Ability and Hard Work.
Mr. President, Why so Many?
Wanted 3-Headed Air Mail.
"National City" Advice.
By ARTHUR BRISBANE

The world recognizes ability, soon forgets hatreds of war. In the White House yesterday the president received and warmly congratulated Dr. Eckener, tall blonde German, that brought over the ZR-3. Dr. Eckener and the able German air sailors that came with him, were entertained at a formal luncheon at the navy building by high United States officials and Dr. Baer, secretary of the German embassy.

The German nation received a terrific blow in that war, but got rid of kaisers, and that probably was worth the price. Ability and hard work overcome everything in the end, and the Germans possess both to the highest degree.

Commander C. B. Tinker, United States navy, retired, and therefore free to speak plainly, says Japan "has launched an intensive program of airplane construction. Even Japanese school children are asked to contribute to building flying machines."

With 17 flying machine factories working day and night, Japan's energy ought to interest President Coolidge, and those that share with him responsibility for national defense.

Why, Mr. President, does Japan want so many flying machines? Is there any connection between the building of these machines, modern fighting engines, and Japanese indignation at our immigration laws?

Polite request to President Coolidge and Postmaster General New:

Please make the transcontinental air mail a triple-headed service, something like Cerebus, watchdog of the infernal regions. He was a most efficient watchdog.

Air mail, direct from New York to San Francisco, should continue, of course, but there should be a splitting up of mail at some convenient point, perhaps at Salt Lake City, with direct flights from that point south to Los Angeles, north to Seattle, as well as to San Francisco. More splitting will come later. This "country" needs flying machines, and there is plenty of postoffice work for them to do.

The French say "appetite comes with eating." Appetite for American money also comes with eating.

America has ten billions lent in Europe, with little prospect of payment for the greater part of the money.

Private individuals have several thousand million dollars invested in European bonds, and have just bought $110,000,000 of German bonds. It is announced that various European countries are trying to borrow more billions here.

President Mitchell of New York's National City bank, biggest in America, looks at investments from the point of view of the American investor, and issues a useful warning against the indiscriminate floating or buying of foreign loans.

Wall street election gamblers bet even money that you can't name any three states that La Follette will carry.

What about Wisconsin, North Dakota, Minnesota?

Wall street also bets even money that Coolidge will carry New York state by 500,000 votes. It will surprise John W. Davis when he learns how many votes that religious quarrel in the democratic convention was destined to cost him.

German professors believe that they have found in acetylene gas an ideal anesthetic, permitting operations of long duration, without harmful after effects, and these men, Wieland and Guass, believe, which is the most important, that they have found a safe narcotic for child birth. Mixed with oxygen in small quantities, the anaesthetic cuts off transmission of pain through the spinal column, while leaving the brain awake.

Sooner or later human ingenuity will conquer all disease, and conquer also the pain of child birth. There must be some fruit to that severe punishment inflicted upon Eve and her daughters for listening to the snake and eating the apple.

If you concentrate on one thing with intelligence and work hard you will arrive.

Marcus Lowe, not many years ago, used to tell this writer that he was going to have theaters, and develop moving pictures. He did so, and has just paid $1,000,000 for "a little country house," at the water's edge at Glen Cove, Long Island. Captain DeLamar spent $2,000,000 on the house that Marcus Lowe buys for $1,000,000.

The ZR-3 amazes visitors with its "luxury," comfortable berths, bath rooms, lounging rooms, kitchen, halls, magnificently furnished. Those lacking imagination say "Flying ships are too delicate, too easily injured, depend too much on the weather." It's the old story, weather rules man, then man rules the weather.

Trains on the railroad from Buffalo to Rochester were advertised to start "weathering."

Many 50 years old will live to see ocean steamships entirely out of date, all long distance travel through the air.

A man, arrested in Kansas City, with a band new religion of his own, assures the police that he was born in Jerusalem 3,000 years ago, and calls himself "Jesus Christ Re-vealed."

Nine women were arrested with him, six of them colored women, all believing in him absolutely. Human beings crave religion, and that craving among those that have strayed from old established faith is the opportunity of the religious mountebank.
