

A truly chic Sammyer sailor of cheney panne velvet has for trimmings a pinwheel of grosgrain ribbon backed by squirrel fur and held together by the ubiquitous buckle of imitation emeralds and rhinestones.

Morning glories inspired the designing of this Sammyer turban of redwood cheney velvet. The salmon pink morning glories with their capucine leaves are entirely handcut, making the most effective of trimmings.

Smart double brim Sammyer hat of ravenwood and clay cheney velvet with a facing of faille to match. The crown is entirely covered with hand-cut leaves.

Nebraska main streets. This is Ravenna. Nuh. Are you proud of your town? Then send a picture of its main street to The Omaha Bee and it will be printed in this section. Address it to the Alcovravure editor.

Elena Gerhardt, mezzo soprano, will appear at the Brandeis theater November 12 under the auspices of the Tuesday Musical club.

How dairying is done in Wisconsin. This dairy farm, owned by D. L. Williams of Waukesha, Wis., nets its owner 10 per cent annually on his investment of $200,000. This is typical of the farms visited by the 1-10 Nebraska farmers who journeyed to Wisconsin on the Nebraska dairy special last month.

How many dollars represented here? A few of the 2,000 bogs on the farm of Vet. Lewis of Meadow Grove, Neb.
