been thoroughly squeezed of their former contents, have had the prescribed form of bottle paper, furnished to mariners by the hydrographic office of the navy bureau, securely placed in them, been tightly corked and sealed and heaved into the deep.

These forms contain spaces to be filled in by the person throwing the bottle overboard, which show their name, vessel, date, latitude and longitude, and the date and locality where the bottle was picked up.

Instructions on the form are in eight languages and direct the finder to send the "bottle paper" to any United States consul or to the hydrographic office, Navy department, Washington.

Carried and tossed by wind, wave and current, these "bottle papers" drift thousands of miles and are not found sometimes for years. They are thrown into the water to aid scientists in the study of ocean currents. One bottle thrown over off the Florida coast was washed upon a beach in Scotland.

Referring to this incident, Mr. Shomber said:

"That was just a case of a bottle trying to get home. Often these bottles show the brand they use on the bottles."

Advertising Talk

A hen is not supposed to have Much common sense or tact, Yet every time she lays an egg She cackles forth the fact.

A rooster hasn't got a lot Of intellect to show, But none the less most roosters have Enough good sense to crow.

The mule, the most despised of beasts, Has a persistent way Of letting folks know he's around By his insistent bray.

The busy little bees they buzz, Bulls bellow and cows moo, The watch dogs bark, the ganders quack, The doves and pigeons coo.

The peacock spreads his tail and squawks, Pigs squeal and robins sing And even serpents know enough To hiss before they sting.

But man, the greatest masterpiece That nature could devise, Will often stop and hesitate Before he'll advertise.

Merchants who are wise And want our people's trade Use THE MONITOR to advertise And thus their fortune's made.
