Carnival Dance Armistice Night

On Tuesday night, November 11, the American Legion auxiliary will give a dinner and carnival dance at the Burgess-Nash restaurant. Dinner will be served at 6:45 and dancing will begin at 9.

The honor guest of this affair will be the national commander, James A. Drain, who will be the guest of the Omaha post for Armistice day celebration and banquet. The post is giving the annual Armistice day banquet at the Rome hotel the same evening and will join the Burgess-Nash carnival dance at 9 p. m.

A very enjoyable program has been arranged for the dinner hour, including numbers by the Central High school quartet, composed of Harlan Wiles, Volcott Swift, Roy Larsen and Edward Wilmoth, accompanied by Miss Marie Chig. This quartet has been very successful since its organization by Mrs. Carol Marhoff Pitts. Violin selections will be given by Miss Gladys Furness, accompanied by Miss Mae Reynolds; vocal solo by Mrs. Gladys Behrens Rae and dancing and entertainment by little Miss Blois Ferrel, 4-year-old winner of the silver loving cup offered for the best baby of ex-service men. Little Miss Blois is a regular contributor to WOA-W and is well known by radio fans. The legion drum corps will be there and the Keno four.

Card tables and a smoking room for the men will be provided. There will be fortune teller and everything that spells carnival and a good time for all.

Mrs. H. H. Dudley is general chairman, assisted by Mrs. Leo Borell, chairman of entertainment; Mrs. Jennie Devine, chairman tickets; Mrs. John Kilmartin, chairman floor committee; Mrs. Roland Jones, publicity.

For Miss DeVore.

Affairs for Miss Verone DeVore, who will be a bride, November 25, include an Orpheum theater party followed by tea to be given next Wednesday by Miss Janet Nolan.

On Friday, November 21, Misses Pearl Jones and Katherine Allemen will entertain at a miscellaneous shower at the home of the former. For Miss DeVore and on the following day, Miss Isabel Evans will give a lace shower. Miss Winifred McMartin will be hostess at buffet supper and bridge on Sunday preceding the wedding.

Mrs. Gamble's Guest.

Mrs. Robert Evans of Dakota City, wife of the newly elected judge of the state supreme court for the Third district, is the guest of Mrs. John Gamble. This evening Mesdames Evans and Gamble, who are past grand matrons of the O. E. S., will be among the honor guests at the dinner given by the order in the Masonic temple.

For Bride-to-Be.

Mrs. Paul N. Welmer entertained 16 guests at a tea Wednesday at home in honor of her sister, Miss Clara Nelson, whose marriage to Eric Erickson of Minneapolis will take place Saturday at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. John Nelson.

For Mrs. Huntington.

Mrs. J. W. Van Camp and Mrs. A. M. Giles entertained today at bridge and luncheon for 36 at the Blackstone. The affair was given in honor of Mrs. W. R. Huntington of New York, who is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Van Camp.

Loyola Club.

Loyola club will entertain at cards Friday afternoon at 2:30 at the church hall, Twenty-fifth and California streets.

Hostesses will be Miss Elizabeth Kelly, Mrs. George Powers, Mrs. P. W. Tighe, Mrs. F. C. Preston.

Mrs. Coffee Honored.

Miss Marquette Marshall entertained at luncheon Thursday at the Brandels for Mrs. Rex Coffee, sister of Mrs. William Newton, Jr., who leaves for her home in Harrison today.

For Former Omahans.

Mrs. Edwin Davis will entertain informally at bridge Saturday for Mrs. Thomas Niles of New York, and for Mrs. Roland Gaugel of St. Louis.

Bridge-Dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Harris will entertain at a four-table bridge-dinner Friday night for her guests, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Terrell of Dallas, Tex.

At the Orpheum.

Twenty-five members of the Kiwanis club of Fremont and their wives, will motor in this evening to see Eisle Janis at the Orpheum.

Bridge-Luncheon.

Mrs. J. T. Byrne entertained 12 guests at a bridge-luncheon today at her home.

Mrs. Leslie Clancy will entertain eight guests at a bridge-luncheon at her home Friday.

The Housewife's Idea Box

To Prolong the Life of a Wringer Machine. After your washing is finished unscrew the wringer machine. This will take the weight off the rollers. Put two small pieces of wood between them. This will let the air pass through. In this way the life of your wringer will be greatly lengthened. THE HOUSEWIFE. (Copyright, 1924.)

Parties in the High School Set in November.

The Epsilon club will entertain the evening of November 12 at the home of one of its members, Tom Nolan, in Fairacres.

Chi Kang girls club will give a kid party this month and Chi Telta, another girls' club, will give a Thanksgiving dance at Prentiss Mile club.

College Club Groups.

At the home section meeting of the Omaha College club at the home of Mrs. Winthrop Lane on Wednesday, November 6, Dr. Emilia Brandt, chairman of the educational committee of the Omaha College club, told of the work and plans for the year of the coming year of this particular department. The educational department has established "round-table" groups of six members each, for the study of this new program, which may be divided into three groups, the study of the pre-school child, the study of the elementary child, and third, the study of the intermediate relations.

Dr. Brandt has as her advisory chairman, Dr. Olga Stastny. As vice chairman of the study group on the pre-school child, Mrs. A. C. R. Swenson; vice chairman for the study of the elementary child, Mrs. A. J. Randall, and as vice chairman of the group studying intermediate relations, Miss Gladys Shamp.

These groups of which about 12 have already been formed are organized in neighborhoods and a definite study has been outlined for them by the national headquarters. Once a month the group under the same head will meet together for a comparison of notes and to be addressed by some specialist along the lines that they are studying.

Your Problems

Meeting a Girl. Dear Miss Allen: I am confronted with a perplexing problem. For the past year and a half I have seen a young lady on the car and have as yet not spoken to her. She always seems to get the same car that I do, both morning and evening. But the only thing she does is to look at me constantly while riding and while I get off at my station. Some time ago she entered the car with a girl friend of hers and pointed me out to her. One evening I saw her on the avenue with another young man, but when she saw me she let go of this man's arm and looked at me.

Do you think that these incidents are encouragements for me to speak to her? F. J. No, F. J., the incidents you mention should not encourage you to speak to this young woman. She may not realize that she stares at you.

A Mother: I am indeed sorry for a mother who needs work and cannot find it. Try the Y. W. C. A. employment bureau, also the city employment bureau. Would you do housework? Watch the ads in the paper.

Miss Billy A.: I have no way of ascertaining the address of the girl referred to. I hope you will find her.

A Wife's Confessional

Adele Garrison's New Phase of REVELATIONS OF A WIFE (Copyright, 1924.)

Why Madge Heeded Lee Chow's Gentle Advice.

Katie made a magnificent gesture with her extended arms as she told me to go ahead if I wanted to be killed because of my employment of the mysterious Chinese. I am sure it was meant to overawe the unoffending man as much as to demonstrate his freedom of responsibility for my foolishness.

But it was ludicrously lost on Lee Chow, for paying no more attention to her than he would have done to the buzzing of a fly about his ears, he stalked past her a few paces and stood motionless, evidently waiting for my orders.

"Don't be foolish, Katie, I whispered hastily. 'I know who the man is, and it is all right for him to be here. He will save you a lot of work, too, for he is going to build the fire for us, and do a lot of other work.'"

Katie tossed her head incredulously. "Eef you know who this man is, den you know something you not telling your poor Katie," she said shrewdly. "You poor smart lady. I tink, to swallow dot stuff about laundryman's cousin. But I no care. Let hem work eef you vant to. I be fine lady today. Not so?"

"Exactly so, Katie, I returned in as mollifying a tone as I could, for I was relieved to have her ludicrous, melodramatic fears allayed.

But I realized that her guess as to my knowledge of Lee Chow's identity was apt to prove more embarrassing to me than her melodramatic fears. If Katie scents a mystery she is like a woodchuck at a hole until she solves it. From Lee Chow's manner, I knew that secrecy concerning his connection with Hugh Grantland was vitally necessary, and for a second or two, I wondered if Katie by any means could have guessed the truth. Then the absurdity of such a surmise came to me, and with a little shrug I threw off all apprehension of trouble and set myself to managing—and enjoying—the extraordinary situation that had been thrust upon me.

Trying to make my voice and manner as casual as if Lee Chow had been serving me for years, I walked toward him and indicated the place where I meant to build the campfire. He inspected it carefully, wetted his finger and held it up to note the direction of the wind, then evidenced his approval with a laconic "Ver' good."

"Build a good fire, first, Lee Chow," I directed, "and let it burn down almost to ashes. Then I will show you where to put the potatoes."

Is Lee Chow "Old Faithful?" He folded his hands as if he were a child reciting his lesson. "Build a good fire, let it burn down, rake off the ashes, put the potatoes down deep, cover with ashes, build other big fire on top ashes."

Not being an Oriental, there was distinct surprise in my voice as I commented upon his recital. "You have cooked out of doors before?" He bent to the stones and began to arrange them in a rude fireplace before he answered. "Old boss man, like dinner outdoors ver' much," he said.

With a start I remembered hearing Hugh Grantland tell of the appetizing meals which he had eaten out of doors, and which had been cooked by a servant to whom he referred as "Old Faithful."

It had been inadvertent reference—for Hugh Grantland rarely talked of his life away from the army service—but I fitted it in now as one might a piece in a mosaic. Lee Chow must be "Old Faithful," and an eerie little feeling came over me as I realized that Hugh Grantland's faithful servant was doing for me the same service he often had performed for his master.

"Wait, Junior—"

But where was his master, and in what dire straits? I was sure that some bizarre danger hung over my old friend, or his body servant would not have come to me so mysteriously.

There was no time now, however, for introspection or retrospection especially as Junior began to tug at my skirts and repeat Marlow's plea of a few minutes earlier.

"Please, mama, let me take off shoes and stockings and dig for clams."

Lee Chow straightened quickly at the words, and looked out over the beach.

"Lif' boy not go yet," he said quietly. "Wait till Lee Chow builds fire, then Lee Chow see where holes in water are."

If Katie or any other person employed by me had interrupted me in such fashion, I should have uttered a rebuke and made my own decision. But there was something so authoritative, so full of knowledge in the quiet words that I found myself acquiescing in them, and saying to my small son:

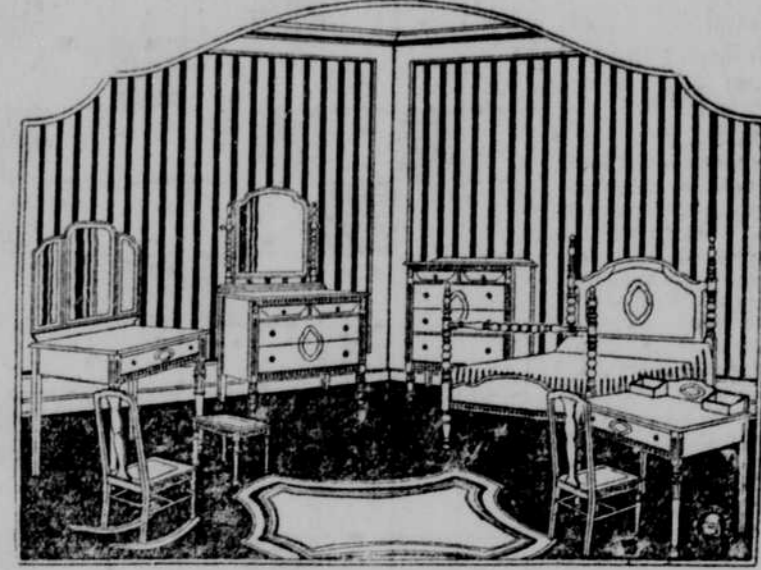

"Wait, Junior, until Lee Chow can go with you."

Mrs. Paul H. Patton will entertain at a buffet supper at her home Friday evening for 32 guests.
