F. Bolton Mallory to Wed in Florida

The wedding of F. Bolton Mallory, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Mallory, to Miss Frances Dunwoody Jones of Orlando, Fla., will be solemnized November 4 in Orlando. Mr. and Mrs. Mallory, sr., will leave Friday night to attend the ceremony. The Richard Mr. Mallory and his bride will reside in New York. Mr. Mallory is a graduate of the University of Illinois, where he was a Chi Psi, and of Princeton university. He has also been a graduate student in the latter institution the past two years.

His bride, who is said to be a titian-haired beauty, is a lifelong friend of his family, and the romance has grown since their childhood. Miss Jones is talented artistically and has followed a career in design.

The bride and groom may come to Omaha for the holidays.

Mrs. Crofoot to Accompany for Dramatist

Mrs. L. P. Crofoot, one of Omaha's foremost pianists, will accompany Miss Laura Sherry, who gives a dramatic recital to the Omaha Drama League Friday, 4 p. m., Brandeis theater.

Miss Wilcox a Bride

Miss Bernice Wilcox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Wilcox, was married Thursday afternoon in the chapel at All Saints church, to LeRoy G. Lambert of Palo Alto, Cal.

Miss Wilcox is the first bride in the new chapel. Rev. Cassidy performed the ceremony. Owing to deaths in both families the wedding was a very quiet affair. Mrs. F. L. Fantall of Hammond, La., aunt of the bride, was an out-of-town guest.

After a wedding journey, Mr. and Mrs. Lambert will reside at the Tidoussac.

Dinner Party

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dooley entertained at dinner at their home Wednesday night for Miss Martha Hedman and her husband, Henry Arthur House, who are appearing at the Orpheum theater this week. Covers were placed for six. The party attended the theater following dinner.

Hostesses at Golf

Mrs. Elaine Young and Mrs. Maynard Swartz have been hostesses at golf at the Field club this week for Miss Kittle Doner, Miss Corinne Sales and James Dooley, Orpheum players of the week, who are also golf enthusiasts.

Your Problems

By Martha Allen

To Lover of Justice.

Dear Miss Allen: If you met a man that was good-hearted, loving, kind, attended church every Sunday, does not drink liquor, smokes but very little, and when he smokes he smokes a pipe. Who is ambitious and saving and who plans on as soon as he gets enough money to buy or build a nice home for you.

And if he was 13 yr. your senior. You went to dances and shows about two mo. then he proposed to you. You accept. He told you that he loves you, and only went with one girl when he was just a young lad for he did not believe in going with a girl that he did not love and he proved that he just simply adores you and will do anything in his power to make you happy. Two and one half year have passed and the wedding is to be next Feb. He is now 25 yr. old, and like him. But for the last 8 mo you have met a man your same age that offers you the same as the first, and is a perfect gentleman, has better manners than the first, a better education and is better looking, and he loves you and you also love him.

And you know if you should break the engagement it would simple ruin his health, for you know he would worry, but you love the second one because he is better educated and has better manners. What would you do Miss Allen? Please ans this in the Omaha Bee. Thanking you.

LOVER OF JUSTICE.

Better marry the less educated one. I think you would be more congenial.

Idle Hours.

Dear Miss Allen: We are high school girls, one a junior and one of us a senior. Every few weeks our basket ball team (boys) have a game with some team from another town and the boys who come here to play have four or five hours in town. Is it proper for us to date up with the boys on the other teams?

ANN AND BETTY.

Friendships with high school boys from other towns ought to be beneficial to both you and the boys, depending on how you spend your time. If you loaf around a railroad station with them it would not be inspiring to good conduct. If you invite the boys to your homes and have them meet your families, it would be perfectly splendid behavior. Your town school ought to provide some entertainment for these out-of-town boys if they have that much time to idle away.

An Iron as a Substitute for a Stove.
If you have no stove, an electric iron will help you in more than one emergency. Turn it upside down. Place it between two ordinary irons or other metal supports and switch on the electricity. You will have a fine little stove for heating water or a baby's bottle.

Community Chest Chairman

Mrs. A. H. Fetters
Mrs. A. H. Fetters has been named chairman of the woman's division for the Community Chest drive, succeeding Mrs. Margaret J. Hynes, who was chairman last year. The chest seeks $140,000 for the year's budget. In the past campaign women raised $80,000. Vice chairmen serving with Mrs. Fetters are Mesdames W. E. Rhoades, Arthur Mullen and Louis Clarke.

Mrs. Conrad Young, her children and mother, Mrs. Anne Scotland, arrive Friday from Evergreen, Colo.

Mrs. Howell, Mrs. Barkalow Share Honors at Tea

Mrs. Milton T. Barlow was hostess at a small informal tea this afternoon for Mrs. R. Beecher Howell and for Mrs. S. V. Barkalow, formerly of Omaha, now of Washington, D. C.

Hallowe'en Parties.

Miss Gladys Bernstein entertained at a Hallowe'en party last Saturday evening, at which 35 guests attended.

A Hallowe'en party will be given at the home of J. P. Grobeck Friday evening. Twenty-four guests will be present.

Mrs. R. W. Hunting gave a Hallowe'en dinner for 15 Wednesday evening, honoring the birthday of Mrs. John A. Swanson.

Friends and employees of the Skinner Manufacturing company were entertained Tuesday evening at a Hallowe'en party. Dancing was the chief entertainment. A short program was given.

Mrs. Alexander Pickens left Monday following a visit with her daughter, Mrs. Margaret Hynes. Mrs. Pickens is in Hastings for two weeks before going to Coronado Beach, Cal.

Safety committees will be organized in each of the women's organizations represented on this committee and will immediately undertake a program of education using material furnished by the Omaha Safety Council in matters pertaining to safety in the home, safety on the streets, in the schools and industrial homes.

A Wife's Confessional

Adele Garrison's New Phase of REVELATIONS OF A WIFE
(Copyright, 1924.)

What Bess Dean Told Madge About Alice Stockbridge.

I have imagined many meetings with Bess Dean since the day when by an old ruse—pretending that I knew something discreditable concerning a past episode in her life—I effectually thwarted her machinations against Lella Durkee. But in all those fancied meetings she has turned upon me a face bitter and malevolent, and when she came toward me from the farther end of the Bayview butcher shop, I did not like my eyes to meet the hostile glare which I was sure I could see in hers.

The next second I felt her hand clap me on the shoulder in the old, rough, comradely salute which she always gave the colleagues she liked in our teaching days together, and when in astonishment I looked at her, I saw nothing but the old friendly mockery of her glance, although I fancied that far back in her eyes I caught a glint of a far-different feeling.

"Well, if it isn't the old sleuth herself!" she gibed. "How are you? Still hitting on all six?"

She lowered her voice as I stood at her blankly, too bewildered at her extraordinary attitude in the face of what lay between us to attempt speech or motion.

"Come, can't you play up?" she asked tensely. "Or do you—"

I came to life swiftly. For some reason or other she wished to ignore the unfortunate series of incidents which had been brought to a head at our last meeting, and although my experience of the girl warned me to be wary, yet I could not refuse such extraordinary overture without laying myself open to the just accusation of being rude—and—

"At least on five," I returned, making a valiant effort to smile. "And you? But I don't need to ask you are looking—"

"As happy as a girl who had danced with the prince of Wales," she retorted, walking with me to the counter, and standing sedately by while I ordered and paid for the steak we were to broil outdoors.

"Then she went on with me to the door, and looking up and down the street, said tensely:

"Tell those kids to get into the car. I've got something to say to you."

I did not resent her imperious manner, for I felt that in our last encounter she had had so much the worst of it that I could afford to be generous. Therefore, I handed the steak to Katie and instructed her to put Marion and Junior into the car. Then I turned to Bess, who, secure in the fact that no one was within earshot, and that her face was turned from everyone's vision but mine, permitted herself a tiny betrayal of the hatred which I knew was lurking in her heart for me.

Bess Dean Remembers.

"Don't think I've forgotten the scurvy trick you played me," she began venomously, but I interrupted her quickly.

"I have no illusions whatever concerning you, Bess," I said quietly, "for your feelings toward me. I simply am 'playing up,' as you asked me to do."

"It's not for myself I'm asking it," she retorted. "I'd see you in the hot place until the alabaster returned and it froze solid, before I'd either ask you for anything or lift a finger to help you. But an old friend of mine, who also had the bad taste to count you a friend, is coming on a visit, and I'm not going to spoil things by having her suspect we're not on friendly terms."

I forgot the thing which lay between us in my pleasurable excitement at the news she had given me. "You don't mean Alice Holcombe?" I cried happily.

"Alice Holcombe Stockbridge and no other," she returned. "Also Kenneth Stockbridge."

"But how can he?" I asked puzzled.

"Isn't he a principal of the school out there where they moved?"

"Not this Kenneth," she returned with an English grin.

My eyes widened with sudden enlightenment.

"Bess!" I exclaimed as in the old days, and she nodded.

"Yes," she said, "Kenneth Stockbridge, Junior, six months old. She's bringing him down here to see his relatives. But didn't you know?"

There was something so malicious, so gloating in her voice, that even as I answered I knew that in some way she was responsible for the conditions of things which my answer revealed.

"I haven't heard from her in over a year," I said quietly. "I wrote to her, giving her my change of address when we left Marvin, but she never answered the letter."

Bess Dean laughed hatefully.

"I remember your giving me that letter to mail," she said. "Now I wonder if it is possible I forgot to send it."

Are They Missing Life?

Those who have never seen Florida

The fellow was just half right who said, "What one never had, he never misses." Florida is very much on the public tongue today. Some people want to go there because it's a distinction. But there is something far more intrinsic than distinction in a visit to Florida.

It's a land that revitalizes. Its mystic climate galvanizes the spirit—stern men play—sombre women laugh—and old age becomes a dim memory of the distant past.

Florida is not only a land of youth, of smiling suns and caressing breezes. It's a frame of mind. The golden hours of even a short visit here outshine the dull, drab months of a year in another land. In two weeks down here you can create a reserve of happiness that will keep you in a genial frame of mind for the rest of the year.

Why not plan a trip to Florida? It's near—the railroad fare is not great—living expenses here need be no greater than at home—and there's no law against vacationing in the winter—that's a matter of planning.

We will be pleased to give you full details about a trip to any point in Florida.

Our booklet, "Florida" will give you valuable pointers. Send for it.
