

Hamilton Lauded as Statesman by John Lee Webster

American Leader Had Rare Combination of Qualities, Continental Club Members Are Told.

Alexander Hamilton had a rare combination of qualities not found combined in any other American. He was soldier, statesman, diplomat and orator and he laid the financial foundation of this government. These statements were made by John L. Webster during a luncheon talk Friday to members of the Continental Club at Hotel Fontenelle.

"Alexander Hamilton was one of the greatest men this nation has produced," Webster asserted. "He had more to do than any other man with the calling of the convention which adopted the constitution of the United States. At the age of 21 he prepared an address to the colonial congress, calling a convention to meet at Philadelphia and he was the prime mover of that convention.

"After the Virginia and New Jersey plans for a constitution had been rejected, he presented a draft and spoke five hours. He stood for a constitution that would deal with the individual citizen rather than with the states.

Constitution Experiment.

"The constitution which was adopted was not that that Hamilton wished, but he knew that it was not the time for any man to stand out when the country needed a foundation for its government."

Webster related a few pages of early history with reference to the convention in New York state, when ratification of the constitution was before the house. Hamilton announced that the convention would not adjourn until it adopted the constitution. The debate lasted six weeks and Hamilton had only 19 votes for adoption against 46 opposed, but he continued his fight until he won a majority and succeeded in getting New York state to adopt the constitution.

Commander at 19.

The speaker related that at 19 Hamilton was in command of a company of artillery and was in the battle of White Plains. General Washington, observing the discipline of Hamilton, named the young soldier as aide-de-camp with rank of lieutenant colonel.

"As secretary of the treasury Hamilton laid the solid foundation of our financial system and for that he is entitled to all credit," Webster added.

The club gave Mr. Webster a rising vote of thanks and President C. D. Robinson stated that it was one of the most interesting talks delivered before the club.

Laurel Feeders Top Cattle Market at $12.50 a Hundred

Laurel, Nov. 28.—Phil Most & Son, cattle feeders here, topped the market with a carload of well-finished Herefords when they received $12.50 a hundred pounds for 38 head, averaging 981 pounds each. Another carload of 13 head brought $11.50 a hundred pounds. The top price is the highest paid at the local shipping market for over a year and within 25 cents of the highest price paid since 1920.

They will make their home on the farm of the groom southwest of Pawnee City.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE.

Egypt protests to the league of nations against England's stand in the recent Stack killing, ordering Egyptians to pay $2,500,000 and get out of the Sudan without any hearing.

The league of nations "lays aside" Egypt's protest. Some nation in the league, a little one, sympathizing with Egypt, might demand a hearing for the Egyptians.

But that would displease England and its empire is powerful. No little nation will peep. League or no league, power, as of yore, is with the big nation.

Suppose we were in the league and some of our sweet sentimentalists, too old to go to war, demanded United States intervention in Egypt's interests. How easily we might have Europe on our hands.

Are we not our brother's keeper? Surely, but we are our American brother's keeper; the Monroe doctrine proves that. We are not the keeper of our Egyptian, Senegambian or Sudanese brother. And don't intend to have that brotherhood wished upon us.

If that be pusillanimity, make the most of it.

George Bernard Shaw declares that in the Egyptian matter England has given a death blow to the league of nations. "That's as may be." The Egyptian affair should enlighten some dull Americans as to the real character of the league and give the death blow, if it has not been already given, to any scheme for forcing this country into that league.

Who, but a dull-witted, sloppy, ill-informed sentimentalist would have this country enter a league of scheming, selfish nations that would use this country to make themselves and their aggressions secure?

They did that once when our idiot "statesmen" agreed to guarantee stolen property in the Pacific, to destroy our battleships and to weaken this nation by leaving Guam unprotected.

That mess of ideology ought to be enough for one century.

Fortunately for this country's security, President Coolidge lives in this period, not in that of the Spanish war. His mind is on modern methods, and he does not belong to the various interests that have controlled the navy and still control a good part of it.

In his own unhurried way, he will see to it that the United States does not lack preparation with him as commander-in-chief of the army and navy.

Naval and army officers most deeply and intelligently interested in an adequate air force declare that President Coolidge is as much interested as they are and listens carefully and patiently to all suggestions for air fleet protection.

A lawsuit raising interesting questions is coming. A young man named Rhineland, whose people for several generations have not worked for a living and are, therefore, called "aristocrats," married a young woman with negro blood. Her people have always worked hard; therefore she is no aristocrat. It was a terrible blow to the New York aristocrat family, but the blow is to be softened. The young man, annoyed by publicity and by the Ku Klux Klan throwing stones through his window, now sues for annulment of his marriage, saying he was deceived as to his bride's race. She told him nothing about the negro blood.

If money, wisely used, does not perform its usual function, and if the young woman in the case fights, the question of her constitutional rights might be taken to the United States supreme court. New York state legalizes marriages between Africans and whites. The young woman in this case is nearly white. What will the supreme court say about a few drops of colored blood?

A man in New York could not get a divorce on the ground that his wife had deceived him about a British or Celtic strain of blood. The court's decision as to an African strain in a state where miscegenation is not illegal will be enlightening.

Tom Lawson of Boston is back again, it is said, and will tell those that listen how to make millions in this stock boom. He can tell them also how millions can be lost in Wall street, if he chooses. One way is to fight the big fellows.

Lawson is a hard fighter; he has told some useful truths that big tricksters did not like. His "Frenzied Finance" writings probably saved many innocents from bankruptcy, although they did not save Lawson himself. Those that like a fighter would like to see Lawson come back.

But before you bet on his advice, read the opening sentence of Dr. Johnson's "Rasselas," putting the name of Lawson in place of "Rasselas, Prince of Abyssinia." Many a little lamb, if it had a crumb of sense, would keep away from Wall street now.

The Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York needs money for completion, and gets it slowly. After long beginning one-fifth of the $15,000,000 asked for is given, or promised.

A generous woman contributes $200,000, which will be spent on the nave.

It is a Protestant Episcopal cathedral, appealing to all members of that faith, which includes many men able to give the entire amount needed.

The slow giving shows that men take religions less seriously than they used to. If they really believe that getting into heaven, for rich men, is as hard as for camels to go through a needle's eye, and if they thought that building a cathedral would save them from a real hush, how that cathedral would rush up toward the sky.

But religion with many, and especially the powerful, has become a matter of habit and respectability, rather than a serious conviction. Men hand out cash for re-

TURKEY

—the land of the crescent, fez and cruel rule of Sultans. Turkey, before the Great War, had parts of its vast empire in Europe, Asia and Africa. Today the Sultan has been deposed, the empire has crumbled, and a "Nationalist State" exists.

Schools in Turkey

Turkey has long been known as the most oppressed country in the world. The poorer people have been down-trodden, burdened with unfair taxes, denied education and the better things of life. But, in spite of the old order of things, Turkey is now getting an educational system. There are a few primary and elementary schools of Constantinople and most of the villages, while going to school is supposed to be compulsory from age of six to eleven for boys and six to ten for girls.

The first day of school is considered a big event. Dressed in his holiday suit and bedecked with all the jewels and ornaments his family possesses, the youngster is proudly paraded through the streets on horseback as he goes to school.
