Former Omahans Return For Xmas Holidays

The younger set aren't to have things all their own way this holiday season. The young married folk are seeking to that, for they are to have former Omahans as their guests, and affairs for them will pre-empt the social calendar.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Peters will return from Cairo, Ill., and Lewis Burgess will come to join Mrs. Burgess from Wilkesbarre, Pa.

George Radcliffe will come from Dayton to join Mrs. Radcliffe who has been here for the past month with the R. L. Carters and Dr. and Mrs. Sanford Gifford.

Also from Dayton will come the Norman Curtices who moved there a year ago to make their home. They will visit Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Abbott, Jr. Mr. and Mrs. Warren Noble will arrive from Birmingham, Ala., to visit the Fred Metz during the holidays, and Burke Adams will come from New York.

The Clifford Smiths (formerly Clifford Wolfe) will come from their Rockland, Me., home to visit the Donald Macraes of Council Bluffs, and the Hoxie Clarkes of New York. They will stop at the Blackstone during the holidays.

Dr. and Mrs. Pulver Announce Niece's Engagement

Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Pulver announce the engagement of their cousin Ruth Redmen Peterson of Salt Lake City, Utah, remembered as a very popular visitor here last spring and summer and at present their guest, to James Noble De France of this city. The marriage will take place early in December.

Wedding affairs are planned in their honor.

G. A. R. Reception.

G. A. R. will hold a meeting on Friday, November 21, 8 p. m. in Memorial hall, courthouse, honoring Mrs. Alta Stonecker of Lincoln, state inspector. Refreshments will be served. Civil war veterans are invited to attend.

Scholarship Fund Benefit.

On Saturday, November 22, the home section of the Omaha College club will hold two food sales, one at Buffet's grocery, 5915 Underwood and the other at Thompson-Belden's, as benefit for the scholarship fund.

The Housewife's Idea Box

To Prevent the Umbrella Jar From Breaking.

Very often an umbrella jar is broken when the umbrella is dropped into it. You can prevent this if you cut a piece of rubber to fit the bottom of the jar and keep it in the jar. Use a piece of an old rubber or a stair tread. THE HOUSEWIFE. (Copyright, 1924.)

At Jubilee Meet

Mrs. Anna Whitney of Elk City, represented the 800 members of Douglas county W. C. T. U. at the Jubilee convention in Chicago earlier this week. She is county treasurer. Upon her return, Mrs. Whitney will report to her organization on this inspirational meeting.

For Miss Rogers.

Mrs. Eugenie Whitmore Dinkins will entertain at a bridge party Saturday afternoon at her home in honor of Miss Mildred Rogers of New York City, who is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Rogers.

For Affianced Couple.

Ludovic Crofoot will be host at dinner Friday evening to honor Miss Maud Borup and her fiance, Charles T. Kountze.

I HEAR THE WELL DRESSED WOMEN IN PAREE ARE WEARING SHIRTS SHORTER THAN EVER. WONDER WHAT THE WELL DRESSED MEN ARE WEARING?

Your Problems

By Martha Allen

Foolish Woman.

Dear Miss Allen: I am 21 and have been married three years. But this is my trouble: Before I met my husband I went with a boy two years older than myself. I grew up to love him and he did me, but we quit one day and I went away from where he lived and I met a boy and went with him three months and we got married. We have a fine home and a sweet baby, who looks like his daddy. I went back to my home town a few weeks ago and, of course, saw the first fellow.

Now, Miss Allen, he says he still thinks of me as he always did and would have come back, but was afraid I would snub him. I still care for him really more than my husband and, since I came home, I can hardly stand it. What is a person going to do? I have tried to do everything, but I can't be satisfied at nothing.

I would love for you to give me some advice. As you always give other good advice, as I have read your writing so much. Hoping you answer soon as you can in The Omaha Evening Bee.

What am I to do to be consoled without the other fellow?

He also says he will never be satisfied without me and that he will never marry unless it is me.

HEARTBROKEN TOSPY.

"Bunk!" Not a nice word, but plenty good enough for your nonsensical conduct. We can all control our feelings if we try. Suppose you make the effort and seek happiness in the only place where it can truly be found—your home.

Miss Kjeldgaard Hostess.

Miss Katherine Kjeldgaard, who with her mother, Mrs. C. Kjeldgaard, spent the summer abroad, entertained on Monday evening at her home. Her guests were:

Mrs. J. H. Ezzart, Mrs. George Dennis, Mrs. Mammie Anderson of Council Bluffs and the Misses Bertha Scott, Rosalia Clark, Esther Nelson, Maria Dugan and Martha Shafer.

Isaac Sadler Bridge.

Major Isaac Sadler chapter D. A. R. will be entertained at cards on Friday, November 21, at 2 p. m. by Mrs. L. C. Gibson, 1306 South Thirty-fifth street, assisted by Mrs. F. G. Kellogg. Reservations may be made with Mrs. O. F. Dotson, AT. 8750.

The Calm Way In Which Lee Chow Departed.

Katherine made a note or two on a little pad of paper then crossed to the door.

"I shall have to get some things from the drug room," she said "but I won't be gone long. Do you wish me to give any message to Katie and Marion, or do you want them up here?"

"Won't they bother you?" I asked.

"Not a bit," she answered cheerily. "This isn't a major operation you know."

Her smile and manner took away the last remnant of fear for my little lad, though of course I had known from Dr. Pettit's verdict that there were no serious consequences to be feared from the mysterious poison that had so swollen and discolored Junior's face and eyes.

"Then let them come up," I decided, "but—will Marion have time to run out to the car while you are in the drug room?"

"At Marion's usual gait—yes," she answered, smiling.

"Then please ask her to tell Lee Chow that we shall be here about—"

I looked at her inquiringly.

"An hour," she responded.

"And to say that there is nothing serious the matter with Junior and that—"

I hesitated a second, then added, "It was not the same."

Katherine elevated her eyebrows whimsically as she turned the doorknob.

"I'll deliver your message," she said, "and I won't stop now to find out who Lee Chow is. But when I come back I'm going to ascertain whether I'd better order a strait jacket for you or whether a sedative will do."

She went swiftly down the corridor, to return shortly with Marion and Katie in her wake—Marion, silent and self-effacing, Katie voluble in her belief that Junior was not seriously ill.

"Eet mighty goot thing dot old Chink didn't get enough poison in dose claim to hurt dot ba-bee mooch," she began as soon as she came in, but I cut her short sharply.

"Don't let me hear you say that cruel and untrue thing again, Katie."

I said sternly. "Dr. Pettit says it was not the same at all, that the poison is from something Junior handled. Lee Chow had nothing to do with it."

She stared at me, cowed but unconvinced, and as she turned away I heard her mutter something disparaging Dr. Pettit, but I knew that she would say nothing more before Lee Chow which was all I wanted. I cared no whit what her private opinion of the Chinese might be, and would make no effort to change her distorted idea of him. But I was solved that she should bait the Oriental no more.

Katherine worked swiftly, bathing Junior with lotions, and carrying out the other directions of Dr. Pettit. When she had finished it was a tired but much more comfortable little lad whom she gathered up in her arms.

"Auntie Katherine's to carry you downstairs," she announced, and Junior so docile under her dictum as he had been obstinate against Katie's similar offer, laid his head confidently against her shoulder and was asleep by the time we reached the car.

"Get in, Madge," Katherine whispered, "and I'll hand him to you."

I obeyed her. Katie took the seat beside me, and Marion clambered aboard to her post beside Lee Chow. I saw Katherine look sharply at Lee Chow as I gave him the directions for driving to the farmhouse, and knew that the explanation of the man's presence which I had given Katie, would never satisfy the keen brain of either Katherine or Lillian, although I also knew that neither woman would ever seek to gratify her curiosity unbidden.

We reached the farmhouse in good time, and when Lee Chow had brought the car to a stop, he stepped out of it and helped me to alight. Then with a low bow he asked respectfully:

"Boss lady need me any more to-night?"

"No, thank you, Lee Chow."

"Then I go," he announced calmly. "If boss lady want Lee Chow in big hurry, can tell cousin in laundry. But Lee Chow will know when boss lady need him."

He turned away, and the next second was padding swiftly away down the drive.

Former Prominent Business Woman a Visitor.

Miss S. Edith Baker of Miami, Fla., formerly a resident and prominent business woman of Omaha, arrived in the city Monday evening. Miss Baker is en route to her former home at Alma, Neb., but plans to return to Omaha later to visit Miss Clara Brewster and other friends here.

Sartorial Decoration.

Crepe back satin is often used with a self trim. If the dress is made of the shiny surface, then the "crepe" side is used for folds or merely bands seamed in to contrast.

Tucks were never better for trimming the frock. They are used wide and as narrow as pin tucks. They may be used perpendicularly or horizontally and sometimes the whole skirt or blouse is thus trimmed.

For a handsome moderate price living room rug, 9x12, Saxony yarns in Chinese or Persian colorings and patterns are good.

Mrs. Engler Hostess.

Mrs. George Engler will entertain at dinner at her home Saturday evening for Mrs. Thomas Heyward of Pittsburgh, guest of Mrs. R. B. Busch. Mrs. Heyward will remain until after Thanksgiving.

Candle sconces backed with mirrors that double their beauty by reflecting light are for Spanish or Italian effect interiors. They are frequently polychromed, wrought iron or "verde," an antique finish.

Judge for yourself the sparkling whiteness of this sugar

A woman says: "I can tell the difference in sugar by the color." That is true; but what difference? Color is one sure test. It indicates the degree of purity of the sugar—not whether it is beet or cane sugar.

In the process of refining, the sugar crystals are separated from the juices and thoroughly washed. If sugar is "off-color," it is evidence of impurities still in the sugar—a lack of proper refining—sugar below standard!

Color is important. Sparkling white sugar is pure. Superior sugars have three qualities visible to the eye: sparkling whiteness, luster and evenness of grain. Sugar meeting these standards is chemically pure and dependable for every cooking purpose.

Sparkling white! . . . that is an outstanding qualification of Great Western Sugar. It is properly refined. It is thoroughly cleansed of impurities.

It is accepted. In millions of households . . . by experts in the sugar industry . . . among industrial users of sugar. Great Western Sugar is regarded as a standard in purity. Today, a production of 8 1/2 million pounds of sugar daily is being sold to satisfied users.

Every community accepts Great Western Sugar in supplying its needs; every grocer knows its universal satisfaction . . . there is the most significant evidence of its dependability.

The sugar grain is a crystal. This crystal is a chemical of unvarying content, no matter whether it comes from the sugar beet or sugar cane. With a crystal is pure sugar; any impurities cling to the outside.

There can be no vital difference in granulated sugar except a difference in purity, due to the imperfect washing of the crystal. That is entirely under the control of the refiner.

It is our exacting control of production . . . our thoroughness in refining . . . that is making Great Western the standard among sugars in the West.

Your grocer has Great Western Sugar. Ask for it by name. See its sparkling whiteness for yourself.
