

Democrats Must Pay for Use of City Auditorium

C. of C. Publicity Bureau Refuses to Pay Bill for Campaign Speech Here of John W. Davis.

Arthur F. Mullen, democratic national committeeman, and J. H. Hanley, president of the Davis-Bryan club of Omaha, will have to pass up and down the democratic aisle and collect at least $150 from the faithful. One hundred and fifty iron men are needed to defray the cost of the Auditorium for the Davis meeting Saturday night.

Mullen had it figured out that bringing Davis and his entourage to Omaha for a whole day would be such an advertising asset that the publicity bureau of the Chamber of Commerce would pay the rent of the Auditorium. Mullen asked the chamber to help the democrats to that extent, explaining that the money isn't coming in as expected. Local democratic leaders are in financial doldrums. The sinews of war are needed.

Harley Conant, chairman of the publicity bureau of the Chamber of Commerce, could not be sold on the idea that his bureau should pay the rent of the Auditorium for a political meeting. It would be establishing a new precedent, he said.

"They won't pay it," was the brief reference made by Mullen to the incident, adding that the idea had been suggested to the Chamber of Commerce.

FIRST MISHAP TO NEW STEAMBOAT

The steamboat "Decatur" that left St. Louis on August 28 on its maiden voyage to Omaha has met with its first mishap at Herman, Mo., according to H. Ritz, general manager of the Western Express company. Trouble with the wheels of the boat has made a stop necessary at Herman for repairs, was the message received in Omaha. The steamboat had already traveled 153 miles up the Missouri river. With no further trouble, the steamboat is expected to arrive next Sunday or Monday.

A part of the cargo on the boat is waylaid brought to Omaha to launch the barge now on the banks of the Missouri at the foot of Leavenworth street.

United States Army Fliers Near Goal on World Trip

This shows the route of the United States army fliers on their trip around the world. The fliers at present are resting in Pictou Harbor, N. S., where they arrived yesterday from Hawkes Bay, Newfoundland, after six hours and 28 minutes of flying. They plan to hop off from Pictou tomorrow morning, arriving in Boston, their first landing on United States territory since they left Alaska, on the opposite side of the continent, sometime during the afternoon. They will then proceed by easy stages across the United States to their starting point.

Wales' Haberdashery Disappointment; Polo Set Copies Poses and Gestures

By ROLAND KREBS.
By International News Service Staff Correspondent.
Syosett, N. Y., Sept. 4.—The hard riding, fashionable polo set of Long Island gave up its struggle today to glean from the prince of Wales something new and outstanding in up-to-date dress.

Instead it has seized upon something that delights it far more. That is the prince's manner. It is copying the way he stands, the way he leans, his particular slouch, his nervous gestures, his obvious inclination to be stiff or formal at no time.

Those to whom a club and fashionable out of doors life is everything were expecting Wales when he came here for the international polo matches to exhibit samples of his concepts in clothes that have made him the model of all tailors, whether in London, on Fifth avenue, or up one flight where you save $20.

But Wales fooled them. There has been a despairing sameness about his clothes ever since he set foot off the Berengaria last Saturday. He has worn the same hats—a smashed down Panama on hot days, or a broad-rimmed gray felt turned up or down in cool weather.

Wears Blue Shirts.
His shirt every day with lounge suits has been blue, with a blue collar attached. His ties have been russet or brownish red Indian tints with bandana handkerchiefs of the same hue. His suits were gray, sometimes with a thin stripe, other times with a hairline cross-crossing in large checks. Seldom has he been seen with other than tan suede shoes.

The polo set gave up hope little by little, day after day. There seemed nothing about the prince's clothes to copy.

Then the eyes that were turned on him wherever he appeared began noticing his distinctive gestures and mannerisms.

Wales, when he is a little bored, stands with his weight on one foot, the other turned out at an angle of 90 degrees. He shifts his weight from foot to foot every few minutes, turning the free toe at a correspond-

Dawes to Make Trip to Coast

G. O. P. Vice Presidential Candidate Plans to Extend Itinerary.
New York, Sept. 4.—Charles O. Dawes, republican candidate for the vice presidency, extended his speaking tour to the Pacific coast, it was indicated today by William M. Butler, chairman of the republican national committee. The chairman said he would leave Chicago Monday to assist in rearrangement of the Dawes itinerary.

Mr. Butler reiterated that despite increasing demand for speeches by the president, Mr. Coolidge would leave the White House only occasionally.

Mr. Dawes, who is an athlete, slouches a bit, even stoops at times. It has picked that up. He lights his cigarettes in the wind by shielding them with his hat. That's very Long Islandish—now, too. Besides, it's the custom here to hold the cigarette between forefinger tip and thumb and rid it of its ashes with a sweeping gesture through the air, rather than by tapping it with the stiffened forefinger.

Since the heir to Britain's throne has revealed a predilection for cheap American cigars, the tobaccoists of Long Island see their Egyptian and Turkish brands getting dusty on the shelves.

Shocks Dowagers.
Twice Wales shocked dowagers and their daughters who rather thought he'd be over among them by picking out some obscure point where the chauffeurs of Long Island's imported Hispano-Suizas congregate to make their cigarettes and exchange back stairs talk.

The same dowagers and debutantes could not believe their eyes when they saw his royal highness take a match stick and scratch and dig in the mud at his feet. They gasped when they saw him chewing blades of grass. Once the prince boldly scratched his leg where a fly had bitten him. At about the same time, Major Metcalfe, H. R. H.'s equestrian, seated by him, blandly worked back one trouser leg and adjusted a garter as if there were not half a hundred pair of binoculars trained on the pair for as many points in the "for members only" section.

Feminine Long Island, too, is learning that some of the stuff about Wales being almost girlishly shy is nothing but stuff. They have stared at him when they found him looking their way and have been surprised to find him staring back, neither in friendly fashion nor with hostility, but with the vexed gaze that asks, "Well, what are you looking at?"

Property Owner's Wife Is Awarded $2,500 and Divorce

Husband Asserts He Treated Her Liberally—Mate Claims Cruelty in Suit.

Mrs. Hattie Lovejey Mehrens, 43, was awarded $2,500 and a divorce from Peter Mehrens, 47, owner of the Joyce and Conamore apartment houses, by Judge Day in domestic relations court where he ordered at torneys to draw up decrees.

Mrs. Mehrens testified at the hearing that during their courtship Mehrens, looking ahead, had an agreement drawn up by which she was to accept $2,500 in settlement "if they couldn't get along in wedlock." She said she was insulted at the offer and told him "We'll be perfectly happy."

She testified that he treated her cruelly. He declared he treated her fine. He said that during their married life of one year he gave her personal belongings costing $1,100 and $240 cash besides charge accounts in stores and that he took out a $10,000 insurance policy in her favor.

He testified that after the marriage she said to him, "We are not mated. What will you give me to leave?" and that he replied "Not a dime." The court stated that $2,500 was sufficient compensation for one year of unhappy married life.

Mehrens said his two apartment houses, though worth $175,000 are heavily encumbered.

WIFE'S CASH FIRST, JUDGE DAY ORDERS

"But I have my mother to support. I give her $20 a month," objected Herman Wise, as District Judge Day, Thursday, ordered him to pay his wife, Rebecca, $70 a month temporary alimony.

"The wife comes ahead of the mother," said the court. "There is scriptural authority for that. After you have paid your wife $70 you can pay your mother $20."

Mrs. Wise lives at 3117 Lincoln boulevard. They were married February 22, 1922. Wise is employed by Leon Brothers' wholesale department.

800 Head of Colorado Cattle Sold at Atlantic

Atlantic, Ia., Sept. 4.—Eight hundred head of western slope Colorado cattle were sold here at a co-operative marketing sale by the Kraschel company of Harlin, Ia. A total of $40,000 cash was paid by a score of buyers. A sale was held also at Marshalltown. A second sale will be held here on September 20.

Demand was so great that at least 200 additional cattle would have been disposed of here.

Burgess Bedtime Stories

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.
Some people drop their cares with ease. And some do just what they please.—Peter Rabbit.

A Big Family.
Having satisfied his curiosity about the members of the Snake family who lay eggs and those who do not, Peter Rabbit forgot all about the matter. There were other things about which he was curious, and so he thought no more about Snakes.

One day late in the summer he happened to be over near the place where he had often seen little Mr. and Mrs. Garter Snake. He wasn't thinking about them at the time. He had something else on his mind. Probably he wouldn't have thought of them at all had not a faint rustling in the leaves back of him caused him to turn his head. Such a sight as he saw! It is no wonder that his eyes looked as if they were trying to pop out of his head and that for a full minute he couldn't find his tongue.

"Great jumping ghost of my grandfather!" he cried when he did find his tongue. Then he rubbed his eyes. He rubbed them a second time. There lay Mrs. Garter Snake, and crawling over her and around her were so many tiny Snakes that it seemed to Peter that he must be seeing double. If the blades of grass right around there could hardly have been more of them. Anyway, that is how it looked to Peter.

There was a twinkle in the small black eyes of little Mrs. Garter Snake as she saw Peter's astonishment. She didn't wink or blink. You know she has no eyelids, so she cannot wink or blink. If she could have winked I am sure she would have, as she said, "Meet my family, Peter Rabbit."

"Are you asking me to believe that all those babies are yours?" cried Peter.

"Whether or not you believe they are all mine doesn't make the least difference in the world," retorted little Mrs. Garter Snake. "They are mine, every one of them. There are 50 of them."

If she had said there were 500 Peter would have believed it, for

75,000 Witness Beauty Parade

King Neptune and "Miss America" Lead Annual Board Walk.

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 4.—King Neptune and the intertidal beauties staged their triumphant march along the board walk today before a crowd of more than 75,000 persons.

With his gold crown, flowing white hair and whiskers and silver trident, glistening in the bright sunlight, the monarch of the seas rode in state upon a shell-shaped boat float of light blue and gold. Seated with him were eight members of the Atlantic City beauty court in white and standing as guards of honor on either side of the float were six others of the beauty court in gold and blue costumes.

King Neptune arrived at the starting point in a white automobile, the sea being too rough for him to put in an appearance in his gaily decked barge.

With Neptune in the car were "Miss America" and her chaperon. Dense crowds passed about them and gave them a big ovation. Then one by one, the 83 intertidal beauties arrived and were seated in rolling chairs in the order in which they arrived.

The next story: "Interest in Mrs. Garter Snake's Big Family."
