Verdict of Guilty in Decker Case

Youth Convicted in County for Manslaughter After Auto Crash.

To Be Sentenced Later

James Decker, 19, 314 North Nineteenth street, was found guilty of manslaughter in district court Thursday.

The charge against Decker was an outgrowth of the fatal injuring of Tommy Healy, 4, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Healy, 3325 North Thirty-seventh street, July 22, when a truck driven by Decker crashed with a sedan driven by Mrs. Healy.

Case First Dropped.

After a brief investigation of the accident the police and the coroner agreed to drop proceedings against Decker. Mr. Healy, heart broken over the death of his son, insisted that something be done and the county attorney's office obtained a complaint against Decker charging manslaughter.

Deputy County Attorney Dan Gross prosecuted the case.

Parents Testify.

Two of the witnesses called by the state were the father and mother of the dead boy. Mrs. Healy, who overcame with grief by the picture which her testimony revived in her memory sobbingly told of the accident and explained how she believed her son had been killed.

Healy, his health impaired by constant brooding over his loss, was called to the witness stand at the completion of his wife's testimony. Sentence has not been passed as yet on Decker. The statute calls for a penalty of from one to 10 years imprisonment or a fine of from $200 to $500.

Little Hope Held for Recovery of Senator Lodge

Report of Physicians Says His Condition Is "Most Unfavorable; He Still Is Unconscious."

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 6.—Little hope of the recovery of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge was held out tonight by physicians who have been in attendance at bedside since he suffered a stroke at the Charles G. Mayo hospital here yesterday.

The senator was pronounced "most unfavorable." The senator was still unconscious and his condition was said to be little changed.

The bulletin which was released about 6:30 p. m. announced "no decided change during the day. Outlook most unfavorable." The bulletin was signed by Dr. John H. Cunningham and Dr. Frederick H. Winslow.

At the time the statement was made public Senator Lodge had been unconscious for approximately 20 hours. He was seized with a stroke yesterday noon which rendered him unconscious and his condition, pronounced critical by his physicians at that time, has varied but little.

Senator Lodge submitted to an emergency operation on July 27, recovering quickly. He again rallied rapidly when a second operation was performed October 20. That he would be able to attend the opening of congress on December 1 has been considered assured. Dr. Cunningham said in reviewing his patient's case today: "His progress has been so satisfactory that it had been expected the senator would be able to leave the hospital next week."

EDUCATION NOT A LOCAL AFFAIR NOW

Dr. E. N. Engelhardt, professor of education of teachers' college, Columbia university, made a brief and poignant address at the chamber of commerce Thursday noon on the importance of proper and scientific education of the young.

In 1910, he said, this country spent $500,000,000 in the schools, and in 1922 the figure had mounted to $1,600,000,000. However, the percentage of income so expended has not increased. It is still 1.7 per cent but Dr. Engelhardt predicted it would some day reach 2 1/2 or 3 per cent. Education, he continued, is no longer a local proposition.

Contest on Brookhart Is Certain

Iowa Senator Unofficially Re-elected by Margin of Only 923 Votes Out of Nearly Million Cast.

Magnus Johnson Loses

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 6.—Senator Smith W. Brookhart, republican, Iowa, has been re-elected by a margin of 923 votes, with nearly a million votes cast, on the face of complete but unofficial returns tabulated late today.

The complete vote gave Brookhart 447,310, and Daniel Steck, democrat, 446,387. A contest, it was said, was certain to ensue.

In the spirited Minnesota senate contest, though not as close as that in Iowa, Senator Magnus Johnson appears to have been defeated by a plurality of approximately 29,000 votes, by Thomas D. Schall, blind congressman. In 3,000 of the state's 3,607 precincts, Schall, the republican candidate, polled 256,000 against the farmer candidate's 334,019.

While the farmer-labor party in Minnesota thus apparently loses a senate seat, it has gained a seat in the lower house, in the indicated election of W. L. Cars, over Victor Power. This contest was for the seat in the Eighth congressional district.

The nearly complete totals gave Representative Theodore Christianson the governorship by a plurality of 59,000 over Floyd Olson, farmer-labor candidate.

With the probable election of Cars, farmer-labor candidate in the Eighth district, and the certain election of O. J. Kvale and Knud Weisfeld also farmer candidates, the remainder of the Minnesota congressional delegation will be composed of republicans: A. J. Furlow, Frank Clague, A. H. Andersen, Walter H. Newton, Harold Knutson and O. E. Keller.

George Sparks, Pottawattamie county auditor, today declared that an official recount was being made in Pottawattamie county and denied the statement made by L. H. Cook, campaign manager for Senator Smith Brookhart that the senator had gained 300 votes in the new count over Daniel Steck, the democratic candidate.

Des Moines, Ia., Nov. 6.—An official recount of the senatorial ballots cast Tuesday in Pottawattamie county was started this morning and has recorded a gain of 300 votes by Senator Brookhart over Daniel Steck, the democratic candidate, according to a message received here by L. The county includes Council Bluffs, where it was first discovered voters had invalidated numerous ballots by marking arrows upon them to set out the fact they had scratched their ballots for Steck.

English Publicist Pleads for Government Led by Intelligence

Norman Angell Scores Balloting on Basis of "Irrelevant Sympathies;" Society Too Complex to Be Guided by Instinct, He Says.

Government directed by intelligence, rather than by temper or instinct, was declared Thursday afternoon by Norman Angell, distinguished English writer and publicist, to be the need of the hour.

He addressed the Omaha Society of Fine Arts in the ballroom of the Hotel Fontenelle on abstract and practical phases of British politics. His lecture had an added significance coming as it did so close on the heels of the British elections, which returned to power the conservative party. He began his address by giving figures to show that the defeat of the laborites was not really the submergence of that party, but a step in the disposal of the liberals. This explanation he supported by figures. When Ramsay MacDonald assumed the reins of office, he did so after an election in which labor polled 3,800,000 votes. In the polling a few days ago, although defeated, labor obtained 5,600,000 votes.

No Revolt in Britain. The socialist and the Tories, he said, may differ radically in theory, but not in actual government. The lecturer made this startling statement: "Each succeeding government in Great Britain has been more so-called than its predecessor. The government of Stanley Baldwin was an extremely socialistic government. The force of events will bring this about."

Angell declared that there never would be a successful revolution in Great Britain promulgated by 18th century tactics.

"But there will be," he continued, "a steady transformation. I hope to see the day when the electorate will not be victims of irrelevant sympathies, but will exercise public will on the basis of soundness and intelligence. The collective mind too often falls into certain traps."

Raps Versailles Treaty. The treaty of Versailles came in for condemnation as an example of what can be accomplished under an erroneous and passionate label of patriotism.

"For five years we have been trying to destroy Germany," he said, "and now we are digging in our own pockets trying to start it going again."

As a panacea for the ills of popular government, Angell suggested that the jury system in courts might well be applied to the administration of the other arms of government. This the lecturer characterized as "functional" representation. Lawmakers, he declared, should not be chosen altogether because of geography. Politicians often disguise the use of reason and misguided patriotism, he said, feared such words as analysis, inquiry and doubt.

Unselfish Work, Plea of Educator

Tells Teachers' Convention Here That Real Duty Is to Inspire and Not Be Mechanical.

Child Study Outlined

Dr. N. L. Engelhardt, professor of education, teachers' college of Columbia university, told the superintendents, principals and supervisors at the fourth annual convention of the Second district of the Nebraska State Teachers' association Thursday afternoon that every educator should put into our work the priceless ingredients of love of work and desire to serve.

"Our work should be the expression of the soul. We should be master teachers. The master teacher inspires and he leaves a heritage that cannot be measured in ordinary terms. We should find inspiration in the recognition of the fact that those we are training are fitting themselves for the places they should fill, where they may render the maximum of service to the world."

Hope in Every Child. "The master teacher should be able to diagnose every case. Our job is not one of giving up; we should say there is hope in every individual and should study the child in every detail."

"The superintendent and every teacher should have professional grit. We are living in a day when it is said that in every life there is hope. We must search for every element that affects our problems."

Selections were given by an orchestra from the elementary grades, under the direction of Robert Cascazen and Wallace Wheeler. J. H. Beridge, superintendent of schools, presided at the session.

If your child has a craving for dictionaries and encyclopedias and a mania for looking things up in them, then you probably have a gifted child in your family, according to Dr. Lewis M. Terman, head of the department of psychology, Leland Stanford university.

Psychological Tests Explained. Professor Terman addressed elementary school teachers, who are attending the convention at the Technical High school auditorium.

He told the teachers of the results of a two years' study of 1,900 "gifted" children in California, by Leland Stanford. This study is to continue for eight more years, at least, he said.

Accusation of Mother Lie, He Says

Tells Weird Tale of Persecution in Reply to Charge That He Struck and Killed Baby.

Both Now Held in Jail

A flat denial that he had killed or in any way aided in the death of his 11-day-old infant was made Thursday afternoon by Frank P. Lutz in a cell in the Lincoln jail.

Lutz, accused by his wife, who is under arrest in Omaha, of having struck and killed their 11-day-old infant last May, told a weird story of persecution and infidelity on the part of his wife.

"I didn't kill the baby. I loved it although it wasn't mine," Lutz said. "My wife promised to get me if I didn't provide her with money, yet she didn't want to help make a home for me."

Mrs. May Lutz was arrested in Omaha Thursday by private detectives on a charge of selling mortgaged property. After she had been locked in her cell she began to sob.

"You won't let him get me if I tell you will you?" she sobbed.

The officers assured her that there was nothing to fear, thinking that she feared the wrath of her creditors. Then she told her story. She told how her husband had ordered her to get up and tend to the furnace one morning last May. Just 11 days after the birth of her baby.

She told how she refused saying that she was not well enough. Then her husband, she said, had seized the baby which lay in bed between them, and had struck it shouting that "we have enough now and don't want this one."

The baby, under the repeated blows, turned black in the face and she realized that it was about to die. She hurried with it to a priest and had it baptized. Then it died.
