

1000 LEGGERS WIN TEST CASE

Detectives Search Ohio Parsonage

Blood Stains and Other Important Clues Found in Probe of Sheatsley Death Mystery.

Acid Bottle Discovered

By JOHN A. MOROSO, Universal Service Staff Correspondent. Columbus, O., Nov. 24.—The first practical step in the work of solving the mystery of the death and incineration of the wife of the Rev. C. V. Sheatsley a week ago today in the parsonage of Christ Lutheran church in the fashionable Bexley suburb, was made today when Prosecutor John R. King, two detectives, Drs. Long and Brundage, chemical and pathological experts and myself made a careful search of the house from top to bottom.

The results: In the cellar, near the furnace where the body was almost wholly destroyed, was found a pair of white trousers of a size that would fit a growing young man, these trousers, especially on the pocket linings were heavily stained a rusty red. The stains were comparatively fresh and seemed to have been made by blood.

Clear Finger Prints.

On one of the hot air ducts leading upward from the furnace and just over the furnace door were stains on the asbestos covering which resembled bloodstains. On the duct to the right of this were the clear prints of three fingers.

On the steps leading from the cellar to the pantry was found a piece of cartilaginous matter, likewise stained red.

On a lead leading from the pantry to the back yard and the land in the rear of the church were found three red stains and another piece of tissue or cartilage.

On the rug just below these stains were other red stains, several in the shape of large drops. On the side of the door between pantry and kitchen were two small red stains, showing bright crimson on the varnish.

Photographs Made. In the kitchen was found a hammer such as automobile mechanics use, and in the basement a short-handled axe.

Photographs were made of the finger prints, the bloodstains were cut away from wood and asbestos, the rug and trousers taken for chemical examination and thus the actual work of unraveling this baffling mystery was begun, scientifically.

MATE GREETED BY SHOTGUN BARRAGE

A gentle light shone forth Sunday night from 1025 Fourth avenue, Council Bluffs. Mrs. Anna McKenzie had placed it there to guide the wanderer home. Then she had sat down beside it with an automatic pistol and a shotgun.

Some time after midnight the wandering mate returned. He was argumentative. She punctuated her remarks with two pistol shots and a burst from the shotgun, according to police who arrived soon afterwards.

He was arrested and charged with drunkenness and disturbing the peace of the neighborhood, as well as Mr. McKenzie's. She was given a 15-day suspended sentence in municipal court Monday.

We Have With Us Today

Finis James Garrett, Dresden, Tenn., Congressman. Mr. Garrett has attained considerable note as democratic leader in the house of representatives. He was born in Wesley county, Tennessee. He has edited weekly papers in Tennessee and was principal of high schools. He came to Omaha to address the Advertising-Selling league. Garrett took a prominent part in the campaign for John W. Davis in the border states during the recent campaign. He was the author of the tax bill substituted for the Mellon plan in the last congress.

Nebraskan Second in Husking Tourney

Des Moines, Nov. 24.—Fred Stanek of Fort Dodge today won the Midwest cornhusking championship, defeating five other entries from Nebraska, Illinois and Iowa.

Virgil Archer, Benedict, Neb., was second; Perle Mansfield, Nokomis, Ill., third; Ben Grimmus, Grundy Center, Ia., fourth; Henry Nelhaus, Nokomis, Ill., fifth, and Louis Dinklage, Wisner, Neb., sixth.

Stanek had a net total of 1,704.8 pounds after deductions of 41.6 for left over and 95.6 pounds for unclean husking were made. The huskers worked in two periods totalling an hour and 30 minutes.

Net totals of the other entries were: Archer, 1,548.6 pounds; Mansfield, 1,471; Grimmus, 1,451.4; Nelhaus, 1,402.4; Dinklage, 1,275. Nelhaus, a 53-year-old farmer, went through the contest using an old-fashioned wooden peg.

Stanek received $100 as prize money.

Extradition for Koretz Granted by Foreign Court

"Oil Swindler De Luxe" to Be Tried in Halifax Hotel.

Halifax, N. S., Nov. 24.—Papers for the extradition of Leo Koretz, wanted in Chicago for land fraud swindling, were granted here today by Judge Wallace in county court.

The authorities said Koretz admitted this prima facie case existed against him in Chicago, that he waived all his rights under extradition proceedings and said he hoped the officers would hurry in getting him back to the United States.

Koretz was arrested in a hotel here last night. He was said to have fled Chicago last December with a sackful full of money alleged to have been procured in illegal land operations.

Koretz did all he could to expedite the extradition proceedings and at his request Judge Wallace drew up a paper to be signed by the prisoner. When complete the paper recited that while the prisoner admitted there was a prima facie case against him in Chicago, he denied his guilt. Koretz asked that this be eliminated, which was done and he signed the document.

By International News Service.

Halifax, N. S., Nov. 24.—Canada's legal machinery moved swiftly today to complete arrangements for the extradition of Leo Koretz, alleged swindler de luxe.

The suave Chicagoan who took millions from his friends and eluded arrest for nearly a year, spending the last seven months and many thousands of his plunder in ostentatious splendor here, was arrested quietly at a Halifax hotel by Chicago and provincial officers Sunday night.

No longer as "Lou Keyte," retired magazine writer and author, will talk glibly of his friendship with Zane Grey and other authors of note.

He will become again Leo Koretz, now a captured fugitive, whose greatest exploit in the field of fiction was the creation of the Bayano Oil syndicate.

Extradition Sought.

Although proceedings for his extradition will be conducted today, it may be two or three days before the Chicago officers complete their investigation. (Turn to Page Two, Column Four.)

Gage County Farm Corn Crop Smallest in Years

Beatrice, Nov. 23.—Samuel McKinney, superintendent of the county farm, is gathering his corn crop and reports that it is yielding about 12 bushels to the acre, the smallest production in years. He figures that he has enough grain for his stock this winter he will be lucky.

Cupid Wins Round.

"Cupid" Stubbendorf won a round from Judge "Cut-the-Knot" Day Saturday.

For that that memorial day no divorces were filed in district court. But "Cupid" aided one giggling couple to file application to marry.

Stocks Over Two Million Tenth Time

Public Interest Continues Unabated, Despite French Loan, Which Commands Premium at Once.

50 Issues to New Peaks

By Associated Press. New York, Nov. 24.—Public interest in today's stock market, which marked the beginning of the fourth consecutive week of the "bull" movement, continued unabated, despite the counter attraction provided by the public offering of the $100,000,000 French government loan, which was heavily oversubscribed, and immediately commanded a premium when listed for trading on the New York Stock exchange on a "when issued" basis.

Speculators for the advance continued in control of the price movement in the stock market, but they encountered stiff resistance because of the heavy volume of profit-taking by professional traders who buy stocks "for a turn," and aggressive bear selling of some of the popular industrial and railroad issues. Total sales were 2,014,600 shares, making it the tenth time since election day that the 2,000,000-share mark has been crossed.

Many New Peaks.

Fifty individual issues were lifted to new peak prices for the year, the list including Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad common and preferred, Western Pacific common and preferred, Pittsburgh & West Virginia, United Cigar, Tobacco Products, Corn Products, Alle-Chalmers, Fleischmann company, Texas Gulf Sulphur, North American company, International Mercantile Marine common and preferred, American International corporation and National Cloak and Suit.

Rock Island common was heavily sold on Chairman Hayden's denial of reports that plans for the merger of that road with the Southern Pacific were under discussion, the stock falling back about 3 points.

Wall street heard more stories about "killings" in the market, the latest being that of a prominent motion picture actress who bought 400 shares of American Can before election and sold out at 151 last week, cleaning up $50,000.

Clerks Work Extra.

In an effort to catch up with the tremendous volume of work arising out of the long succession of 2,000,000 share days, several of the large commission houses asked their clerks to work Saturday afternoon and next of Sunday. Extra pay was provided in practically all cases, a few houses giving their employees a special Thanksgiving bonus of one week's salary.

Extensive reinvestment of paper profits converted into cash is reported by many bankers, explaining the part of the recent heavy turnover and the frequent shifting of speculative interest from one group to another.

Floor traders who attempt to catch swings by jumping in and out of stocks several times a day also have added heavily to recent business.

New Rail Statements.

Apart from the publication of additional October railroad earnings statements which, as a rule, compared favorably with those of the same month last year, a week-end advance in gasoline prices in New England, Bunker fuel oil along the Atlantic coast, and a stiffening in pig iron prices, there was little in the day's news to influence speculative sentiment. Foreign exchanges reacted moderately on selling inspired by the Egyptian crisis.

Commodity markets were mixed. Wheat prices showed substantial gains with the late months selling at new peak prices on the firmness of wheat prices abroad and a decrease of over 1,250,000 bushels in the domestic visible supply. Corn prices showed little change. Cotton and sugar were firmer. Coffee reacted nearly a cent a pound as a result of heavy Brazilian offerings of the product.

Jewelry Store Robbed.

Chicago, Nov. 24.—Bandits today held up a loop jewelry store, obtained $4,000 in cash and jewelry worth hundreds of dollars and escaped.

City Auditorium An Armed Camp as 600 Roosters Plume Selves for Battle

Proud Eagle Sits Proudly on Spectacle—White Leghorn—1,024 Eggs Feature of Poultry Exhibit.

The city auditorium is an armed camp this week. Six hundred roosters stand ready to fly at each other's throats in defense of their roosts and hen yards.

Last night there were half a dozen shadow fights going on at once. Two black-breasted Red Old English Bantams, dashed at each other in their neighboring cages, cursing in poultryese.

One, the property of Frank Judson, president of the Omaha Poultry association, was particularly violent. He would strut about and then make a dash at his antagonist, causing the saddest to fly. The other, owned by Miss Maxine Cooley, bravely returned these hostile demonstrations.

Two Black Cochins Bantams, owned by J. Clyde Baughman, and O. J. Hildinger, spent hours swarming at each other and dashing against the bars of their juxtaposed cages.

Hens Unperturbed.

A Buff Orpington and a White Crested Black Polish said disparaging things about each other's plumage and made frequent dashes against the bars.

The hens, paying no attention to these demonstrations of their spouses, posed for admiration or went about the serious business of laying eggs.

In solitary state, on a sort of dais, dwells "Cornhusker Queen," a White Leghorn hen who, in her less than six years of life, has given the world 1,024 eggs and expects to lay another one today.

Down the center of the auditorium is a whole line of geese and ducks, filling the air with honks and quacks.

And in the center of all, alone, sitting on a stump in his cage, is a golden eagle, silent, brooding, evidently humiliated at having to associate thus with common barnyard fowl.

Pen of Wild Ducks. A large pen of wild ducks, geese and pheasants is a feature put in by the state fish and game department. These happy birds spend their time swimming and combing their feathers.

Pigeons occupy the stage with the bantams. There are many odd birds. Some are as big as chickens. The owl pigeons have no beaks to speak of. Trumpeters have long feathers on their legs. English and French carriers seem to have mushrooms growing on their heads.

Altogether there are 2,600 birds, including four turkeys who display an air of despondency, fitting for the holiday season.

Women to Be on Hough Jury

Youth Goes to Trial Tuesday on Charge of Slaying Girl.

Special Dispatch to The Omaha Bee. Bedford, Ia., Nov. 24.—Elmer McKenny of Herrick, S. D., is here for the trial of Carl Hough, charged with murdering his daughter, Lillian McKenny, 21. The trial starts tomorrow. Mrs. McKenny and another daughter are also here.

Several women will be on the trial jury as about half of the jury panel drawn in district court consists of women.

J. J. Hess of Council Bluffs will represent County Attorney J. D. Locke in the prosecution and Dick Organ of Sioux City will act as Hough's attorney.

The county attorney said today several surprises will be sprung in the case. The state has called about 45 witnesses.

2 DEAD, 2 HURT, IN PLANE CRASH

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 24.—Ralph H. Jenkinson, who learned to fly an airplane only a short time ago, and Miss Ruth G. Wilson, are dead, and Leslie K. Traugher, air service corps lieutenant, and Sgt. Gilbert McMurrian painfully injured today as a result of a collision between two planes at Culver Field, Santa Monica. Locke planes were about to land when they crashed into each other.

Jenkinson recently purchased a small airplane and had taken Miss Wilson for a trial ride when the accident occurred.

BANDITS HOLD UP JEWELRY STORE

By International News Service. Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 24.—Three armed bandits entered the Barr & Dunn jewelry store, in the heart of the downtown district, during the noon hour today, forced three clerks to lie on the floor, ransacked the showcases and escaped with $30,000 worth of jewelry.

Neighbors Erect House to Replace Burned Farm Home

Broken Bow, Neb., Nov. 24.—Neighbors of Fred Finley, near Sargent, gathered at the Finley farm and erected a dwelling for the unfortunate man. Mr. Finley lost his home and contents by fire a short time ago.

Solution of Egyptian Fight Near

Resignation of Zagloul Permits New Ministry to Yield Further to Demands of Britain.

Indemnity Payment Made

London, Nov. 24.—A solution of the Egyptian trouble which appeared obvious from the outset, provided an alternative government to that of Premier Zagloul Pasha could be found, which many persons doubted, owing to the tremendous hold Zagloul has upon his people and parliament, now seems in sight.

Having complied with those of the British demands in connection with the assassination of Maj. Gen. Sir Lee Oliver Stack, the sirdar, which his government considered justifiable as satisfaction for the murder, while rejecting those he regarded as unjustifiable, Zagloul has resigned, in order, as he himself explained it, to avoid exposing his country to further dangers arising from the deplorable crime.

This is taken to mean that the new Egyptian cabinet will be in a position to yield still further to the British demands without suffering loss of prestige which similar action on the part of Zagloul would have entailed. Thus far the situation has sensibly eased and the British government is now disposed to hold its hand for further developments.

Field Marshal Viscount Allenby, British high commissioner in Egypt, however, continued to apply firm pressure on the Egyptian government up to the last moment. The big indemnity—500,000 pounds sterling—was paid today, but payment being accompanied by another Egyptian note of protest against the British political demands. Viscount Allenby immediately countered by informing Zagloul Pasha that British troops would occupy the customs post at Alexandria, which later was done.

Special Dispatch to The Omaha Bee. O'Neill, Neb., Nov. 24.—Dreams of marital happiness of two Houghton youngsters vanished when two irate ranchmen appeared in district court here today to request the annulment of the marriage of their son and daughter.

George Barnes, son of E. T. Barnes, owner of a ranch north of Emmet, eloped with Frances Slaymaker, 17, daughter of Wesley K. Slaymaker, rancher, living south of Stuart. The young folks went to Bonesteel, S. D., and were married. That was November 8.

When the couple returned home and sought the blessings of their parents, something which is always given in the best works of fiction, they were forcibly separated.

Frances was taken home. So was George. They were told that they not only could not be married, but that they were not even to see each other.

Objections, vocal and physical, were unavailing. The marriage must not take place.

So the fathers came to court and petitioned the judge to annul the marriage. The judge took the petition under advisement and rest the matter has been allowed to rest.

JURY DISAGREES ON BANKERS' CARD

Special Dispatch to The Omaha Bee. Sidney, Neb., Nov. 24.—A jury in district court here which has heard the evidence in the case against E. K. Bushee, former president of the Kimball State bank, failed to agree on a verdict after deliberating 22 hours.

Bushee was accused of having violated the state bank guarantee law in the matter of excess interest on certificates of deposit amounting to $10,000.

The jury stood nine to three for conviction on the final ballot.

CHILDREN SEE MOTHER SLAIN

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 24.—Mrs. Barbara Klein, 48, was nearly decapitated with a razor and then terribly mutilated with a flatiron in her home here this morning while her three young children watched the tragedy and screamed for help in the same room.

John Matlak, 51, said by police to be the father of the children, is held here for the murder.

4 SAFES LOOTED IN SINGLE STORE

Rochester, N. Y., Nov. 24.—A police dragnet was out today for three well-dressed cracksmen who looted four safes in the McCurdy department store of $20,000 in cash and three fur coats after handcuffing the watchman to an elevator.

Beet Growers Organize.

Cosad, Neb., Nov. 24.—Beet growers of Dawson county met here and organized a beet growers' association. Cosad commercial club is backing the move. The new organization is pledged to promote the unity of interests of all beet growers in all matters pertaining to the beet industry. J. M. Gorum was elected president and E. E. Dodson secretary and treasurer.

Hurricane Sweeps Norway.

Christiania, Nov. 24.—Norway was swept by a hurricane today which destroyed many houses, leveled whole forests and sent many fishing craft to destruction. Several large trawlers were sunk.

Barrimore's Wife Sues Her Accuser

Michael Strange, poet-mate of John Barrimore, who asserts the stigma of play pirate has been placed on her name by Sophie Treadwell, whose drama on the life of Edgar Allan Poe, was rejected by Barrimore, filed suit recently in New York for $200,000 against Mrs. Treadwell.

Michael Strange, poet-mate of John Barrimore, who asserts the stigma of play pirate has been placed on her name by Sophie Treadwell, whose drama on the life of Edgar Allan Poe, was rejected by Barrimore, filed suit recently in New York for $200,000 against Mrs. Treadwell.

Hundreds Attend Funeral Service for Mrs. Harding

Cortege Follows Same Course Over Which Body of Former President Was Borne Last Year.

Marion, O., Nov. 24.—Marion's "trail of mourning" came into being again today.

Scores of American flags, each at least 100 feet long, were carried over which the body of Warren G. Harding was borne to Marion cemetery some 15 months ago. This afternoon the late president's wife was carried down that path to rest beside her husband.

Hundreds of persons braved the disagreeable weather to visit the old-fashioned house where the body of Florence Kling Harding lay, awaiting the funeral hour. It is estimated 12,000 persons have been admitted within the last 24 hours to the home of Mrs. F. L. Longshore, niece of Mrs. Harding, to pay their respects.

Dr. Jess Swank, pastor of Epworth Methodist Episcopal church, two blocks away, where Mrs. Harding worshipped from girlhood. Services at the church were brief, in keeping with Mrs. Harding's wishes.

Dr. Swank, pastor of Epworth church, who conducted funeral services for President Harding, delivered the sermon, after which Rev. George M. Landis, pastor of Trinity Baptist church, offered a prayer. Mrs. Harding's favorite song, "The End of A Perfect Day," concluded church services. The song was rendered by the Columbus (O.) Glee club.

Then began the solemn journey to Marion cemetery and to the receiving vault which contains the body of President Harding. Services at the tomb were of the same brief character as those at the church.

After a prayer by Dr. Swank, the body was placed beside that of the former president, where the bodies will remain until the completion of the Harding memorial tomb.

WOMAN ATTEMPTS SUICIDE ON TRAIN

Bisbee, Ariz., Nov. 24.—Mrs. Leona Girard of Pittsburg, Pa., on her way to Los Angeles to visit her daughter, was held in jail here today after she escaped from a hospital where she was taken when she slashed her throat with a piece of glass. Mrs. Girard attempted suicide, police said, while on a train near Douglas, Ariz.

Lowell Smith's Early Life Fitted Him for Nerve-Racking Task of Leading Flight

TOLD BY LOWELL THOMAS. (Copyright, 1924.)

From "Silent" Smith to "Smiling Jack" Pershing, America's Magellans of the air had well-nigh run the gamut of human experiences before they set forth on the round-the-world flight. Their varied careers and colorful experiences had made them resourceful and had filled them with all the necessary grit and pluck to tackle the most difficult and hazardous undertaking ever attempted by American aviators. No doubt it was partly because of this resourcefulness, courage and stamina that they were selected.

Of the six circumnavigators five are of pure American stock, as an are found in this country. All five are direct descendants of the early emigrants from Britain. One is a descendant of the Pilgrim Fathers who crossed on the Mayflower. Another is a descendant of Daniel Boone. Two come from fine old southern families. The fifth is a descendant of the sea captains of the Connecticut coast who commanded the tea clippers and the air had well-nigh run the gamut of human experiences before they set forth on the round-the-world flight. Their varied careers and colorful experiences had made them resourceful and had filled them with all the necessary grit and pluck to tackle the most difficult and hazardous undertaking ever attempted by American aviators. No doubt it was partly because of this resourcefulness, courage and stamina that they were selected.

Only one of the six is a naturalized American, and he, appropriately enough, is a descendant of the Vikings, the most picturesque navigators and sea rovers in all history.

Three of the six birdmen who manned the first fleet of aerial world cruises ran away from home when they were youngsters and did everything from sailing around the world before the mast and playing hazardous parts in motion picture productions to serving under Pancho Villa, the rebel-bandit of Mexico.

Smith Becomes Leader.

After the world cruiser Seattle had crashed and fallen a twisted mass of wreckage amid the mountains of an uninhabited region on the Alaskan peninsula, eliminating Maj. Frederick Martin and Sgt. Iva Harvey from the flight, Lieut. Lowell Smith became the leader of the expedition, because he happened to be the senior officer.

But all six of the remaining flying lieutenants adhere to an aerial code of free masonry that puts them on an equal footing in the light of history. So in introducing them it is only right that we should do as they have done and not stand on ceremony but merely review their previous careers in a sort of haphazard fashion.

Descendant of Daniel Boone.

Lieut. Lowell Smith, commander of the men who completed this 26,000 miles of aerial flight around the globe, is the one who is descended from Daniel Boone because he had the most of the pioneer spirit.

Although his father and mother are Californians by adoption their relatives on both sides of the family were among the pioneers who fought the Indians, built log cabins, and cut lit the clearings out of the virgin forest in what is today the state of Kentucky.

His great-grandfather was a stewart backwoodsman of the Rooseveltian type, who wore a coonskin cap, carried a long barreled flintlock, wore a horn of powder at his belt, and was the father of 17 children. Coming from such stock it is not surprising that "Silent" Smith had the stuff to enable him to pilot a squadron of airplanes on the first round-the-world flight.

Lowell H. Smith was born on October 8, 1892, at Santa Barbara, Cal. He is the son of a Seventh Day Adventist Evangelical minister who can build hydro-power plants and operate a lathe as well as he can preach the gospel. Lowell derives his mechanical aptitude from his father and his taciturn, silent disposition plus an exceptional amount of pluck, grit, and dogged determination from his mother. It is on his mother's side that he is descended from Daniel Boone.

He is the second of a family of four children, and as a child Lowell lived first in Santa Barbara, then in North Yakima and Spokane, Wash., and later in San Fernando, Cal., where the Rev. Jaspur G. Smith alternated between the pulpit and the more lucrative profession of mechanical and electrical engineering.

Typical Minister's Son.

Like a typical minister's son, Lowell became fed up with what he regarded as unfair parental severity. If ever there was a minister's son who didn't run away from home or at least long to do so he is the exception to the species that proves the rule.

"Silent" Smith enticed one of the members of his local gang to go with him when he shook the dust of San Fernando from his shoes and hooked a ride on a through freight to taste of the fleshpots of San Francisco. But his pal didn't have the sand to go through with the thing and dropped out of the scene a few days later.

Young Smith's first job was in a florist's shop. Then he juggled dishes in a lower Market street eatery for a while and afterwards pushed north into Washington where he got a job as callboy for the Northern Pacific railroad at a little town in the Cascades. When the divisional superintendent sent orders for a train to move out it was "Silent Smith's" job to go out around the town and find the engineer and fireman.

After six months of knocking about from one job to another he returned home in response to the pleas of his mother. Although he declares that he gained much valuable experience from this adventure he says that he doesn't recommend running away from home as a good plan for other boys, first because of the danger of taking the wrong road and falling in with evil companions, and second, because of the pain it causes a boy's mother.

His mother confesses that as a child he could never sit still for more than two minutes at a time. She left him at home with a friend on one occasion while she went out to make some calls. Upon her return the friend said that Lowell simply "ran her ragged." He had slipped out to the garden, pulled up most of the flowers, and then replanted them according to his own landscape gardening ideas and had also turned on hose on the house, as well as on those in the door neighbor's.

"Silent" and not inclined to be boisterous in his play, he was nevertheless the most mischievous lad in the neighborhood. Baseball and tinkering with engines were his chief pastimes, while Sunday school and girls were his pet aversions. However, he since bravely recovered from his timidity regarding the latter.

Joined Villa's Army.

After attending high school at San Fernando and wasting several years taking a business course at San Fernando academy that did not appeal to him, he suddenly broke away from school and went off into the Mojave desert, where he spent six months overhauling and operating a pumping plant. From there he went to Los Angeles and joined the army of Pancho Villa. (Turn to Page Seven, Column One.)
