Omaha Society of Fine Arts
 One of the most important lectures of the season will open the program for the Omaha Society of Fine Arts on November 2 at 4 o'clock at the Fontenelle hotel, when Norman Angell will speak.
 Mr. Angell comes to America to interpret the latest development of the big social movement in Europe—more particularly the effects of a labor administration upon English life and government. He passed a large part of his youth in America on a western ranch, lived nearly 20 years in France, and in recent years has been in close and intimate contact with the government of Great Britain.
 The exhibition of selected works by western painters now being shown at the Fine Arts galleries is a collection of works of 80 different artists. There are also familiar names among them but many new one too.
