

Noted Race Driver Killed in Smashup on British Track

Dario Resta Victim of Accident While Trying for Record; Once Won Victory in Omaha.

London, Sept. 3.—Dario Resta, one of the most famous automobile racing drivers in the world, was killed in a smashup on the Brooklands track today.

Resta, driving a Sunbeam car, was trying for a world's speed record and had made one lap of the course when the machine struck an obstacle and got out of control. It swerved sharply, crashed into an iron fence. The petrol tank broke down and the wreckage caught fire.

Dario Resta appeared in many of the biggest automobile races in the United States and was recognized as one of the world's greatest drivers because of victories at the Indianapolis speedway, Shensholt Bay speedway and on other tracks.

Dario Resta, driving a French Peugeot, won the 150-mile Omaha automobile derby at the old Omaha speedway, near Clarinda, Mo., Sept. 15, 1918, at the remarkable speed of 92.20 miles an hour.

It was a battle between him and Ralph Mulford, the latter finishing just 1 minute, 13 seconds behind Resta.

Eddie Rickenbacker was also a strong contestant in that race but was stopped by an old accident or incident. A handbill floating out from the grandstand, caught in front of his radiator, shutting off the air and heating up his motor so that he had to stop. He won the 50-mile free-for-all race.

Resta was accompanied to Omaha by his beautiful wife, a former show girl, who astonished Omaha society by her wonderful clothes and jewels and lavish spending of money.

The Omaha victory was but one of a long list of victories to the credit of Resta. The race was marked by one death. When Aldo Franchi, driving a Pusan, was rounding into the 17th lap, he lost control and his car crashed the fence and plunged into the underpinning of the grandstand. Franchi was unscathed but his mechanic, Dan Colombo, was injured internally and died of the operating table in Lord Lister hospital.

Football Star Injured in Leaping From Train

Clarinda, Ia., Sept. 3.—Russell Moss, colored football star of Clarinda High from 1919 to 1923, who was found unconscious on the railway tracks at Villisca August 28, was taken from Kennebec hospital today to the home of his father at Clarinda. He has been conscious only at intervals and not until today was the cause of the accident determined.

From his own story it now develops that he was stealing a ride on a through freight from Chicago and in his attempt to quit the train he was thrown headlong and was lying in the pathway of other trains when found. He is badly bruised about the shoulders and back and has some injury to the spine, but his physician does not think his injuries will be permanent, although following concussion of the brain abscess may form.

Thirty-six stitches were required to close the scalp wounds, cut to the bone.

Michel "Gas" Price Raised One Cent

Refinery Advance Is Blamed; Standard at Same Figure.

Price of gasoline at the H. M. Michel station was raised from 10-9 to 11-9 Wednesday. This is one of the stations that has been bucking the People's Gasoline and Filling station at Sixteenth and Nicholas streets.

"The refinery price of gas has gone to 8 1/2 cents and freight is 2 1/4 cents, a total of 10 3/4 cents. So you can see why we had to raise the price," said Michel.

At the People's station, the manager, H. O. Churchill said the price was still 10 cents and that a large supply had been bought in advance at a price to make this retail figure probably steady for a time.

To Whiten Skin with Lemon

The only harmless way to bleach the skin white is to mix the juice of two lemons with three ounces of Orchard White, which any druggist will supply for a few cents. Shake well in a bottle, and you have a whole quarter-pint of the most wonderful skin whitener, softener and beautifier.

Massage this sweetly fragrant lemon bleach into the face, neck, arms and hands. It can not irritate. Famous stage beauties use it to bring that clear, youthful skin and rosy-white complexion; also as a freckle, sunburn and tan bleach. You must mix this remarkable lotion yourself. It can not be bought ready to use because it acts best immediately after it is prepared.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE. On the Atlantic, Sept. 4.—A dripping fog hid the sun today. So the passengers trailed off to the cheer of the lounge after breakfast. The mood of the weather seemed to blend with the mood of the voyageurs—a trifling gloom.

They sank into deep cushioned leather chairs. A Minneapolis surgeon next to me began to speculate as to why a liner was known as "the." Perhaps it is because her reputation is important. Once sullied, she becomes an outcast.

And, too a liner is extremely sensitive. High seas make her gasp and wretch as though she were as frail as a reed. Every liner has its cat. This one is coal black with a blaze of white on its neck and is known as King Tut.

It frisked about with a paper ball in front of the open hearth—giving a quaint domestic touch to a cosmopolitan background. A group of us began to dig madly man with black hair thatched with gray. His expression was cherubic.

He was put down as an English squire, a professor of philosophy, a London barrister, a sprig of nobility, a New York specialty shop owner and a Pittsburgh manufacturer. From the lounge steward we learned he was John McE. Bowman, who manages several of Gotham's biggest hotels.

He was not listed among the passengers and I had not seen him for seven years. I began to wonder if I had changed as much in that time. When I saw him last he was dapper and youthful looking and little changed from his riding instructor days at Durand's.

Skies cleared and all went to their deck chairs where the children had their program of deck sports—a potato race, egg and spoon race and the chief event the cigarette and necktie race. Four little girls had to tie the men's four-in-hands about their necks while four men smoked up cigarettes. The girls won.

The first-class English servant is perhaps the most polite of all menials. He "Very Good, sir," "uncertain and serves as yet you have the feeling he is nursing a superiority complex. And never tell them to do things at once unless you simply don't care to have one of them done. For four mornings I have asked Mr. Light to send a waiter and fix the bath. He does one or the other perfectly but he has to be rung for again for the second.

The hardest job on the liner I believe is that of a passenger on the Empire of Australia, one of the large liners in the Yokohama harbor at the time. Miss Stevens assisted in rescue work, and was uninjured.

Burgess Bedtime Stories

By THORNTON W. BURGESS. What I may lose perchance you gain; What gives you joy may give me pain. —Old Mother Nature.

Peter Sets His Mind at Rest. Having learned the surprising fact that, while the babies of some members of the snake family were hatched from eggs, the babies of other members of the family were born alive Peter Rabbit began to wonder about other neighbors. Because he had discovered that Mrs. Blacksnake said eggs he had taken for granted that all kinds of snakes came into the great world that way.

"Are all birds hatched from eggs?" he asked Peter.

"How Jenny Wren did laugh! 'What a question!' she cried. Of course they are, you silly, long-eared bunch of curiosity. Whatever made you ask such a question as that?"

"Some snakes are hatched from eggs and some are born alive," said Peter, as if he thought he were telling great news.

"My goodness have you just found that out?" demanded Jenny. "I thought everybody knew that. But snakes are not birds. There never yet was a bird that wasn't hatched from an egg."

"I didn't suppose there was," replied Peter. "I just wanted to make sure. You see I supposed that all snakes were hatched from eggs, and when I found that some are not it set me to wondering about turtles and birds. Did you know that Jimmy Skunk found the eggs of Mrs. Rattlesnake and ate every one of them?"

Jenny Wren jerked her tail excitedly. "Is that true, Peter Rabbit?" she said.

Peter nodded. "I saw him eat them," said he.

Jenny Wren didn't even wait to say good by to Peter. Away she went to spread the news to the birds of the Old Orchard. You know Mr. and Mrs. Blacksnake have stolen many from eggs. Little Mrs. Garter Snake had informed him that her babies were born alive just as were Peter's own, and that it was the same way with Mrs. Rattlesnake. Now he wondered if it was the same way in the turtle family. Why shouldn't it be the same way with the birds? The idea was startling.

Peter knew that the babies of Spotty the Turtle were hatched from eggs buried in the sand. He had seen Spotty's babies dig their way out. He had seen Mrs. Slow Poke the Box Turtle bury her eggs. So he had taken it for granted that all turtles did the same thing. But now doubt crept into his mind. If some snakes laid eggs some didn't, why shouldn't it be the same way with the birds? The idea was startling.

Peter never remains long in doubt about a thing if his tongue can find out about it for him. He says that that is what a tongue is for. Straight to the smiling Pool he hurried. Iperly-lip-lip. Spotty the Turtle was sunning himself on an old log. He listened to Peter's eager questions.

"All baby turtles are hatched from eggs," said he. "What snakes may do is none of my business. It may be as Sidney, Spencer and Churdan before coming to Denison.

thing about it. But every turtle in all the great world was hatched from an egg."

"Thank you!" cried Peter. "That is all I wanted to know." And away he went, Iperly-lip-lip-lip, straight up to the Old Orchard.

It didn't take him long to find Jenny Wren. "Jenny Wren! Jenny Wren!" he cried as soon as he caught sight of her.

Jenny Wren turned to face him, her tail cocked up pertly and her bright eyes snapping. "Tut, tut, tut, Peter! Why all this excitement?" she cried.

"Are all birds hatched from eggs?" he asked Peter.

"How Jenny Wren did laugh! 'What a question!' she cried. Of course they are, you silly, long-eared bunch of curiosity. Whatever made you ask such a question as that?"

"Some snakes are hatched from eggs and some are born alive," said Peter, as if he thought he were telling great news.

Kellogg's Bran delights father by bringing health to children

Poor little kids—they need bran badly. But they wouldn't eat ordinary bran. They didn't like them. Most folks don't. Then their father tried Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled. What a difference! He tells the story in his letter:

"Dear Sirs: I wish to express my appreciation of your krumbled bran, which I have used for my children this summer. We had a great deal of trouble with them through constipation, and bran had been the most satisfactory remedy but they could not be induced to take the old varieties. . . . because they disliked them so. They enjoy the krumbled bran and consider it an essential ingredient of their porridge. No one whose children have not been troubled in this way can appreciate the relief there is in having their bowels move regularly."
