

1 Dead, 6 Hurt in Train Wreck

Bolts Removed From Rails Ditch Sunset Limited in Arizona.

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 9.—One trainman was killed, another seriously injured and five passengers less seriously hurt early today when the eastbound Sunset Limited on the Southern Pacific was derailed near Maricopa, Ariz., according to a report received at the headquarters of the railroad here today.

There was evidence that an attempt had been made to tamper with the rails, causing the wreck. An investigation revealed that the nuts had been removed from at least three bolts holding the rail at the point where the wreck occurred.

Fireman G. Ward was killed and Conductor Anderson, who was "dead-heading" in the baggage car, was seriously injured. Names of the injured passengers had not been received.

The injured and all other passengers were taken to Maricopa soon after the wreck occurred and there transferred to the Golden State Limited, which was following.

The train was running at a speed of about 45 miles an hour when the tampered section of rail was struck.

Despite this speed, the train of 10 cars was stopped within five car lengths.

The engine, mail car, baggage car and a tourist sleeping left the tracks and three Pullman cars left the rails, but remained on the ties.

The train was in charge of Engineer E. Shelley and Conductor J. Omar. It was proceeding, according to the reports, at its usual speed at that point.

An investigation was immediately started to determine the cause of the derailment and the tampered section of rail discovered. Officers were expected on the scene early today to search for the persons responsible and to determine, if possible, the motive for wrecking the crack passenger train.

Japan in Need of Emigration

Nation Must Have Outlet for Surplus Population, Shidehara Says.

By Associated Press.

Tokio, Sept. 9.—Foreign Minister Shidehara, speaking before the opening session of the imperial emigration commission of which he is chairman, today laid emphasis on the "present situation," adding that it necessitated the creation of such a body.

The foreign minister stressed the fact that the population of Japan was growing from 600,000 to 700,000 annually, and that, while emigration furnished an outlet for only a small part of this number, nevertheless it was necessary for Japan to seek the best available outlet.

However, the foreign minister added, care should be taken that Japan's emigration policy should not jeopardize its relations with other powers.

Defense Day. Flying Home. Pity a Sad "Aristocrat." "Coolidge," Says Hays. By ARTHUR BRISBANE

Clergymen express different opinions about Defense day. The Rev. Dr. Harris disapproving, says, "You cannot outlaw war and fight with it." He means that if you are against war, you must not prepare for war.

That's not sound. You outlaw burglary, and yet keep your police ready to handle burglars when they appear.

This much is sure about Defense day. Clergymen and others may be uncertain about it now, but they wouldn't be in the least uncertain if war should break out.

In New York City at 3:20 p.m., daylight saving time; yesterday, along came three magnificent flying machines, far up above the skyscrapers, sailing home.

The flight around the world is over, and six young Americans will live in history when everybody connected with this presidential campaign, even La Follette, is completely forgotten.

History will forever record, if only in two lines, the dates and names connected with the first human flight around the world.

Birds did it long ago, but they are only birds.

That the nation which invented the flying machine, should be the first nation to send a flying machine around the world seems appropriate. More appropriate would be adequate flying machine defense for this country.

Mr. Grenville Winthrop, pleasantly described by the social reporter as a "wealthy, retired, banker, philanthropist, and aristocrat," is under the care of two doctors. His two daughters eloped, one with a chauffeur, the other with a young electrician.

For a "retired aristocrat" to receive such a blow is painful, but in his sorrow there is warning and comfort for other wealthy, retired American aristocrats.

One of his daughters was 31 years of age; she and her sister, 24, had been kept secluded.

Beware how you keep daughters too secluded, especially after 30, and more especially if they are rich, in their own right, as are these two young women.

That's the warning.

The comfort is this: The Winthrop family, to which the "retired aristocrat" belongs, may find itself improved, its energies increased and its life on earth prolonged by the addition of a chauffeur and an electrician to the family lineage.

After the first wild burst of grief, the annoyed aristocratic father should look up the life of William the Conqueror. His mother was washing clothes in a brook when the duke of Normandy first saw her. The duke later married her.

Or the aristocrat may comfort himself with the history of Leonardo Da Vinci. His mother, an ignorant peasant girl, never married Leonardo's father. Her son is the only one in that family that ever amounted to anything. One of his pictures would sell easily for $2,000,000 today. There should be comfort in that even for aristocracy.

Will Hays, who bossed Harding's campaign, was postmaster general, and now runs the moving picture industry, was explaining politics yesterday to Lady Diana Manners and Mrs. W. R. Hearst. He said that if he ever bet, which he never does, he would bet "anything I could afford to lose" that Coolidge will be elected without any throwing of the election into the house. When it comes to politics, Hays is a good judge.

You will know this morning something about the election in Maine. Bear in mind that what counts, as an indication of the presidential vote, is the election of the senator. The fight for the Maine governorship is local, it may go any way. The senatorial vote will show how the state will stand in the national campaign.

Tomorrow, reading from sheets of ruled manila paper about 1,000 words, Judge Caverly will tell the world and the two Chicago muckers what is to be done with these young men.

Latest news from the prison describes Loeb as lamenting his fate to a girl who called upon him and said:

"You are just plain stupid. I would never have believed it of you."

Loeb is supposed to have said that he wished other girls had made him feel stupid instead of making him feel "devilish" as they did.

Such a girl is a woman's cry. Whatever men do women are blamed. Ask your Mother Eve.

"Manchurian hordes are marching on Pekin." That's another cry from the past. Through the centuries different hordes have marched against that flowery mid-die kingdom.

Newcomers ruled, peace and luxury undermined them, other hordes came in to take their places. The giant wall did not keep them out, although men had not learned to fly.

North Platte Prepares to Give Fliers Welcome

Special Dispatch to The Omaha Bee.

"Chug-arum!" said he at last. "Chug-arum! Of course I'm not swallowing my breakfast. I swallowed that long ago, and could eat another right now."

"Then what are you swallowing?" persisted Peter, for Grandfather Frog had swallowed once or twice even while he was speaking.

"Air," replied Grandfather Frog gruffly.

Burgess Bedtime Stories

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

Things in themselves are seldom queer. When once they're seen with vision clear—Grandfather Frog.

What Grandfather Frog Was Swallowing.

It was a very personal question that Peter Rabbit had asked Grandfather Frog. That was why Peter had hesitated to ask it. Grandfather Frog had kept swallowing and swallowing and spoke. "You've known me a long time, haven't you, Peter?" said

Grandfather Frog looked up at Peter and swallowed. He swallowed again before he opened his big mouth and spoke. "You've known me a long time, haven't you, Peter?" said

Peter nodded. "Almost as long as I can remember," he replied.

"Yet this is the first time you have noticed me swallowing air. My, my, how little some people see!" said Grandfather Frog. "I've swallowed air ever since I was big enough to leave the water. If I didn't swallow it how ever would I get it to my lungs?"

"Why, I should suppose you would get it there the same way I get it to my lungs. I draw it in through my nose and it goes right into my lungs. Don't you draw it in through your nose?" Peter asked.

"Certainly," replied Grandfather Frog. "But when I take it in through my nose it comes down into the forward part of my mouth, and I have to swallow it so as to get it down where it can go into my lungs." He swallowed again as he spoke.

"Oh!" exclaimed Peter. "Isn't it funny?"

"I don't see anything funny about it," retorted Grandfather Frog.
