An interesting pair of sisters in the younger set are Lida and Jane Whitmore, daughters of the Jesse D. Whitmores of Valley, who make so light of the 20 miles between their home and Omaha that they are to be daily motor commuters to Brownell Hall this winter.

They are among our most traveled young persons, and since their parents believe very strongly in their seeing America (and seeing lots of it) first, they have been in almost every interesting section of our country. Perhaps that makes these intervening miles seem to them no more than an ordinary jaunt to one's studies.

Both girls are expert riders, and have their own mounts. They may be seen every bright day cantering along the lovely lanes near their home.

Miss Hilda Cornish, the attractive young sister of Mrs. Raymond F. Low, returned to her home at Little Rock, Ark., on Friday, following a 10-day visit here. She will go east shortly to resume her studies at Bryn Mawr. Miss Cornish is remembered as a visitor here three years ago.

Ever enlivening to the social calendar are visitors from out of town. A very popular guest this week, at the home of her husband's sister, Mrs. George Seeman, has been Mrs. Neil Dunn of Hastings. Both Mrs. Seeman and Mrs. Dunn were formerly of Lincoln, where they were attractive members of the university and local social set. Affairs have been given daily in compliment to the visitor.

School days mean goodbyes to Beth and Jane Trimble, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Trimble, who left this week, to be apart until Christmas.

Last year, when Beth entered the University of Nebraska, where she was made a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma, she was separated for the first time from Jean, who chose Monticello Seminary as her school.

This year, Beth returned to the university on Thursday to take part in the sorority rushing plans. Jean went east on Tuesday to enter Francis Shimer, at Mount Carroll, Ill.

The girls spent the summer with their family at Lake Okoboji, where both, expert swimmers, excited the envy of the other vacationers.

How to Solve Your Gift Problem

By GABBY.

GABBY discovers that a car is the great solution of the gift problem.

Last week Lieut. and Mrs. Harold Myer (Katherine Lineburg) set off on their wedding trip with the comfort, line assurance that a sedan, given the bride by her uncle, Judge Benjamin Baker, as a wedding gift would be a faithful supplement to both train and boat as a means of travel. When Judge Baker gave the car to his niece, he did not know that its destination would be the Philippine Islands. But so it will, and it will arrive there on the same boat which carries the bride and groom to their new home.

The car solved the judge's gift problem, and a couple solved Everett Buckingham's puzzle, when he wanted to give his son, Robert, and wife a gift in honor of the enviable new position young Buckingham lately achieved with a giant packing industry.

Again a sedan was the solution for the Lee Huffs, when they wished to present a gift to their first grand daughter, Sara Lee Huff. The baby's mother, Mrs. Lee Huff, Jr., has had the car fitted with a special basket in which the baby rides, safe and sound, on her mother's round of calls.

RED CROSS canteeners of war days were called on the telephone this week in connection with the defense day parade. "I found that about a third of the old number had moved away or at least out of telephone reach," said the assistant. "One-third responded quickly to the idea of mobilizing, and the other third said they could not serve because they had had babies since their canteen days."

"Just as good for national defense as marching in a parade" commented a friend.

ETIQUETTE books advise one safely away from toothpicks and other implements of horror. They indicate the proper form for wedding invitations and even outline appropriate menus for special occasions. But none of them, Gabby finds from diligent search, divulge just what salutations are in order when a husband meets his wife out motoring with another man.

"Firstance. On an evening late this week, one of our most admired Omahans, recently returned from a trip, was coupling over the asphalt with the wife of another man. She is an attractive medium blonde, very

November 7, Margaret Wycherley, in dramatic recital; January 20, Gilbert Seldes, "The Unfine Arts and How to Enjoy Them." January 30, Gertrude Atherton, author of "Black Oxen," in a lecture; February 13, Cosmo Hamilton in "The Theater." March 17, Maj. Vivian Gilbert, "Both Sides of the Footlight." In addition, two modern plays will be interpreted by local readers. Single lectures will be $1, except Miss Atherton's at $2.

Lucille Lathrop to Wed October 4.

Miss Lucille Lathrop, daughter of the Charles B. Lathrops, has set the date for her wedding to Glenn Hoffhines of Chicago, for the evening of Tuesday, October 14.

The ceremony will be performed at the home of the bride's parents by Rev. Howard Clarkson Whitecomb of the Calvary Baptist church.

Miss Lathrop has chosen her sister, Winifred, to be her maid of honor, and her other attendants will be Miss Helen Nolan and Mrs. Donald Pettis of Lincoln, at whose wedding last fall Miss Lathrop was a bridesmaid.

Mr. Hoffhines' brother, Harold, will come to Omaha from Manhattan, Kan., where he is a student in the Kansas State college, to serve his brother as best man. Ushers will be Messrs. Phillip Helgren and Donald Pettis.

Woman's Press Club.

Omaha Woman's Press club will entertain at luncheon at 1 Wednesday for Miss Alice Brady, the week's headline of the Oppenheim theater. Miss Brady is a daughter of the former producer, and is a well known stage and screen star.

On Tuesday at 4, the manuscript section will meet at the Morris apartment sun room. Mrs. Sidney Baker and Miss Grace Sorenson will read.

Officers Honor Mrs. Dorey.

Officers of the 11th Infantry gave a supper party at Fort Omaha Friday night following the parade, honoring Mrs. Dorey, wife of Gen. Halstead Dorey.

Master Loomis Host.

Mrs. John W. Loomis gave a neighborhood birth party Friday for her little son.

Overseas Girls to Incorporate

Will Endow a Bed in University of Nebraska Hospital.

Miss Mona Cowell's legal knowledge gained at Creighton law school is standing the Overseas Girls' Service League in good stead since the University of Nebraska Medical college has told the girls that it cannot accept a permanent endowment for a bed unless the endowing organization is incorporated.

Miss Cowell, who has long been one of the league's most valued members, is busy now drawing up articles of incorporation and the $5,000 made in the carnival held last year, and by other means, will be left in trust to support the bed forever.

It is not yet decided where the bronze tablet which will commemorate the donors will be placed.

The bed will not be permanently located, but will be moved from ward to ward depending on the varying ailments of the sick, who will be assigned to the bed by the overseas girls.

Bridal Dinner at Happy Hollow Last Night.

Mrs. D. E. McCague entertained at Happy Hollow last evening at a bridal dinner when her son, Thomas Field McCague, and his fiancée, Loreen Abarr, were the honor guests.

Covers were laid for Messrs. and Mesdames G. W. Abarr, Irving Allison, Mrs. J. E. Haney of Pittsburgh, Kan., who has come for the wedding; Messrs. Beatrice Cosney, Claire Nelson and Marion Abarr.

Decorations were in pink and white. The wedding will be solemnized Wednesday evening, at the bride's home.
