sembled at the field and then go to luncheon with their comrades of the air service at the field mess. Later they will go to the state, war and navy building to pay their respects to Secretary Weeks.
General Pershing, because of an engagement in New York, will not be able to attend the reception.
Unless some unforeseen circumstance presents itself, the planes will be off again Wednesday morning to McCook field, Dayton, O., on the first stage of the 3,000-mile lap to Seattle.
New Yorkers Thrilled.
New York, Sept. 8.—Sophisticated New York stared open mouthed for a brief time this afternoon while the United States army world-girdling aviators, escorted by a dozen airplanes from Mitchell field, flew down the heart of the city toward their landing place on the Long Island flying field.
Stirred by the sight of the machines flying majestically in squadron formation above the skyscrapers and pin-nacles, countless thousands, voiceless for a moment, broke into hearty cheers. Hoarse factory whistles, the shrill screams of harbor craft, automobile horns and other noise-making devices added to the din which was reminiscent of the excitement on armistice day.
At the Polo grounds 35,000 persons had gathered to see the Dodgers and the Giants play a crucial baseball struggle and 35,000 fans forgot baseball.
The machines came out of the north in V formation, the planes of Lieutenants Smith and Nelson in the hollow of the wedge. When over the Battery and the Statue of Liberty they separated and circled about. For five minutes they presented a super-spectacle for the throngs in the fields. Then they turned toward Mitchell field.

SEPTIC POISON IS FATAL TO YOUTH

Septic poisoning, similar to that which caused the death of Calvin Cobidge, Jr., six weeks ago, caused the death of Evan Gravett, 13, Bartlett, Ia., in a Council Bluffs hospital Sunday.
Infection originating from a break in the skin of the boy's leg spread throughout his system, and he was brought to Council Bluffs for treatment last week. Despite the efforts of physicians, the infection continued unchecked.
The body will be returned to Bartlett for burial.
The boy is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Gravett, and by a brother and sister.

BODY OF MISSING MAN IS FOUND

The body of James Stately, 40, who has been missing since August 28 from his home, 1732 Madison street, was found late Sunday by three boys playing in some weeds near Thirtieth and Z streets.
The body was lying at the foot of a bank and a heavy cord was lying near his head, with the other end attached to a stake at the top of the bank. Police believe Stately hanged himself from the stake, though the cord was not around his neck. It is believed the cord may have been rolled away by recent rains.

TWO ARMED MEN ATTACK PRIEST

Chicago, Sept. 8.—Two men, one of them armed with a knife, broke into Saint Barnabas' parish house in Beverly Hills and attacked Father Albert Dolan yesterday, but were driven off by Rev. Thomas Hurley, priest in charge of Saint Barnabas. Father Dolan declared he believed he was the victim of a Ku Klux Klan attack. He was severely cut on one arm and on his hands in a struggle with the assailant. A local controversy over the building of a new church building was believed by the priests to have been connected with the attack.

State Oil Suit Arguments on Flood of Oratory in Injunction Case to Continue Several Days.

Arguments in the suit by which the state is seeking to enjoin 14 oil and gasoline companies from doing business in Nebraska began Monday morning before District Judge Hastings, T. J. McGuire, an assistant attorney general, making the opening statement for the prosecution.
Attorney General Spillman filed the suit February 28, 1924. More than 50 affidavits, some of them voluminous, have been taken.
A month ago these were turned over to Judge Hastings, who agreed to study the thousands of typewritten pages instead of taking a vacation.
Half a dozen attorneys for the state and about 15 for the defendants were in the courtroom Monday as the arguments began.
With gasoline selling at 11 to 12 cents in Omaha and proportionately low throughout the state, the state contends that the defendants have conspired to fix prices and restrain trade and stifle competition.
A statement by McGuire that if the Standard Oil company, for example, lowered its gasoline price in one locality to meet competition, it must lower the price everywhere else in proportion, drew interruptions from defense attorneys.
The oratory will continue for many days, it was indicated at the opening session.

Burgess Bedtime Stories

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.
Say what you will, to me 'tis plain
That every one is sometimes vain.
—Peter Rabbit.
Peter Rabbit's Funny Question.
Peter Rabbit and Grandfather Frog sat on the bank of the Smiling Pool talking. Grandfather Frog was at the edge of the water, while Peter was higher up on the bank. Peter had flattered Grandfather Frog by telling him that he was the biggest and handsomest Frog in all the Great World. Grandfather Frog knew that he was being flattered, but despite this his vanity was tickled. He felt very friendly toward Peter.
As they talked Grandfather Frog kept swallowing. Peter could see his throat move every time he swallowed. It was as if he had not yet finished his breakfast and was swallowing food lowing when there came a sudden interruption.

It was a very sudden interruption. Grandfather Frog had just started to say something when without any warning at all he made a beautiful long, clean dive into the Smiling Pool, and Peter caught just a glimpse of him disappearing in the mud at the bottom.
"Well, I never!" exclaimed Peter, staring after Grandfather Frog with such a funny look of puzzled surprise on his face.
"Some day I'll get him," said a voice in a tone of disappointment. "Some day I'll get that fellow."
Peter turned to see Longlegs the Great Blue Heron standing at the edge of the water and gazing down into the Smiling Pool with a look of disappointment. He had stolen up along the edge of the Smiling Pool so quietly that Peter hadn't noticed him at all. Peter had been too interested in Grandfather Frog to notice anything else. But Grandfather Frog had used his big, goggle eyes as well as his tongue, and he had seen Longlegs in time.

Longlegs knew better than to waste time waiting in the hope that Grandfather Frog would return. He kept on along the shore of the Smiling Pool and finally disappeared among the rushes at the upper end. Peter remained sitting on the bank. After what seemed to him a long time he saw just the two big, goggle eyes of Grandfather Frog appear above the surface of the water. Peter was sure they winked at him. Sure that Longlegs was no longer there, Grandfather Frog swam ashore. "Where did he go, Peter?" said he.
Peter told him. "Then I'm safe," declared Grandfather Frog. "What are you staring so hard at me for, Peter?"
Peter hesitated. "I—I have been wondering what you are swallowing," he confessed. "Are you still swallowing your breakfast, Grandfather Frog?"
The next story: "What Grandfather Frog Was Swallowing."
