The banquet at Melodeon Hall, last night, was a highly enjoyable affair, the speaker of the evening fallin' t' get there. 'Th' only thing this country seem' t' have got out o' th' war wuz out.

One thing is going to hurt both Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Davis in this campaign, if they keep it up, and that is the absence of fighting. Americans think they are entitled to a good political fight at least once in four years.

The price of wheat started traveling upward again yesterday. That's the wheat king of Chicago, predicts "wheat at $2 a bushel." Disinterested judges think it will go to $1.50, perhaps higher. Every little penny added to the price of wheat has a meaning of its own, for the republican candidates.

The Georgia legislature is discussing evolution. One statesman calls the theory of evolution "rotten stuff." Another, Mr. McCrory, says if he was descended from a monkey, he is ashamed of it.

The Georgia statesmen conclude that the young murderers, Leob and Leopold, wouldn't have killed anybody if they hadn't been taught to believe in evolution. If that's so, it's very important. However, some have committed murders that couldn't read and never heard of evolution—Cain, who killed his brother, Abel, for instance. Where did he get that killing impulse, only once removed from the first man? Perhaps the serpent taught him?

Conversation Is Newest Form of Entertainment

The newest form of evening party, ideal for hot weather, use, replaces bridge and dancing, oddly enough, with conversation—conversation held over ices and coffee in the evenings under the stars at Aquila Court. Blue lit arches, reflected in the pools, give an almost theatrical effect to this lately settling where people come and go often tarrying for an hour or two at a time.

WAS SICK FOR YEAR, SAYS MRS. M'GUIRE

"It certainly has paid me well to take Tanlac, for it has brought me health and strength that makes life worth living," is the glowing tribute of Mrs. Wm. J. McGuire, 129 N. Second street, West Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

For nearly a year I felt half sick and hardly had energy to go to a matinee or do a little shopping. My appetite slowed down and I could not eat and digest enough to keep up my weight and strength.

"I have known nearly all my life. I would like to marry her, some day, but find we are drifting apart. I give nearly all of my salary to my family and she uses all she earns for her clothes. She goes with boys she meets for the first time and I don't approve of this. We don't seem to be able to agree on things. But still I care for her."

Martha Allen

Dear Miss Allen: I think lots of a girl I have known nearly all my life. I would like to marry her, some day, but find we are drifting apart. I give nearly all of my salary to my family and she uses all she earns for her clothes. She goes with boys she meets for the first time and I don't approve of this. We don't seem to be able to agree on things. But still I care for her."

But although I flattered myself that my neighbor had no idea that my kitchen held an occupant, I remained seated on the floor for several minutes after Mr. Marks had closed the apartment door behind him. That he would use the rule of shutting the hall door from the inside I was quite sure, and I waited for the second closing, so stealthily that I scarcely heard it, before rising and snapping on the electric switch.

Before I brought that much of civilization back to me, however, I was conscious of low sobs and a series of hushed exclamations from Mrs. Marks in the room next to the kitchen. Over and over again she was repeating the distress slogan of her kind: "Oh, gee! Oh, gee! Oh, gee!" And then, in a sudden, low whine: "Whatever shall I do now?"

My efforts were apparently successful. If Mr. Marks had remained in the room next to the kitchen he might have heard the slight click of the door closing and the turning of the key, which with a sudden thought, I removed. But he was by now in his own living room, separated from our apartment by several partitions, and I knew he could not have heard the infinitesimal bit of noise I made.

A happy all-around yesterday for those that own things or speculate in them. Stocks went up with grain. The big steel company selling more than 79,000 shares for the day, went above 107, in spite of steel conditions, thoroughly bad on the surface.

Somebody evidently believes that a boom is coming. If that settlement of European troubles does come, even with innocent Americans pouring their savings into foreign bonds, you will see fireworks on the stock exchange and in business generally.

If this plan goes through, Europe will begin spending money here for American goods. They will be paid for with money borrowed from us, but that won't interfere with the boom, at least for the present. Merchants would do well to look over stocks and see what they need.

Meanwhile Germany shows that she has paid $500,000,000 German gold marks in cash and in merchandise, more than 2,000,000,000 gold dollars, as the price of being beaten.

Prosperous parents do make a difference. Hess Connors, 22; Fred Hale, 19, haven't rich parents. Colored men, of Cairo, Ill., they pleaded guilty to murder in the first degree. Now, a few days later, Connors is sentenced to hang, and Hale to 99 years at hard labor in the Illinois penitentiary.

It isn't that money is used for bribery, but that money interests lawyers with real power. The lack of it doesn't interest them. Lawyers with real power know how to slow down the march to the gallows to a pace that makes a snail look like a race horse.
