

Coast Guard Has Other Jobs Than Rum Ship Chase

Protects Shipping, Breaks Up Ice in Harbors, Part of Navy in Wartime.

By ROBERT S. THORNBURGH, International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, Nov. 22.—In the spectacular warfare of the United States coast guard against the tidal wave of liquor that has flooded the shores of the country since the prohibition amendment went into effect, sight has been almost lost of a function of this romantic arm of the naval service.

That function comprises the rendering of assistance to vessels in distress and the saving of life and maritime property.

From end to end of the United States 10,000 miles of coastline, vessels and small boats of the coast guard patrol day and night, watching and waiting for SOS signals of distress that they may fly to the assistance of those in trouble on the seas.

While charged with the enforcement of the customs laws, which means that the coast guard has the duty of trying to stem the tide of smuggled liquors, officials of the service are much prouder of their accomplishments in life-saving work.

Other Duties. Included in other duties are the following: The destruction and removal of wrecks, derelicts and other floating dangers to navigation.

Extending medical aid to American vessels engaged in deep-sea fishing.

Operating as a part of the navy in time of war, or when the president may direct.

Enforcement of laws relating to quarantine and neutrality.

Suppression of mutinies on merchant vessels.

Enforcement of law to provide for safety of life on navigable waters during regattas and marine parades.

Protection of game and the seal and other fisheries of Alaska.

International ice patrol in the vicinity of the Grand Banks off Newfoundland.

President Coolidge will issue an executive order probably next month, making an official assignment of the coast guard cutters to the duty of protection of navigation in December, January and February, the danger months for coastwise shipping. Annually the president makes this assignment of duty.

Bad Winter Looms.

Prospects of a bitter winter have led the coast guard officials to start unusual preparations for their life-saving work off the northeastern coast this year.

Heavy cruising cutters are under repair, and smaller boats are being equipped to take part in the winter's battle against icebergs, sales, ice-bound ports and other eventualities of the cold months, which annually take their toll of lives and property.

Two cutters—the Tampa and the Mohawk—the pride of the coast guard fleet, are expected to be assigned to the international ice patrol to keep transatlantic shipping lanes informed of the whereabouts of icebergs. These ships are armed with heavy guns and other weapons to blast the menacing mountains of ice to splinters.

Coast guard officials anticipate one of the severest winters since 1917. They said one of their heavy duties this winter would be the keeping free from ice of the harbors of cities along the Maine coast and harbors of islands off the Maine shore.

Guard Fishing.

These islands, it was stated, are the dwelling places of thousands of fishermen, who furnish one of the big food supplies to the eastern cities. Dependent almost entirely upon the mainland for food and fuel it is essential for the islanders that the harbors be kept open in order that provision ships may enter.

Last winter hundreds of telegrams were received by the coast guard from officials of Maine urging that cutters be sent to break up the ice in harbors. Two vessels were badly damaged in this work.

It was expected that the coast guard would endeavor to have included in its annual appropriation provision for the building of a regular ice breaking ship, regarded as necessary, in view of the class of work the organization is called upon to perform.

Equipment of the coast guard is being improved rapidly as the result of funds provided by the last congress. Hundreds of small but fast launches are under construction or already in service, principally for use in fighting the illicit rum traffic.

The heavier equipment of the coast guard, comprising large cutters similar in size to the Mayflower, the presidential yacht, but equipped for more serious duties, is said to be in bad repair. Considerable money will be required to build new cutters and improve those already in use.

Among the vessels suffering most severely in the last year was the famous cutter Bear.

More Than Half People of Spain Are Illiterate. Madrid, Nov. 22.—Grave concern is felt at the enormous number of illiterates in Spain.

Latest census figures published show that of the total population of 21,335,381 people, no fewer than 11,145,444 people confessed to having received no elementary education. In Barcelona 26.69 per cent of the population is illiterate.

More than 4,000 new schools are provided for in the new estimates. It is intended to withhold suffrage from those not attempting to learn to read and write.
