News From Europe.
The Prince Gambles a Little.
We Respect Hard Cash.
4 Good Names.
By ARTHUR BRISBANE

The value of European monies fell off yesterday. Somebody expects a hitch in the reparations arrangement.

To help Germany rebuild industrially and then pay whatever she must pay would be a wise step for all nations.

To make Germany pay 8 per cent for money is not financing, it is usury, and usurers on a big scale usually get what they deserve. They lose.

The prince of Wales was unlucky at Deauville on Sunday night. When he sat at the gambling tables until 5 in the morning, returning to the house of his host, Herbert Pulitzer, many thousand francs the worse for his experience at the casino. His little "wads" of 10,000 francs each, disappeared rapidly.

You will want to know that he appeared at the gambling house in "a soft pleated dinner suit with soft cuffs."

Joseph Pulitzer, father of the young man with whom the prince of Wales is stopping, was probably an interested spectator, from above. He, with the Duchess of Westminster and Lord and Lady Mountbatten, could give the prince solid advice on the foolishness of gambling. The money which in the prince's case is "easy come, easy go" is not as important as the fact that even loyal Britons, especially of the "low church" type, won't like the idea of supplying cash for those little 10,000-franc "wads."

Other news coming from Europe with a description of the prince of Wales' soft shirt, describes a Hungarian peasant throwing his mother-in-law into the Danube because she ate too much. He explained that he had done his best to make her die a natural death, "chaining her in a dog kennel, feeding her spoiled food, exposing her to the elements."

Russia sends word that any citizen over 18 may change his family name and his first name as often as he pleases, simply by notifying the authorities.

Russia holds the championship for changes. Change of government, two changes of name of St. Petersburg, lightning changes in the divorce court, and now unlimited changes of name.

France suggests that as she lost money in accepting the Dawes plan, the United States should cut down substantially the sums that France owes. Such a proposition might be accepted on a cash basis.

In this country we respect enterprises that involve profit. When the prize fighter Firpo came from the Argentine, in the company of a charming young woman, our austere but moral immigration officials sent back the young woman but allowed Mr. Firpo to come in. "He had arranged for a fight that will draw at least a million."

The Rev. Mr. Chase interested himself in the proposition that it takes two to be immoral, insisting that if there were reasons for sending away the young woman there must have been similar reasons for sending Firpo. Now Firpo is arrested, but his hearing is postponed to September 20, which prevents interference with the million-dollar prize fight, set for September 11.

We have shipped mothers with their children out of this country, with slight ceremony when there was no charge against them except poverty. It's different when it comes to a million-dollar prize fight.

An interesting party gathered in the little farm house of Mr. Coolidge, sr., yesterday. It included President Coolidge, his father, Henry Ford, Thomas Edison, Harvey Firestone, the tire maker, and his son. You will travel a long way to find four more typical of the United States and its work than Coolidge, Edison, Firestone and Ford. Which name of the four will live longest in history? What name among us, now unknown to the world, will outlive them all?

Conservative, "respectable," self-approving Americans that see nothing good in any radicalism might ask themselves, "What is it we praise, over what do we rejoice, as we look for good times because of the German-English-French agreement?"

What they are praising is an agreement arrived at by the socialist premier of France, Herriot, the socialist-labor premier of England, MacDonald, and socialist-labor government of Germany.

When MacDonald, the British prime minister, at the signing of the new industrial peace, took the hand of the German representative, Marx, and put it into that of the Frenchman, Herriot, that was a big step toward real peace.

Americans who think that there is no real virtue or intelligence outside of a fat pocketbook, should revise their views.

The time is coming in this country—not for many years—but it is coming, when those that control by the power of the pocketbook, will have to accept changes gracefully, or accept them against their will in ways that they won't like. The wise British accept changes as they come, and life goes smoothly.

Final Report in Phone Case Filed in District Court

Master in Chancery Finds Company Should Be Allowed Injunction Preventing 1922 Order.

Final report in the case of the Nebraska Telephone company against O. S. Spillman, an attorney general of the state of Nebraska, and H. G. Taylor, Thorne Brown and Charles Randall as persons constituting the Nebraska State Railway commission in a suit in the Lincoln district of federal court to enjoin them from putting into effect an order to fix telephone rates for the state of Nebraska, was filed Tuesday afternoon in the office of the clerk of the district court here by B. H. Dunham, master in chancery.

In the report Mr. Dunham states that it follows from the testimony in the case that that plaintiff, the telephone company, is entitled to an injunction enjoining the defendants from putting into effect the order of Nebraska State Railway commission of 1922.

The reason prescribed is that rates therein prescribed are confiscatory of the plaintiff's property used in the rendition of its intrastate telephone service in Nebraska. The report also states that the plaintiff should have a decree enjoining the defendants from interfering (until the Nebraska State Railway commission shall make effective new rates for telephone service by the plaintiff in Nebraska) with the plaintiff in making, charging and collecting such rates for its intrastate telephone service in Nebraska as will produce return of not more than 12 per cent upon the fair value of its property devoted to that service, plus working capital.

There are 75 pages in the report which will be sent to Lincoln for a hearing in 20 days before Judge Munger. An application for an interlocutory injunction in December, 1922, restrained, at the hearing, the enforcement of that portion of the commission's order which eliminated the surcharge of 10 per cent on exchange telephone rates.

YOUTHS SAVE 2 GIRL BATHERS

Special Dispatch to The Omaha Bee.
Fort Morgan, Col., Aug. 20.—Roscoe Bell, 20, and Olin Bell, 14, brothers, saved two girls from drowning in the municipal swimming pool here. The two youths had just driven to the pool and saw the two girls wade into it. Neither of the girls could swim and when they waded into the deeper part of the pool, they were in danger of drowning.

The two brothers tore off their coats and shoes and plunged into the water. One of the girls had gone under the third time and was not revived for some time after her rescue.
