Omaha Instructors in Nebraska Girls' Camp at Columbus

At Columbus the Nebraska camp for girls opened at Camp Sheldon Wednesday with more than 100 girls already in camp before the opening from every section of the state. The ages range between 12 and 18. This year's girls' camp program is under the direction of Mary Louise Guy, executive secretary for the Omaha Camp Fire Girls. She is assisted by Mrs. W. C. Wetzel, Albion, who will have charge of the Camp Fire activities.

Other instructors in the camp will be Mrs. C. E. Melton, Omaha, president of the State Baptist Young People's union; Mrs. E. J. Miller, Loretta, Neb., who will teach basket weaving to the girls; Miss Grace Jardine, Omaha school nurse, who will have charge of the health activities; and Miss Elsie Drews of Omaha, in charge of the physical activities for the girls.

A special program for girl activities unlike that of the boys will be outlined Tuesday for the girls during their 16-day camp period here. More than 50 tunes from every part of the state will be represented by the number in attendance.

Ruehle-Watson

The marriage of Miss Anetia Faye Watson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Watson to Edward William Ruehle of Lincoln took place Wednesday afternoon in Council Bluffs. Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Ward of Lincoln and Mr. F. W. McKenna of Omaha were the only attendants. Following a trip to St. Louis and Kansas City they will make their home in Omaha.

Abe Martin

IF FEEL YOU SO COULD KNOW HARDLY KNOW YOU'D GET A HEAD

Sen. Sam Ralston's a lucky fellow. He was photographed for three weeks during the democratic convention working on his farm and never fell off a load of hay. Elmer Moots is going in partnership with his paw. He's a fine young man and can't play no musical instrument and is altogether worthy of the public confidence.

Lemons Bleach

the Skin White

The only harmless way to bleach the skin white is to mix the juice of two lemons with three ounces of Oread White, which any druggist will supply for a few cents. Shake well in a bottle, and you have a whole quart-pint of the most wonderful skin whitener, softer and beautifier.

Massage this sweetly fragrant lemon bleach into the face, neck, arms and hands. It can not irritate. Famous stage beauties use it to bring that clear, youthful skin and rosy-white complexion, also as a freckle, sunburn and tan bleach. You must mix this remarkable lotion yourself. It can not be bought ready to use because it acts best immediately after it is prepared.

Your Problems

Martha Allen

Dear Martha Allen: I am a woman of 34 years of age, and go with a young man of the same age. It worries me because he seems to be attracted to younger women. What can I do to make him declare himself?

Isn't it about time for a woman of my age to worry about the matrimonial prospects? ELAINE.

You are letting jealousy bother your romance, I am afraid. Few men nowadays bother to go with a girl unless he is really interested or cares for her a great deal. Consider yourself just as attractive as any younger woman and you'll notice the improvement in your own looks. Don't step back willingly.

As for prospects of matrimony, you are foolish to let it worry you. Just forget that you are seeking for it. Real women choose love and marriage as the career to be desired above all others. When forced to a choice that is what most every woman decides upon. All women are attractive in terms of their own honest selves.

THE HOUSEWIFE. (Copyright, 1924.)

Adele Garrison "My Husband's Love"

Why the Masked Dancer Stirred Madge's Memory.

It was not until almost the close of the dance which the masked cabaret performers were giving that I realized the equivocation in the comment Harry Underwood had made concerning them.

He had said that he was mistaken in thinking he recognized one of them. At first I accepted his statement at its face value and turned my attention, as apparently did he, to the main course of our dinner, a daintily served, delicious combination of seafoods surrounding a delicately broiled squab.

It was when I noticed that my escort, usually a famous trencherman, was only dallying with his food, that I began to wonder why. Watching him furtively, I saw that he in turn was scrutinizing the dancers. And something almost intangible in his manner told me that his espionage was tinged with something very like uneasiness.

The discovery was akin to that of suddenly finding some rapid taste in the food being served to us. I knew, of course, in a vague way that Harry Underwood was so "little tin god," to use one of his own phrases, and that he was the hero or villain of many a questionable adventure. I readily could believe. But the apprehension which he was trying so hard to conceal brought home to me the fact that probably in the room with me, separated by only the width of the tables, was some woman from his hectic past whose rancor he had reason to fear.

I told myself that the furious anger which suddenly swept me at this thought was due to my dread of any kind of scene fostered by the newspaper chronicles of any day, with their stories of impromptu dramas, tragic or comic, but always sordid, played in cabaret settings.

Harry Changes Tables.

But something deep within me protested against this equivocation and, baring my soul relentlessly to my own gaze, told me that wounded feminine vanity and resentment at having anything distract my escort's attention from me contributed as much to my anger as did my dread of a scene.

Mr. Underwood suddenly beckoned to a passing waiter.

"The air is stifling at this table," he said. "Please see that our next course is served at that one over there."

He indicated a table near one of the entrances from which two diners were departing. It was not nearly so desirable a place as the one he just had left, and I had a sudden conviction that the reason he had given for changing was but a subterfuge, and that the real reason had its roots in his furtive espionage of the masked dancers.

"I will see about it, sir, at once," the waiter answered and sped away for a consultation with his superior. Our own waiter, with an attendant omnibus, materialized within the next minute, and before three more minutes had passed we were ensconced at the other table after a display of fussiness concerning the arrangement of our chairs utterly foreign to Harry Underwood.

"Now there, Madge," he had said sharply, as the waiter pulled back a chair for me. "This will give you a much better view."

"Take the First Taxi!"

I looked at him, astonished as he gave me a seat so near the exit to the corridor that repeatedly my gown was almost brushed by people entering or leaving the room. It was not so comfortable a seat as the one Mr. Underwood selected for himself, nor did it have nearly so good a view of the dais and the performers.

The punctilious soul of courtesy, I knew that Mr. Underwood must have some special reason for his action, and my vague uneasiness crystallized into acute apprehension as he leaned forward across the table and spoke tensely in tones so low that I had to strain my ears to catch the words.

"Look here Madge, you used to be the pluckiest little scout going, and I want you to be ready to prove it now if the occasion should arise. If I should give you the signal, I want you to slip out the entrance, walk swiftly to the street and take the first taxi to your apartment. I have some bills and change wadded up in my hand here, so just put your hand in the center of the table and take it."

"I have plenty of money in my vanity case. I answered in as low a tone as his own, and he gave a short little laugh.

"Strictly on your own, always," he commented, and then, turning in his seat, he watched the masked dancers who had left the dais at the close of their number and were weaving in and out among the tables.

My gaze followed him, and something in the movements of one of the masked dancers all at once recalled something elusive and disturbing to my memory.

Surely I had seen those graceful feline-like movements before. But where?

THIS WOMAN'S MARVELLOUS RECOVERY

All Due to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Truman, Minn.—"I was badly run-down and had pains in my side and back, sometimes I couldn't hardly move around in bed. My husband got me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and after taking it I was so much better I could do all my work again. I do my household work, have a garden, raise chickens, and in harvest time I worked in the field and helped pick corn. Sometimes I do chores and milk. I took the Vegetable Compound before and after my four-months-old baby was born, and it has always helped me wonderfully. I believe there is no better medicine made for women, and I hope every woman will give it a fair trial."
—Mrs. AUGUST E. WIEDERHOFF, R. No. 2, Box 84, Truman, Minnesota.

Women suffering from troubles so common to their sex should give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

The Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has relieved women of such troubles for the past fifty years. For sale by druggists everywhere.
