Bombing the Great Wall. One to Six on La Follette Too Small and Too Big. The Prince's Ponies.
By ARTHUR BRISBANE

ers of General Chang were bombing the great wall of China. Can you imagine the amazement of the old emperor that kept his hundreds of thousands of men working on the wall, if he could come back and see T. N. T. from the sky blowing out whole sections of it?
Our naval officers that want to build battleships instead of fighting flying machines should be sent to look at that fight in China.

other in China, a whole lot of Asiatic generals might do to the people of the United States.
We should have a flying machine fleet as big as all the flying fleets of the rest of the world combined. If we can afford to own more automobiles than the rest of the world owns, twice over, we can afford protection in the air to enjoy our automobiles.

since you could have got 100 to 1 against La Follette being elected. Now the odds are cut from 8 to 1, to 6 to 1.
The principality of Monaco, tiny country on the edge of the Mediterranean, so small that you can easily walk around it by "the upper road," home of the great Monte Carlo gambling house, wants to enter the league of nations. The league says, "You are too small."

country to come in the United States should answer, "no thanks, we are too big." A league that doesn't want a very small country, because it wouldn't be of much use, should not include the biggest of all countries—which might be made too useful to the others.
Paul M. Warburg says "Europe has turned the corner." He believes the proposed loan to Germany will be a success. Everybody here hopes it will.
The foolish young man who was once crown prince of Germany scheme to persuade little people to put their savings into foreign bonds of any kind.

If big financiers feel that it will be good for the world to help Germany let them help Germany.
Unloading European bonds on small American investors, with a rakeoff for the financiers now, and all future loss for the little investors isn't a good idea.

now quotes poetry to express his conviction that the German crown is lost to his family forever.
The poet that he ought to quote is Schiller, who wrote: "Gegen Dummheit, kaempfen Goetter selbst vergebenst."
That means "against stupidity the Gods themselves fight in vain."
Governor Templeton of Connecticut, tells the Kiwanis club of Waterbury, "I can lick any man my age and weight in the country."
That's perhaps true, and once it would have been important. It isn't now.

Dugesielin, who could "lick" any half dozen men of his weight and age, in France about 600 years ago, would have to learn how to use his brains if he came back.
The prince of Wales sold seven ponies at auction yesterday for $19,000. Will Rogers, able "philosopher-comedian," got a bargain. He bought his pony for $2,100 and will get at least $210,000 worth of free advertising out of it.
