Museum Notes.

Walter Ufer, whose exhibit in the galleries of the public library last spring was so much enjoyed, is represented in the present exhibition of western paintings by a large canvas called "Where Desert Meets Mountain." Typical New Mexican country is depicted.

will be conscious of the danger of the situation depicted. The arrows may at any moment be filled with a mountain torrent. But here we are face to face with the matter of enjoying a painting for its subject rather than for its aesthetic quality.

During his stay in New Mexico last summer Augustus Dumbler spent much time with this interesting artist, and brings back enthusiastic reports. Mr. and Mrs. Dumbler took an adobe house at their headquarters in the same village of Taos in which Mr. Ufer lives.
