CALHOUN COUNTY, FLORIDA

(Columbian Press Bureau.) Jacksonville, Fla., June 5.—With a total population of less than 9,000, about 2,500 of whom are Negroes, Calhoun county, the scene of the recent and most outrageous peonage cases, is one of the most desolate and backward counties in the state of Florida. Among the whites, nearly 7 per cent are illiterate, and among the Negro population about 50 per cent are so classified. The average value of land per acre in this county, is considerably less than $20, and although the land area of the county is greater than that of the entire state of Rhode Island, the value of all farm property is nearly thirty-two million dollars less. Educational facilities are very poor and the county is one of the dark spots in the state that is seldom penetrated by the light of a higher civilization.
