The Sugar Harvest

For your finest foods, for every cooking purpose, The Great Western Sugar Company is daily producing 81/2 million pounds of noteworthy quality of sugar

MILLIONS of pounds of sugar every twenty-four hours . . that is the precious harvest these autumn days from vast irrigated acreages of sugar beets in neighbor states of the West. A bountiful yield it is —and a quality of sugar unsur-passed in all the history of sugar refining.

Sunlight and moisture, clear summer days and cool nights, pure air and productive soil have finished their miracle. Rich in sugar content, beets by the thousands of tons are being harvest-ed to yield this important food product-sugar-for your table. It is a beehive of industry these days along the far-reaching pla-teaus of Western Nebraska and Colorado. Today, the beets are harvested . . tonight, long, heavily loaded trains haul them to nearby Great Western plants to become a part of the production of 81/2 million pounds of Great Western sugar a day!

Pure Sugar from Plants as Spot-less as a Model Kitchen

Day and night, these sixteen Great Western plants are running to capacity this bountiful year. An endless stream of sparkling sugar pours into fresh, clean bags, hour after hour, making of Great Western warehouses a gigantic Sugar Bowl of the

The unceasing flow of sugar juices through all of the refining process is a constant series of boiling and filtration, eliminating impurities and resulting finally in the crystallization of pure sugar, as sweet and wholesome and as perfect a quality as it is possible to make any sugar.

The plants are spotlessly clean. Human hands never touch the sugar. Watchful and skilled chemists safeguard the purity and quality of this sugar at every turn. Many are the precautions to guarantee uniform high sugar purity throughout Great Western production.

Every pound, every bag, meets the highest standard of sugar tests known before it is sent out to be sold and used.

Sugar Purity at Its Best-A Standard Among Sugars

One day this sugar will reach your table; because of the skill and care that guided its making. it will become the sugar standard in your home.

Sugar is especially a winter-time food essential. It is a fuel food -an energizer-a low-cost foodstuff of high value. It quality, its purity, is the one important consideration.

Today you can buy Great Western sugar from your grocer . . . all through the winter months, and next summer for the all-important preserving season requirements . . . every month of the year you can obtain it from your grocer.

These Sturdy Engines Require Proper Fuel

R. BUNDESEN, Health Commissioner of Chicago, recently ran a train for twelve miles with the engine fired WITH LUMPS OF DRIED MILK. An engine may be made to produce power with most any kind of fuel; but for the human engine, MILK furnishes the things that are vitally necessary to life and growth-besides heat and fuel.

Thousands of children are listless and unsuccessful in school because their parents give them foods that contain all the "fuel" requirements and yet lack the bone building material-the proteins and the vitamines of milk.

The human engine is the most wonderful and complex of them all. Just as lumps of coal put life and power into a steam engine, so milk-nature's most wonderful food-starts the racing and fun on the playground and makes cheerful children, successful in school.

Authorities on child feeding recommend ONE QUART of Milk for EACH CHILD EACH DAY. Give your children plenty of
